HISTORY OF INDIA UNDER THE TWO SOVEREIGNS OF THE HOUSE OF TAIMUR VOLUME I

NOTICE.

THE work now published occupied the attention of the late Mr Erskine, as he mentions, through many years, being pursued with that carefulness and deliberation, with that anxiety to be accurate, which characterised all his literary labours the object he had thus perseveringly in view is sufficiently explained in the following preface, which he himself prepared,-that of constructing the history of some of the most important periods in the annals of India on a wider and more comprehensive basis than the sole authority of the compilation of Feirshta, to which, almost exclusively, European writers had hitherto had recourse That more ample materials existed for the elucidation of Indian history in all its stages, --- materials even more abundant than those employed by Ferishta, -- Mr Erskine's studies made him fully aware, and his thorough acquaintance with the language of the authorities that were available enabled him to derive from them all the information they were calculated to The consequence has been the present auafford thentic record of an interesting and important period of Indian history

ł

1

The design of Mr. Erskine originally contemplated the whole of the reigns of the princes of the dynasty of Tannur in India, from the accession of Báber to the end of the sovereignty of Aurungzib, including the previous occuriences of the life of Bábei, and a general account of the Tartar tribes of Transoxiana Ample materials had been collected by him and translated for this purpose, but he had found time only for the completion of the first portion of his task, - the lives of Báber and Humáyun,-the latter including a history of Shir Shah and the Pattan princes by whom Ilumáyun was, for a season, driven from his throne The life of Báber has been in some degree anticipated by Mr. Erskine himself, in his valuable translation of that prince's autobiography, but in the present work we have the testimony of contemporary and subsequent authorities in addition to his own, and especially that of the great historian of the Mongol races, Haider Mírza, the author of the Tarìkh-e-Reshídi - a work which Mr Erskine recommends strongly for translation and publication Other authentic writers are also now for the first time made to contribute to the elucidation of the reigns of Báber and his son, and we may consider this portion of the Mohammedan government of India as fully and finally elucidated

WHEN there are already so many histories of India in the English language, it may reasonably be asked, why an attempt should be made to add another to the number

The idea of the following work suggested itself many years ago, from observing on how limited a foundation most of our general histories of India were raised, the brief but judicious abridgment of Ferishta forming, in truth, the basis of them all It seemed to me that a nation possessing such an empire as that of the Biitish in India ought to have some ampler record of the transactions of the different dynasties which preceded their own in that country The most natural and effectual means of supplying this want would certainly be a general edition of the historians of India, - a Corpus Scriptorum Historiæ Indicæ But the least reflection shows that the necessary extent of such a work, joined to the very small number of readers, whether native or European, who call for, or are likely to avail themselves of it, if completed, makes it an undertaking, useful and desirable as it may be, that must be postponed to a distant period Indeed, the ardour of British enterprise has not achieved such a collection even of the historians of our native land

The various Histories of India that have been pub-hshed have been written with valious objects The volumes of Mill, as might be expected from any production of a man of his talents, are full of valuable materials, and, in spite of the disadvantage of being devoted to a particular system, evince an extraordinary union of acuteness, industry and ingenuity But his narrative of early events is brief, and hurried over with rapidity The later productions of different able writers, however useful, and however well adapted to their object as popular compilations, have added little to the amount of what was previously known *

The History of India by the Honourable Mountstuart Elphinstone is indeed a work of a very different and much higher class The lapid sketch of the early and Hındú state of India, contained in the first volume. exhibits such a concentration of a vast mass of reading and observation into a small compass, enriched by a perfect personal knowledge of the present state of the country, its inhabitants, and their habits of thought, as is hardly to be equalled in the whole range of literature Nor are the views of the genius, character and government of the Musulmans in the subsequent part of the work, and the characters of the different agents who appear upon the stage, touched with a less masterly hand With a rare union of wide research, profound reflection, and pregnant brevity, we everywhere mark the impress of the statesman, the moralist and the scholar It will probably long continue to be the classical lustory to introduce the inquirer of every de-

^{*} It is hardly necessary to remark that the works of Professor Wilson and Sir Henry Elliot had not appeared when this was written nomination to a correct knowledge of India – Had the narrative of the transactions of the princes of the House of Tumur, much of which is drawn from new and original sources, been as minute as it is faithful and interesting the present work would never have seen the light – And yet, perhaps, the extent of narrative which it continus, is as much as the great majority of European readers may require or endine

The object of the following priges is far more humble It is to furmsh, from a comparison of us many of the original historians of India as were accessible to the author, such a narritive of public events during the reigns of the first six Emperors of the House of Taimur, from Biber to Aurengzib, is might be at once more mmute and more authentic than, so far as the author knows, his yet appeared in any Emopean language During the two first of these reigns, - those of Baber and Humáynu, - there is rather a want of continuous contemporary authorities and the desire to supply, as far as possible, the deficiencies of the ordinary histories may, by many, be thought to have led to the opposite extreme of too great detail, in the nariative now given of these reigns For the four last reigns the materials are abundant, even to superfluity, so that there is less temptation to fall into such an error

The period, commencing with the invasion of Bábei, and ending with the death of Amengzíb, was chosen as containing a very memorable portion of Indian history. The preceding periods are less perfectly known. The period that follows presents to our view the decline, and, in the end, the breaking-up of the Empire A history of the period between these two,-that of the earlier princes of the House of Taimur, containing their original entrance into the country, and the gradual progress of their arms, till the empire reached its entire and most flourishing state,-seemed to form a natural foundation for the modern history of India, when those later contests with Europeans began, which have changed the whole face of things The early transactions of the Portuguese and Dutch affected only the outskirts of the empire, those with the French and English, during the last century, affected its very centre, and, in their results, have shaken it to pieces The materials for the history of the two first periods are still chiefly contained in the languages of the East, while those of the last may be best drawn from the relations and State papers of Europeans

The author has indulged sparingly in any reflections on events, being rather desirous, by giving a faithful statement of facts, to let them speak for themselves

The volumes now offered to the public contain the reigns of Báber and Humáyun The whole life of the former was spent in camps It was a period of transition, when the Government had not yet subsided into a regular form Little progress towards settled institutions was made in the unquiet reign of his son It was not till the time of Akber that a regular attempt was made to reduce to a system some portion of the rules and customs of the country, and to combine them by the principles of a just and impartial legislation Even that great and enlightened prince had, however, many difficulties, religious and political, to encounter, and as he was, in some instances, too much in advance of his age, and in others perhaps too fautastical, and had, besides, the misfortime to have a successor whose views differed from his own, many of his regulations died with himself

Fo some readers the account of the Tartars of the Kipchak and of Moghulistan, contained in the Introduction, may seem to be too extended. But these tribes had great influence on the fortune of the founder of what has been called the Moghul I mpne, and, without a considerable knowledge of their encounstances and transactions much of the earlier portion of the history would be observe

The greater part of the volumes now published was written several years ago,—a enemistance which it may be necessary to mention, in order to explain why, in the course of the narrative, so little allusion is made to late events, such as those that have accently occured in Afghamstin, or to the works of later writers

As to the orthography of oriental words, that of Sir William Jones has in general been adopted K has however been substituted for the hard c, q is used hard before all vowels, as in quest, j is soft, as in just, ch is used as in chance, sh, as in ship — Little distinction has been made of the letters peculiar to eastern alphabets, though Kh has been generally used for the Arab khe, as in Khan, and qh for the qhain, as in Ghazi — The accent is often applied to mark a vowel as being long in a word, especially the first time it is used

The author ought not to conclude without making his acknowledgments to John Romei, Esq, for the use of a manuscript of the Tabakát-1-Akberi in his collection and to Horace Hayman Wilson, Esq, for that of the Taríkh-e-Reshídi, from which so much has been drawn For an opportunity of consulting the Kholásetul-towáríkh, he was indebted to the kindness of the late Major William Yule The other manuscripts quoted are chiefly in the possession of the author.

Bonn, May 28 1845

٥P

THE FIRST VOLUME

PRELIMINARY REMARKS

	Pago
Indian History Its three Periods	Ī
Remarkable Era when the Kingdoms of Europe and Asia assumed a more permanent form	2
The States of Europe settle into a system	ıb
Permanent Kingdoms formed in Asia	5

INTRODUCTION

Containing a general Account of the Tartars, especially of the Júji and Chaghatái Dynasties, and of the state of Transoxiaua at the accession of Báber

SECTION I.

GENERAL ACCOUNT OF THE TARTAR TRIBES

Three grand Divisions, - Manchús, Mongols or Mo-ghuls, and Túrks	9
Conquests of Chengiz Khan and the Moghuls	12
Of the Túrki Tribes, and Taimur	15
Difference resulting from the mode of settlement of the Tartars, in Tribes, or as Individuals	19

SECTION II

CHENGÍZ EHÁN

His conquests, Division of his Empire amo	ng his S	Sons	23
Their territories	-	-	24
Júji Khan gets the Desht-Kipchák -	-	-	25
Conquests of his Descendants	-	-	26
Decline and division of their Kingdom	-	-	27
Rise of the Uzbeks, - and of the Kaizáks	-	-	28

SECTION III.

CHAGHATAI KHAN

D----

73

74

76

1]

- 1b

- 1b - 75

		Page
His extensive dominions	-	35
Decline of the power of the Chaghatái Khans -	-	36
Division of their Empire into Moghulistán and Máw	erannaher	-	37
Part L. Khans of Moghulistán and Amírs of Káshgar	-	38
Toghlak Taimur and his Successors -	-	89
Invasion of Taimur	-	41
Khizer Kwája and his Sons	-	42
Yúnis Khan and his Sons	-	44
Transactions of the Khans with the Mirzas	of
Máwerannaher	-	63
Part II. Khans of Máwerannaher	-	66
Their decline and extinction	-	67
-
SECTION IV
New Túrkı Dynasty under Mír Taımur	-	69
His conquests	-	72
Shahrukh and Ulugh Beg Mírzas	_	1b
		-

HISTORY OF BÁBER

Abusaíd Mírza

Division of his dominions -

-

Succession of his son, Báber -

Umersheikh Mírza, King of Ferghána -

Rulers of the neighbouring States at this period

His death -

H1s death

BOOK FIRST

FROM BÁBER'S ACCESSION TO HIS FIRST EXPULSION FROM MÁWERANNAHER

CHAPTER L

CONQUEST AND LOSS OF SAMARKAND - LOSS AND RECOVERY OF ANDEJÁN

- A D
- 1494
 Accession of Báber
 78

 State of Ferghána, which is attacked on all sides 79

-

۲D			Page
1494	Invaders repelled	-	88
	Death of Sultan Ahmed of Samarkand -	•	89
1495	And of his Brother Sultan Mahmud Mírza -	-	92
	Revolutions of that Country		ıb
1496	Biber invades it	-	99
1497	Blockades the Capital	-	101
	Huts his army in winter quarters	-	103
	Is attacked by Sheibini Khan	-	ıb
	Takes Samarkand	-	104
	Revolt in Ferghána in favour of his brother Jehángír	-	107
1498	Biber marches to quell it	-	110
	Loses Samarkand and Andeján	-	ıb
	His distress	-	111
1499	He applies for succour to his maternal uncle, Sulta	IN
	Mahmúd Khan	-	113
	Gets possession of Marghinán	-	115
	Rising of the population of Ferghána in his favour	-	116
	Recovers Andeján	-	118
	Revolt of his Moghul Troops	-	120
	Success of Tambol	-	ıb
	His defeat	-	123
	Campaign of Kúsán	•	124
1500	Báber concludes a peace with Jehángír and Tambol	•	126

CHAPTER II.

SHEIBÁNI KHAN --- CONQUEST AND LOSS OF SAMARKAND

128
129
130
132
133
141
145
147
151
153
157
159

CHAPFER III

SUFIES I'S CONCEPST OF TASHKIND AND FERGILANA-EXICISION OF n (urn A D Page 1501 Biber visits the elder Khan 160 His mode of life. 1b 1502 Revisits the Khan 165 Arrival of the younger Khan -168 They invide Ferghana 170 Biber surprised by Tambol, and younded 172Tambol calls in Sheibrini 175 -Affair of Al hsi _ 1b Biber driven out -177 -. Ilis flight and ilanger -. -1b The Khans defeated and tal en prisoners by Sheibani, 1503 v ho conquers Tashkend 184 Tambol remains in possession of I ergh inaıb The Khans are ret at liberty 185 . Lambol attacked by Sheibini -1501 187 -Besieged in Anderin - -181 -Surrenders, and is put to death 188 Biber abaudons 1 erglina 190 . . Death of the younger Khan _ ıb Sub equent history and death of the elder Khan in 4 p 1508 ib

BOOK SECOND

UNBLE'S TRANSACTIONS IN GABUE AND MAWERANNAHER

CHAPTLR I

CONDERST OF I ABLE

Laber proces through the Hessie I	erritory	-	- 194
Hastory of Khoron Shife	•	•	- 196
Playmodily Bla	•	-	- 202
Cr the Amu	-	•	- 202
Stable computer Ilister and Kun	duz	•	- 203
It theft almetter		-	- 201

					Page
A.D	Báber joined by Khosrou's Moghuls	-	-	-	207
1504	Baber joined by Kuosiou's mognetic	-	-	-	ıb
	Submission of Khosrou -	-		_	208
	Who is deserted by his followers	-	-	-
	Báber marches against Kábul -	-	-	-	210
	Besieges the City	-	-	-	214
		-	-	-	216
	Which surrenders				217
	Description of the Kingdom of Kabul		-	-
1505	Báber's circuitous campaign to the In	ndus	-	-	223
	Affairs of Badakhshán	-	-	-	226
	Khosrou's death	-	-	-	228
	Báber takes and abandons Kilát	-	-	-	229
					231
	Báki's dismissal and death -	-	*	-
1506	Jehángır flees from Kábul -	-	-	-	ıb

CHAPTER II

JOURNEY TO AND FROM KHORÁSÁN --- KHAN MÍRZA'S REBELLION

1505	Progress of Sheibúni -	-	-	-	-	233
	He dreads the Moghuls in his	army	-	-	-	ıb
	Subdues Khwárazm -	•	-	-	-	237
	Besieges Balkh -	-	-	-	-	238
1506		-	-	•	-	239
	Death of Sultan Husein Mirza	n of Her	út	-	-	ıb
	Discord and want of spirit of	lus Son	s, the M	írzns		240
	Balklı surrenders -	-	-	-	-	241
	Báber returns home by the m	ountain-	road	-	-	243
	His Danger in the snow	-	-	-	-	244
	Treachery of Muhammed Hu			-	-	249
1507	Báber finds Kábul besteged	by the	faction	of Kl	nu
	Mirza	-	-	-	-	250
	Báber surprises the rebels	-	-	-	-	252
	Seizes the ringleaders, whom	he pard	ons	-	~	254
	Sheibáni invades and conquer	rs Khorá	isún	-	-	258
	Fate of the Mirzas -	-	-	-	-	260

CHAPTER III

CONQUEST AND LOSS OF KANDAHAR - REBELLION OF THE MOGHULS.

Affairs of Kandahár	-	-	-	-	-	261
Zulnún's early life	-	-	-	_
Repairs to the Court	of Shall	L TT.	-	`	-	262 repairs to the Court	or Sueig	a Husein	i Mirza	of He	rat	ιb
VOL. I.	9.					-0
	~~~~

CONTLNTS.

A D					Page
1505	He gets the Government of Zem	ín-dáwer	•	-	264
	And of Kandahár	-	•	-	266
	Connects himself with Badi-ez-ze	mán Mírza	-	-	269
	Hostilities with Sultan Husein	-	-	-	ıb
1506	Death of the Sultan	-	-	-	274
1507.	Zúlnún becomes Minister to his S	on -		-	275
	IIIB death	-	-	-	ıb
	Transactions of his sons with Bal	)er -	-	-	ıb
	Baber defeats them and takes Ka	ndahár	-	-	278
	Sheibáni marches to their ielief	-	-	-	279
	Alarm of Báber -	-	-	-	ıb
	Kandahár retaken by Sheibáni	-	-	-	281
1508	Baber assumes the Title of Padsh	alı or Emper	ror	-	282
	Rebellion of Búber's Moghuls -	*	-	-	283
	Quelled by his valour	-	-	-	285
	Affairs of Badakhshán	-	-	-	286
	Khan Mirza Kuig	-	-	-	288
1509	His indigent condition	-	-	-	291
	Sultan Šaíd and Mírza Haider at	Kábul	-	-	ıb
	Their reception	-	-	-	292

CHAPTER IV.

SHAH ISMAEL AND BHEIBÁNI - BÁBER IN MÁWERANNAHER

1509	Sheibáni's unsuccessful Campa	10m n.00	inst the	Knizáki	4 -	296
1510	And against the Hazáras	-			-	297
	His quarrel with Shah Ismael	of Persi	a	-	-	ıb
	Their correspondence -	-	-	-	-	298
	The Shah invades Khorásán	•	-	-	-	300
	Marches to Merv, which Sheib	úni defe	ends	-	-	301
	Battlo of Merv -	-	-	-	-	302
	Death of Sheibáni -	-		-	-	303
	Desertion of his Moglinis	-	-	-	-	305
1511	Baber crosses the mountains	•	-	-	•	306
	His views on Máwerannahei	-	-	-	-	ıb
	State of the Uzbeks -	-	-	-	-	809
	Ferghana recovered -	-	-	-	-	310
	Operations in Hissar -	-	-	-	-	312
	Baber defeats the Uzbeks	-	-	-	-	314
	Takes Bokhára and Samarkand		-	-	-	315
	Uzbeks expelled from Máweran	nnaher	-	-	-	318
	State of that country -	-	-	-	-	319
	Religious feuds -	-	-	-	•	320

xvni

λ .D						Page
1512	New Invasion of the Uzbeks	-	-	-	-	322
	Báber defeated at Kul-málek	-	-	-	-	ıb.
	Abandons Samarkand and Bol	hara	-	-	-	ıb
	Joined by Persian Auxiliaries	-	-	-	-	323
	Advances anew towards Bokha	íra	-	-	-	324
	Sack of Karshu -	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Battle of Ghazhdewán -	-	-	-	-	325
	Báber driven back to Hissár	-	-	-	-	ıb
1513	Conspiracy and revolt of the J	Moghuls	3	-	-	327
	Their tyranny in Hissár	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Famine and pestilence	-	-	-	-	328
	Moghuls expelled by Oberd Kl	han	-	-	-	329
1514	Baber driven from Musseranna	aher	-	-	-	ıb
	Returns to Kábul -	-	-	-	-	1b

CHAPTER V

ARGHÚNS IN KANDAHÁR

1514	Báber returns to Kábul	-	-	-	-	334
	Rebellion of his Moghuls que	lled	-	-	-	ıb 🗩
1515	He chastises the Hill Tribes		-	-	-	836
1519	Takes Bajour -	-	*	-	-	337
	Swad submits	-	-	-	*	338
	Affairs of Badakhshán and of	Kanda	nbár	-	-	339
	Shah Beg submits to Shah	Isma	el,—18	thrown :	into prison – –	-	-	-	-	344
	Plot to deliver him-succeed	s		-	-	345
	He turns his Arms against Si	nd	-	-	-	346
	Máh Chuchak-her story, ca	ptivity	, and es	eape	-	348
1520-	21 Baber's successive Campai	gns ag	aınst Ka	ındahár	-	352
1522	Which is surrendered by con	ventio	n -	-	-	355

CHAPTER VI

AEGHÚN CONQUEST OF SIND AND MULTÁN

SECTION I

CONQUEST OF SIND

2400000110 - j 240000		2				000
Successive Dynasties	-	-	-	-	-	358
Transactions in Sind	-	-	-	-	-	357

A D							Page
1508	Reign of Júm Firúz	-	-	-	-	-	360
	Misrule and rebellion	-	-	-	-	-	ıb
1518	Shah Beg called in	-	-	-	-	-	363
1520	He takes Tatta	-	-	-	-	-	365
	Upper Sind eeded to l	հու	-	-	-	-	366
	Revolt against the Ar	ghúns	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Usurption of Siláh-c	·d-dín,	whom	Shah	Bog def	frats
	and slays in battle	-	-		-	-	368
	Shah Beg's measures	to settle	the Ce	ountry	-	-	370
	He makes Blicker his	Capital	-	-	-	-	374
1524	His death -	-	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Charaeter -	-	-	-	-	-	ıb

SECTION II

CONQUEST OF LOWFR BIND AND MULTÁN

Revolt of the JámibShah Hasan takes Tatta380The Jám flees to Kach and returns with an army-ibIs defeatedShah Hasan sole master of SindHis desultory warfare with the BalúchesHe aims at the conquest of MultánPrevious history of that Country1525. He takes UehTreatyHis terintory extended to the Ghara-He takes DiráwelHe takes DiráwelJs invited to Multán393	1524	Accession of Shah Hasan -	-	-	-	378
The Jám flees to Kach and returns with an army- ibIs defeated		Revolt of the Jám	-	-	-	ıb
Is defeated		Shah Hasan takes Tatta -	-	-	-	380
Shah Hasan sole master of Sind1bHis desultory warfare with the Balúches382He aims at the conquest of Multán384Previous history of that Country3861525. He takes Ueh390TreatyHis territory extended to the Ghara-391392		The Jam flees to Kach and returns wi	tlı an ar	my	-	ıb
His desultory warfare with the Balúches382He aims at the conquest of Multán384Previous history of that Country3861525. He takes Ueh390TreatyHis territory extended to the Ghara-391He takes Diráwel392		Is defeated	-	-	-	381
He aims at the conquest of Multán384Previous history of that Country2861525. He takes Uch390TreatyHis territory extended to the Ghara-391He takes Diráwel392		Shah Hasan sole master of Sind	-	-	•	ıb
He aims at the conquest of Multán384Previous history of that Country2861525. He takes Uch390TreatyHis territory extended to the Ghara-391He takes Diráwel392		His desultory warfare with the Balúch	169	-	-	382
Previous history of that Country		•	-	-		384
1525. He takes Ueh390TreatyHis territory extended to the Ghara391He takes Diráwel392			-	-	-	386
He takes Diráwel 392	1525.		-	-	-	390
He takes Diráwel 392		Treaty His territory extended to the	. Ghara		-	391
Is invited to Multún		· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	-	-	-	392
		Is invited to Multán	-	-	-	393
1526 Besieges and takes the Capital 394	1526	Besieges and takes the Capital	-	-	-	394
Leaves there a Governor - who is expelled 297			elled	-	-	897
1527 Multán occupied by Báber 398	1527	Multán occupied by Báber -	-	-	-	398
Shah Hasan defeats the Khankar		Shah Hasan defeats the Khankar	-	-	-	399

¥.

BOOK THIRD.

BÁBER IN INDIA.

CHAPTER I.

INVASIONS OF INDIA -BATTLE OF PANIPAT-AND SUBVERSION OF THE LODI DYNASTY

	Early History of India	-	-	-	-	402
	Different Dynasties -	-	-	-	-	403
	The Lodis	-	-	-	-	405
1518	Reign of Snltan Ibráhím	-	-	-	-	407
	Internal troubles -	-	-	-	-	ıb
1523	Revolt of Behár-and of the	Penjáb		-	-	412
	Baber's Four Invasions of Ind		-		-	413
1524	His Transactions with Doulat	Khan a	nd Alá-	ed-dín	-	417
1525	Fifth Invasion of India	-	-	-	-	427
1526	He takes Milwat -	-	-	-	-	429
	Advances to Ambála -		-	-	-	432
	Takes Hissár Firóza -	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Battle of Panipat -	-	-	-		435
	Defeat and death of Ibráhím	-	-	-	-	437
	Báber enters Delhi and Agra	-	-	-	-	ıb
	State of India	-	-	-	-	441
	Inhabitants hostile to the Invi	nders	-	•	-	ıb
	Combination to expel them	-	-	-	-	442
	Báber's army disheartened	-	-	•-	-	444
	His address to his Council	-	-	-	-	445
	Change in his prospects	-	-	-	-	446
	He acquires Sambhal and Rat	eri	-	-	-	448
	Sends Humáyun to the Eastw	ard	-	-	-	449
	Who takes Juanpúr and Kalp	ı	-	-	-	450
	Báber acquires Biana, Dhulpi	ur and G	Juali ir	-	-	452
	Attempt on his Life -	-	-	-	-	455
	Multan submits -	-	-	-	-	456
	Uzbeks invade Khorásán – ta	եe Bill	ı	-	-	ıb
	Affair of Mír Hámeli -	-	-	-	-	458

CHAPTER II

WAR OF RANA SANGA, AND CHANDERI

Rana Sanga -	-	-	-	-	- 4	160
His dominions and	l character	-	-	-	-	ıb

						_
λ, D	Transactions with Baber					Page
		-	-	-	-	462
	Mutual recrimination -	-	-	-	-	ıb
	His views of ambition	-	-	-	-	ıb
	He supports the Western Af	gháns	-	-	-	ıb
1527	Marches to Biana -	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Is joined by Hasan Khan	-	-	-	-	463
	Báber marches to Síkri to op	pose lur	n	-	-	ıb
	Prowess of the Rájpúts	-	-	-	-	464
	Skirmish	-	-	-	-	465
	Discouragement of Báber's tr	oops	-	-	-	ıb
	He lays waste Mewát -	-	-	-	-	466
	Measures to reanimate his arr	ny	-	-	-	ıb
	He renounces the use of wine	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Remits the Tempha -	-	-	-	-	467
	Address to his Council	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Its success	-	-	-	-	468
	Progress of the Afghans in vi	arious g	uarters	-	-	469
	Báber moves onwards -	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Prepares for battle -	-	-	-	-	470
	Rájpút forces	•	-	-	-	471
	Battle of Kanwa -	-	-	-	-	472
	Báber victorious -	-	-	-	-	473
	Assumes the Title of Ghúzi	-	-	-	-	474
	Koel retaken	-	-	-	•	ıb
	Mewát reduced -	-	-	-	-	475
	Humáyun sent back to Badaki	hshún	-	-	-	476
	The lost Fowns in the Doab,	and C	ountry b	eyond t	he
	Ganges, recovered -	-	-	-	-	ıb
1528	Campaign of Chandleri	-	-	-	-	478
	Medini Rao	-	-	-	-	479
	IIIis history	-	-	-	-	480
	Revolutions of Malwa	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Rána Sánga called 11 -	-	-	-	-	ıb
	His victory and generosity	-	-	-	-	481
	Báber's proposal to Medíni ruje	ected	-	-	-	1b
	He takes the outer Town and		Chundd	L1	-	482
	Massacre of the Rhyputs	-	-	-	-	483
	Death of Rána Sínga -	-	-	-	-	484
	-

CHAPTER III.

B (BER'S CAMPAIGNS ON THE GANGES

1528	B iber marches to the East	-	-	-	-	485
	Passes the Ganges at Kanáuj	-	-	-	-	486

`,

A D							Page
1528	Disperses the army of	Baban	and Bay	rezíd	-	-	487
	Returns to Agra	-	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Transactions in Khorá	sán	-	-	-	-	489
	Invasion of the Uzbek	s	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Obeid Khan besieges I	Ierát	-	-	-	-	ıb
	The Shah defeats an U	Izbek ar	my	-	-	-	ıb
	Raises the siege of He	erát	-	-	-	-	490
	Advances to Meshhid	-	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Defeats the Uzbeks with	th great	t slaught	er	-	-	ıb
	Temporary revival of	Báber's	designs	on Sam	arkand	-	492
1529	Balúch inroads	-	-	-	-	-	495
	The Eastern Afghán	s ackno	owledge	Sultan	Mahmí	iđ
	Lodi	-	•	-	-	-	496
	Rapid increase of his		-	-	-	-	498
	Three Competitors for	the East	stern Ku	ngdom	-	-	ıb
	Báber takes the field	-	-	-	-	-	499
	Disperses the Afgháns	i	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Overruns Behár	-	-	-	-	-	500
	Affairs of Bengal	-	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Negotiations with that		-	-	-	-	503
	Báber attacks and defe	eats the	Bengal	army	-	-	504
	Submission of the Afg	gliáns	-	-	-	-	505
	Peace with Bengal	-	-	-	-	-	зþ
	Báber returns to Agra	6	-	-	-	-	507

CHAPTER IV

BÁBER'S ILLNESS, DEATH, AND CHARACTER.

Báber's health declines	-	-	-	-	508
Humíyun leaves Badakhshán	-	-	-	-	ıb
Alarm of the Inhabitants	-	-	-	-	509
Sultan Said called 1n -	-	-	-	-	ıb
Besieges Kila-Zefer -	-	-	-	-	510
Makes peace, and retures	-	-	-	-	ıb
Suleimán Mirza sent to Badal	hshán	-	-	-	511
Hnmáyun at Court -	-	-	-	-	512
Hıs illness	-	-	-	-	513
Báber's self-devotion -	-	-	-	-	ıb
Biber's dangerous illness	-	-	-	-	ıb
Intrigues in favour of Mehdi	Khwaja	-	-	-	514
His arrogance and fall	-	-	-	-	515
Biber s dying advice to his Se	ons and	Amirs	-	-	516
H1s Death - Tomb -	-	-	-	-	517
	Humíyun leaves Badakhshán Alarm of the Inhabitants Sultan Saíd called 1n - Besieges Kila-Zefer - Makes perce, and retires Suleimán Mirza sent to Badak Hnmáyun at Court - His illness Báber's self-devotion - Biber's dangerous illness Intrigues in favour of Mehdi His prrogance and fall Bíber s dying advice to his Sa	Hum'yun leaves Badakhshán - Alarm of the Inhabitants - Sultan Saíd called in - Besieges Kila-Zefer - Makes pence, and retires - Suleimán Mirza sent to Badakhshán Hnmáyun at Court - His illness - Báber's self-devotion - Biber's dangerous illness - Intrigues in favour of Mehdi Khwaja His hrrogance and fall - Bíber s dying advice to his Sons and	Hum'yun leaves Badakhshán -Alarm of the InhabitantsSultan Saíd called in -Besieges Kila-Zefer-Makes perce, and retiresSuleimán Mirza sent to BadakhshánHnmáyun at CourtHis illness-Biber's self-devotion-Biber's dangerous illness-Intrigues in favour of Mehdi KhwajaHis nrogance and fall-Bíber s dying advice to his Sons and Amirs	Hum'yun leaves BadakhshánAlarm of the Inhabitants-Sultan Saíd called inBesieges Kila-Zefer-Makes pence, and retires-Suleimán Mirza sent to Badakhshán-Hnmáyun at CourtBíber's self-devotion-Biber's dangerous illness-Intrigues in favour of Mehdi Khwaja-His nrogance and fall-Bíber s dying advice to his Sons and Amirs-	Hum'yun leaves BadakhshánAlarm of the Inhabitants-Sultan Saíd called inBesieges Kila-Zefer-Makes perce, and retires-Suleimán Mirza sent to Badakhshán-Hnmáyun at CourtBíber's self-devotionBiber's dangerous illnessHis irrogance and fallBíber s dying advice to his Sons and Amirs-

~

,

								Page
	Character	-	-	-	-	-	-	519
	Commentaries	-	-	-	-	-	-	522
	Person	-	-	-	-	-	-	525
	Children	-	-	-	-	-	-	ıb
	Dominions	-	-	-	-	-	-	526
	Their political	situatio	n—Tax	es	-	-	•	528
	Landed Proper	ty	-	-	-	-	-	529
	Revenue - Cu	stoms	Post-ho	uses	-	-	-	530
	Men of Letter	5	-	-	-	-	-	530
Appen	The T	artar Tı	nbes — t	heir Ra	ces and	Origin	-	533
39	BKhans	of Mog	hulistán		-	-	-	537
	Am	irs of K	áshghar		-	-	-	539
,,	C - Chagh	atár Khi	ns of M	aweranı	inher	-	-	540
	D-Amour	at of Bá	ber's Re	venues	-	-	-	ıb
	EBáber'	s Money	of Acc	ount	-	-	-	543

HISTORY OF INDIA.

PRELIMINARY REMARKS

WHEN THE KINGDOMS OF FUROPE AND ASIA ASSUMED A NOLT REGULAR AND PERMANENT FORM

It is the object of the following pages to present to the reader a History of the House of Taimui in India, but especially to give in some detail the history of the reigns of the first six princes of that race, from the invasion of Báber to the death of Aurengzib, including a period of nearly two centuries

The lustory of Northern India may be divided into History of three great periods The just extends from the earliest India. times to the invasion of Sultan Mahmúd of Ghazni, in the beginning of the eleventh century, and may be culled "The Hindú Period" The second reaches from Its three periods. that event to the invasion and conquest of Hindustan by Báber, in the beginning of the sixteenth century, a space of rather more than five hundred years, and may be denominated "The Early Muhaminedan Period" It includes the conquests and ascendancy of the monarchs of Ghazm, and of various other Tartar and Afghan dynasties in India The third period extends from the conquest of Báber to the present times, and exhibits to our view the sovereignty of "The House of Taimur." who have held the real or nominal power in India for the last three hundred years

VOL I

It is not intended in the present work to touch in any degree on the two first of these periods Of the first indeed, interesting and curious as in many respects it is, very little is known, and that little but imperfectly With the events of the second we are better acquainted, many native historians, some of them contemporary, having related with sufficient distinetness, if not the civil, at least the most important of the military occurrences of the times, and the valuable histories of Mr Elphinstone and others have recently made the European reader acquainted with what is most worthy of notice in both of these periods The history of much of the third period has never been written in any European language in detail; and yet a considerable acquaintance with it is perhaps necessary to such as would thoroughly understand the present state of India.

Remarkable era. It commences about thirty years after the discovery of the passage to that country by the Cape of Good Hope, at a remarkable era in the history of Man, when the governments of a great proportion of the various kingdoms both of Europe and of Asia, after numerous changes, began to settle down into that more permanent form which, on the whole, they have ever since retained, in spite of the conquests and revolutions to which many of them have been subjected.

In Europe Its States settle into a system

In Europe the close of the fifteenth and beginning of the sixteenth centuries were marked by many striking events Before that time most of the kingdoms of which it was composed, while acknowledging a king or supreme head, had been broken into a variety of independent or nearly independent states Each country was occupied with its own internal concerns There was no general system or balance of power among the kingdoms of Christendom, which might lead each to watch the events passing in the other as influencing itself Each country was a separate system Spain was the Fifth dominions more extensive than had for centuries been held by any one prince The Netherlands and Dutch provinces, Austria, the entire kingdom of Spain, with its rich and extensive American possessions, Sicily, and a great portion of Italy, fell to him by hereditary descent, in addition to which he was early in life elected Emperor of Germany The accumulation of territories so vast upon one head naturally excited the jealousy and alarm of the neighbouring Kings and States This terror almost inevitably led to the idea, as it was the surest support, of the balance of power in Europe, which then began to be acted upon, and has influenced the conduct of its governments ever since, though sometimes with great deviations, occasioned by the blindness or the passions of its princes or people

Great mental activity Various other causes excited and kept alive the mental activity for which this period was remarkable The spirit of adventure which had led to the discovery of America, and of the route to India by the Cape of Good Hope, a spirit which in its turn was fostered by these discoveries that seemed to enlarge the powers of man, by offering new worlds for their exertion, the revival of ancient learning, in some degree hastened on by the taking of Constantinople by the Turks, an event that scattered many learned Greeks over the West, where their lessons were received with eagerness by men whose minds had already been awakened to a love of knowledge, and were prepared to receive them the recent contemporaneous invention and active use of the Art of Printing, which secured and diffused all manner of knowledge, bringing it down to a lower class of society than it had yet reached, and gradually wresting it from the exclusive possession of monks and ecclesiastics, who for ages had been nearly its sole depositories, an invention which ere long, though it did not produce, secured the success of, the Reforma-

both on the side of Europe and of Asia Shah Ismáel, the founder of the Sefvi dynasty, having subdued all the smaller potentates of Irák, Azerbánján and Fárs, and conquered Khorásán, extended the Persian empire nearly to the limits which still bound it The last great northern invasion was that of the Uzbek tribes, who expelled the descendants of Taunur from Transoxiana, and settled in that country, which they continue to hold to the present day Báber, a prince, as he himself tells us, "born on the very farthest limits of the civilised world," being expelled from his hereditary dominions by this irruption and settlement, made himself master of Kábul and Kandahár, which had previously belonged to another branch of the family, and finally extended his conquests into India, which has remained, down to our own times, the real or nominal kingdom of his posterity

These changes in Asia were nearly contemporary with those which have been mentioned as taking place in Europe, and, as the political system then introduced into Europe long suffered little alteration, the Musulman countries of the East, Turkey, Persia, Uzbekistán, and India, suffered no great change for centuries, except from the extended conquests of the Emperor of India to the south, which did not immediately affect his western neighbours, and at a later period from the conquests of Náder Shah, as transient as they were alarming Kábul long remained attached to the Empire of India, as well as Kandahár, which last, however, was occasionally the battle-ground between the monarchs of Persia and Hindustan

Conquest of India by the Tartars. As the conquest of India in the sixteenth century was accomplished by Báber, himself a Tartar, by means of his Tartar chiefs and followers, and as the whole of the earlier part of his life was spent among tribes of that race, and many of the institutions of his later life affected by theirs, it is necessary, before proceeding to narrate the modents of his reign, to offer some observations on the original condition and subsequent fortunes of these sons of the desert and especially to give a short sketch of the previous history of the two great tribles of Mo_huls and U=bells, who chiefly influenced his fortunes in peace and in war, that the reader may be the better able to understand, the transactions of B der himself and his numerical the successors, as well as to comprehend, the peculiar spirit, and principles of their government.

PETIMINALA TEMARKS

INTRODUCTION

CONTAINING A GENERAL ACCOUNT OF THE TARTARS, ESPF-CIALLY OF THE JÚJI AND CHAGHATÁI D'SNASTIES, AND OF THE STATE OF TRANSONIANA AT THE ACCLSSION OF BÁBER.

SECTION FIRST

GENERAL ACCOUNT OF THE TARTAR TRIBES — THRFE GRAND DIVISIONS, MANCHUS, MONGOLS OR MOGHULS, AND TURKS — CONQUESTS OF CHENGÍZ KHAN AND THE MOGHULS — OF THE TURKI TRIBES AND TAIMUR — DIFFERENCE RESULTING FROM THE MODE OF SETTLE-MENT OF THE TARTARS IN TRIBES OR AS INDIVIDUALS

SECT I. THE countries in the south of Asia as well as of Europe have, from the remotest ages, been subject to invasions from the north, the migratory inhabitants of which, pouring forward their hordes or tribes from their native wilds, have in some instances laid waste many of the most extensive of these more genial and favoured regions, and then disappeared, and in others have conquered and permanently settled in them. These invaders, in ancient times, were chiefly the Gauls, Germans, and Scythians; but, in later ages, in Asia, the Tartar tribes alone

Under the general denomination of Tartar, a name known only since the twelfth century, European writers have comprehended the whole of those extensive tribes which range in the wide expanse of country stretching north of the Himalaya mountains, the Oxus, the Caspian, and the Black Sea, as far as the Northern Ocean, however much they may differ from each other in language or origin Memorials remain of the incursions and conquests of these nations towards the south in very early ages but their grand overflowings and permuent ascenduncy in modern times occurred immediately before and after the tenth century, when large bodies of them traversed and settled in the dominions of the Khahis, in the beginning of the thirteenth under Chengiz Khan, and in the end of the fourteenth under Amir Taimur, better known in the west as the great Tamerlane

This name of Tartar, or more properly Tatar, which we apply to these numerous migratory tribes, is unknown to themselves as a general appellation, and never properly belonged even to any considerable proportion of them It seems originally to have been the name of one division of a tribe of the race which we now, whether properly or not, distinguish as Mongols or Moghuls, and by one of those mistakes so common to foreigners, to have been erroneously applied to nearly the whole inhabitants of the north of Asia

The tribes which we include under the name of Grand Tartar consist chiefly of three great divisions or races, all differing from each other in manners, institutions, and language 1 The Tunguses and Manchús in the east of Asia, north of China 2 The Mongols, or, as they are called by the Persians and Indians, the Moghuls, who occupy chiefly the middle portion north of Tibet, nearly as far west as Terfan, and part of the desert between that and the Yaik, and 3 The Túrks, who for many centuries have possessed the large regions that extend on the west of the Mongols from the desert of Kobi, having for their southern boundary the mountains of Káshghar and Pamer, Khorásán, the Caspian and Black Sea, the Don and Wolga on the west, and Siberia on the north But some few tribes, both of Mongols and of Túrks, are to be found in the limits thus marked out as peculiarly belonging to their respective SECT I. ranges The Túrks are the most extensive and numerous of the three races *

> Each of these grand divisions is broken down into a great number of smaller tribes, generally nearly independent of each other, every one managing its own concerns, and it is not to be forgotten that though, for the sake of convenience, we designate the two former races as Tungus or Manchú, and Mongol, these general names are not used by the tribes themselves for that purpose, but each distinct tribe has its separate appellation All who speak the Túrki language, whatever be their tribe, seem, however, to acknowledge themselves as being Túrks

Their manners

These Tartar tribes, as for the convenience of possessing a general name we may continue to call the whole of them, are all pastoral, and have each their own range, within which they move from place to place with their families, flocks, and dwellings, as the heat or cold of the season, the scarcity or abundance of pasture induce them They live in tents or in movable huts, often carried in waggons, which their cattle draw from place to place, according to the movements of the tribe † Their wealth consists in their flocks of cattle, sheep, and horses Milk is their chief food, and the flesh of their flocks, but they kill their cattle sparingly and unwillingly They are little addicted to cultivate the ground, and rather despise such of their neighbours as settle to breathe the polluted air of one spot, and to live on the top of a weed, as in contempt they de-

• The Turki race occupies an important place in history Europeans in general are chiefly acquainted with the Turks of Constantinople or Turkey, who are only one branch of the great tree To distinguish the grand general race from the more limited one of the Ottomans, the former, in the following pages, are spoken of as Turks and Turki, with the u accented The usual unaccented form of the words (Turk and Turlish) is cm ployed to mark the Ottomans or Osmanlis For some further remarks on the Tartar tribes, see Appendix A † Campestres Scylbr Quorum plaustra vagas rate trahant domos — Hor.

nominate corn The eare of the children, the pre-paration of food and elothing, and, in general, all domestie employments, belong to the women The men delight in the chase, whenever the means of following it are presented Living much in the open air, on horseback, exposed to fatigue and accustomed to long marches, and in older times often exposed to the horseback, exposed to fatigue and accustomed to long marches, and in older times often exposed to the dangers of war, and habitually on the watch against surprise, their mode of hife made them hardy and bold, and gave them the habits of soldiers Their govern-ment, though not uniform, is generally patriarehal, the whole tribe is regarded as descended from the same stock, and they willingly obey the head of a particular family as their hereditary ruler But there is eon-siderable variety in the internal government of different tribes arising from ancient usages, or the character of individual chiefs Some are despotie, but in general the ehief advises with the elders or heads of the leading families as a council, though on some solemn or im-portant occasions it is usual to convene the whole tribe Private disputes are settled by the Ak-sakáls (or Grey-beards, as they are called) * men of a certain age and authority, according to ancient usage Of these three races, the most eastern, the Manchús, Manchus-about two hundred years ago conquered China, which they still continue to govern, as other tribes of the same Tungus family had already done in earlier times But the race does not seem to be at all known to the historians of Persia or India, and has had no direct influence on the fortune of these countries influence on the fortune of these countries

The second race, the Mongols or Moghuls, chiefly Mongols occupy the country that hes between the other two, and have acted a very important pait, though for a short period of time, in the history of Asia For many ages the different Tartar races or tribes in the north had

* The Turks and Afgháus call councillors in the tribe, Ak-sakals, the leading men who form a sort of white (or grey) beards.

SECT I

Chengiz

Khau Ilis conquests

1227

carried on war with each other, unknown to or unregarded by the conterminous nations, or known to their Chinese and Túrki neighbours alone, when Chengiz Khan, the chief of a small and till then unimportant tribe properly called Mongol, after a long series of struggles, such as in other instances have roused the genius and matured the talents of men destined to be conquerors, having by gallant excitions recovered the station of chief of his tribe, of which, in his youthful years he had been deprived, gradually subdued the tribes around, and subsequently extended his dominions in the Tartar waste, beyond the limits of his own lace and language Having subdued Pekin and the northern half of China, he led his Mongol hordes against the Orghurs and other Túrki tribes lying between Transoxiana and his own original country, most of whom, after severe conflicts, he compelled to acknowledge his But his empire, great and mighty as it then sway was, would not have attracted much notice in Europe, had he not, crossing the Jaxartes, followed his Tuiki enemies into the highly cultivated and, for that age of the world, civilised and refined country of Transoxiana or Mawerannaher, in which they had taken shelter among their brethren of the same race, who had long possessed the chief influence, and, since the decline of the empire of the Khalifs, held the reins of government _ in that extensive region After besieging and sacking, with relentless cruelty, the numerous rich and populous A D 1206cities with which the country of Transoxiana then abounded, he crossed the Oxus and poured the destruc tive inundation of his barbarians over Khwárazm, Bálkh, and Khorásán, ravaging on the one hand a large portion of Persia and Armenia, and on the other spreading desolation through Kandáhár and Ghazni as far as the Indus, over countries which for upwards of two centuries had been governed by rulers of Túrki extraction. Not content with this, he added the wide plains of the

Khozars and Kumans beyond the Caspian to his own SECT L overgrown dominions

On his death, his mighty empire still went on ex- Those of tending its limits, under his immediate descendants, ants who not only continued the invasion of Southern China, but mounting the Wolga and passing the Don and the Nieper, conquered the Bulgarians, Russians, and Poles, and overran Hungary, Bosnia, Dalmatia, Silesia, and Moravia, threatening Vienna itself, and spreading consternation over all the kingdoms of Christendom

The conquests of Chengiz Khan, and his immediate Excessive Moghul successors, were conducted with an exterminating cruelty and a cold contempt of human life and suffering of which history affords perhaps no other example The Moghuls employed in their armies, and used as instruments of their conquests, the Túrki and other tribes of the desert whom they had subdued But as they advanced farther from home, and left their deserts behind, the course of their march through more populous regions was marked by the burning of cities, the devistation and ruin of the country and the slaughter of all the inhabitants whom they did not carry off to sell as slaves Their uniform plan was to convert the fields into a deseit, and to leave behind them no human being that could rise on their rear, that could offer a moment's annoyance, or occasion the slightest risk to the invaders By the barbarity of their massacres, in which ige, and sex, and condition were alike disregarded, they spiead horror and dismay around them on every side, and to remote regions This habit of slaughter seems to have generated an unnatural and almost sportive thirst for blood, many harrowing instances of which are related by contemporary writers and even in later times it would appear that no tribe has made less progress in humanity and civilisation than the Mongols *

* The name of the horrible ogres of fable and romance was taken from the Oighurs, a tribe who were employed in the van of the armies that overran the east of Europe The reckless cruelty and cannabalism of cruelty

١

3

most trusty and confidential servants These, in the SECT I course of time, rose to be their chief ministers, the generals of their armies, and governors of their pro-vinces, and in the decline of the Khalifate, the principal revolutions effected in the empire, whether in the palace or the field, were conducted by them In a similar А и 390. manner, the kingdom of Ghazni came into the possession AD 1000 of Sebaktegín, a Túrki slave, whose son, Sultan Mahmúd In Ghazni. not only extended his empire to the Oxus and Caspian, but carried his victorious arms many times into the centre of India Towards the beginning of the eleventh л н. 429 A.D 1038. century the celebrated Seljúki Túiks, leaving Trans-The Seloxiana with their flocks, and being joined in their projúks gress by kindred tribes from Khorásán, advanced westward, traversing the dominions not only of the Khalif of Baghdad but of the Greek Emperor of Constantinople in Persia, They gradually made the degraded khalifs mere puppets in their hands, and settled as conquerors both in Persia and in the western provinces of Asia Minor From that tendency to division, however, so natural to the chiefs of independent tribes, they soon broke down into a number of smaller states and principalities, and the fragments into which they split, the Seljúki dynas-ties of Irán, Kermán, Damascus, Aleppo, and Iconium, as well as the Atábeks of Irák, Azerbáiján, Fárs, and Láristán, make a conspicuous figure in the history of these ages

лн 656, лд 1258 Osmanlis, 4

лп 699, л.д 1300 The Túrki ascendancy was for a time interrupted by the Moghul invasion of Chengíz Khan and his descendants, which overturned the Seljúki and other Túrki Governments, and in the end, the Khalifate of Baghdad itself But, the torrent soon passed over, and, on the runs of Seljúki principality of Iconium, Othman, a Túrki Emír, founded a new state which in process of time, spreading on every side, grew into the Ottoman empire, and which, by the extent of its dominions and its success 'a war, in spite of the early shock that it received from the arms of Taimur, has overshadowed the fame sect i of all the other Túrki monaichies, and carried the victorious crescent over a great portion not only of Asia and Africa, but of Europe itself

The conquests of Min Tannur, in the end of the Conquests of Taimur, four teenth and beginning of the fifteenth centuries, may be regarded as hiving ie-established the direct Turki government all over the countries south of the Javartes. the Cispin and the Black Sea,-Mawerannaher, Khwarizm, Khorisin, Persia, Syna and a great part of Asia Minor, besides the Afghan country, and India as far ns Della, having submitted to his yoke Since his time there has been no great Túrki invasion from the north, of the Uzthat excepted already alluded to, by which, in the age with, an area all sos, of Baber, the Inrki tribe of Uzbeks took possession of AP 1502 Mawerannaher and Balkh, and that by which Baber of Baber. hunself transferred the government of Indu from the All 932, Afghans to the Túrks

The subjection of various kingdoms of Hindustan, and, at a later period, of the Dekhan, to Túrki adventhrees, may be added to the traumphs of the race

But the influence of the Tartar invasions was not Turki Maconfined to Asia and its governments The interpret  $\frac{melukes in}{E_{cypt}}$ , and enterprising spirit of the Túrks was conspicuous wherever a certim number of individuals of their extraction was accidentally found In Africa, numbers of Imki prisoners taken by the followers of Chengiz, during the wars of that conqueror, having been purchased by the Sultans of Egypt, were embodied under the name of Mamelukes, or slaves, and trained as the body-gnards of the prince They, like all other Prætorian hands, soon discovered that by possessing the sword they possessed the government, and lcd on, m the ordinary course of ambition, they in the end deposed the ancient dynasty, raised one of their own number to the sovereign power, and for upwards of a hundred and Au 649-thirty years continued to sway the sceptic of Egypt Ab 1250-1382 VOL I C

SECT I During all that time they recluited their numbers by new purchases of slaves from the north The throne continued elective among themselves, under the single restriction that the person who filled it should be of Túrkistán The Túrki were succeeded by the Circassian Mamelukes, who pursued a similar system, till they were subdued by the Ottoman Turks But the system of a Mameluke government soon revived, and was only brought to a close in our times by the atrocious perfidy of the relentless Muhammed Ali Pasha

> Thus it appears that few races of men, at any period of the world, have acted a more distinguished part than the Túrki, who, in one form or another, for centuries ruled a great portion of the old world, and who, even at the present day, influence, directly or indirectly, the government, manners, and civilisation of mankind, from the Straits of Gibraltar to the deserts on the Yeneseí, and from the limits of Hungary and Poland to the farthest bounds of the empire of Hindustán

> These conquests, especially those of Chengíz Khan and of Taimur, produced several important changes both among the Tartar tribes themselves, and in the countries which they conquered

⁵⁷ Before the age of Chengíz, the Mongol tribes had adopted from Tibet and India the religious tenets and observances of the Shamans, according to the sect of ⁵⁸ Buddhism prevalent in these countries, while the Túrki tribes, several of which inhabited on the borders of the Arab conquests in Transoxiana, and others were surrounded by Muhammedans or established in Muhammedan countries, had in general adopted the Musulman faith Chengíz Khan and his first successors, who adhered to the old religion of their tribe, were therefore considered by their Muhammedan subjects as infidel Pagans But they too, after being settled for a generation or two in Musulman countries, adopted the prevaling faith, whereas the Moghul tribes in their own Religion of Moghuls,

and Turks

country, down to the present day. in general retain SFCT i their ancient religion

When Changiz deputed his sous or generals to govern Chengizs any of the conquered countries, -and in this policy he governwas unit ited by his successors, -he sent along with them ment in ulus or tuman, or some Moghul tribe or division of a tribe, to oversive the conquered. This policy was pursued as to the Furki population as well as every The Moghul tribe so employed received an other allotment of country, and placed themselves with then funilies and flocks in the pisture range of the tribes among whom they were sent. Though the Moghuls and Turks differ in religion and language, yet by the mentable intercourse that takes place between persons living under the same government, near to and in habits of intercourse with each other, by intermarriages, by traffic and in other ways a considerable mixture of the two rices took place, which showed itself both in their linguige and in their feitures and bodily appendance This was more particularly the case as to several of the Turki tribes The Moghinls, never having been conquered by the Tinks have in general remained more unmixed, and in the intermaringes that have taken place between the two races, their features, which are the more marked, seem to have predominated over those of the Turks The intermixture of blood was, from civil and political causes, most frequent among the chiefs and leading men of the tribes

The condition of the Tartars who emigrated to the Tartars south was much affected by the accidental mode of their settlement, whether, for example, it was made by them as individuals or in tribes, whether they settled in the country or in cities Thus their situation in Transoxiana and in Persia was considerably different from what it was in India

Whenever circumstances have allowed, the Túrks in tribes, have preserved their attachment to their original tribes

c 2

and language, their fondness for a life of freedom, and SECT L their preference of the pastoral to the agricultural state In regions not far removed from their original seats, and where there were deserts over which they could roam, as in Transoxiana, Khorásán, and Persia, they moved forward in tribes and in a body occupied the wastes and wilds that intersect these countries Ĩn this way the Túrki tribes have become the possessors of nearly the whole of the deserts or pastoral plans of Tùrkistán, Máwerannaher, and Khwárazm, as well as of Khorásán and Persia, which they enjoy to this day, together with no small portion of Asia Minor, where the Turkoman tribes range from Syria as far as Smyrna Hence too the language of the desert is difand Nice ferent from that of the cultivated country In Transoxiana, Persia, and Khorásán, the Persian, appaiently the old language of these countries, continues to be that of the cities, of the villages, and of the cultivators of the ground, as well as of trade and commerce But as the Túnks are the rulers in all these provinces, as the throne for some centuries has been filled and supported by Túrki families, as they with the mixture of a few Kurdish and Arab families are masters of the wilds, the Túrki, even in Persia, is the language not only of the desert, but of the court In such circumstances the division into Túrks and Tájiks, --- the latter the ancient agricultural and commercial population, the former the nomadic, the military and dominant race, - is in full force, and hence, throughout the Ottoman or Turkish dominions in Europe, Asia, and Africa, the Turkish, a dialect of the Túrki, is uniformly the language of the rulers, even when it happens not to be the language of the people, as in the greater proportion of the empire it is not or as individuals In India the influence of the Tartars was somewhat different From early times the Tartars had been accustomed to resort to that country not in tribes but individually, as adventmers in search of fortune, and SECT 1 many of these adventurers of Túrki race, both in Himdustan and in the Dekhrn, have risen to the greatest inhtary and political enimence, and have even been elevated to the throne by their personal talents and energy of character Some of them have transmitted their dominions to their posterity, and listory accordingly presents us with virious Turki dynasties in these countries The Turks, however, never affected to monopolise all the authority of the kingdoms which they thus obtained The natives of India, and adventurers of other tribes and countries, shared in the administration of the government and in military commands. The invasion of Tannur, who indeed entered India with immense military hordes, was only a sudden inundation that land every thing prostrate hefore it, but soon passed away Under his descendant Baber, on the contrary, the Inrks did not present themselves in tribes, but as parts of a regular army, or by individual emigration They were mixed, in the army and in the court, with Moghnls and Persians They found a country already populous, and its territories fully occupied by civilised inhibit mits, as well as by innee of conquerors of them own religion. They had none of the exterminating ferocity of Chengiz, and were not so inside as to have a wish to expel the cultivators from lands, the value of which was owing solely to their labour, and which they themselves had no desire to occupy The chiefs were rewinded with jágírs or landed estates, that is, with the government shue of the produce, the inferior followers who were not movided for in the jugit of their chief, though they always showed a preference to a military life, gradually entered into the various branches of the public service They willingly entered into the service of men of rank, rarely became merchants, hardly even artizins or tradesinen, and were averse to agricultural pursuits They claimed a superiority individually in public and private estimation as belonging to the do-SECT I minant class, but they did not herd together as a se-parate horde The different races met and mixed in affairs of government, on their private business, in commerce and trade But the foreign Musulman never entirely coalesced with the native Hindú Religion continued always to keep them widely apart in their domestic intercourse, in their amusements, their customs and their habits of thinking They were two different elements, possessed of repulsive qualities, which, however closely pressed together, never amalgamated The language both of the country and the towns reinained unchanged During the two first reigns of the new dynasty, the Túrki continued to be the language of the emperor and his Túrki giandees, but the Persian by degrees became that of the court, at the same time that a different language, the Urdú Bhasha, the language of the horde or royal camp, composed in its elements of the language of Upper Hindustán, and of some other native Indian dialects, with a large infusion of Persian, became, even more than it had hitherto been, the medium of intercourse of the many separate nations and tribes which constituted the imperial army Noi was it confined to the camp, but gradually came to be understood by the servants in the different departments of government, and by most of the chief village-officers in the whole extent of the many-tongued empire *

21

> * The period of the origin of the Hindustani language is uncertain It would seem to have begun under the earlier Turki and Afghan dy

nastics, from the same causes that made it spread under the dynasty of Baber

SECTION SECOND

-----

CHENCIT KHAN DIVIDLS THEFTSTHEFT AMONG THE SONG — THEFT TRUE TOTHS — I WW KHAN CLIS THE DESIT KHCHAK — CONQUESTS OF HIS DESCENDANTS — DECENT AND DIVISION OF THEFTS KINCDOM — FISE OF THE UZBERS AND OF THE KAIZÁKS

St CH is a very general sketch of some of the grand store in leiding distinctions of race among the windering tribes of the north of Asia, of their original position in their deserts, and of the influence exercised on their chaincter by the mode in which they after winds settled in foreign countries. It still remains to give some idea of the early history and political divisions of the Uzbeks and Western Moghuls at the period of Baber's entrance into public life.

¹ Chengiz Khan, as we have seen, was a Moghul In Chengiz the history of his progenitors we meet with that infusion of table and maricle which in ignorant times is deemed necessary to add dignity to the genealogies of illustrions men Alankawa, a virgin of the family of the chief of the Moghuls, by some undefinable intercourse with a celestral being, had three sons at a birth, from one of whom Chengiz Khan, the great hero of the race, was descended in the muth degree, and Min Tannur or Tamerlane, from another in the fourteenth *

< 4

• Miless Shajrat, pp 46-45, Abulghazi, Histoire Geneal des Ta'ars, P H e 15 The story is related with some variety of cireumstances by all the Musulman historians Abulghazi makes the lady not a virgin but a widow The vi itant is by some represented as a refulgent stream of sun-biants, by others as a man of an orange colour, with eyes of singular beauty. The date of the event,  $\lambda = 111$ , ( $\nu = 729$ ) is given in the Shajrat, but now descents are too few to fill up the space from that date till (hengizs birth SECT II

Divides his empire Chengíz Khan, at his death, left an empire that stretched from the Euxine to the Yellow Sea, and from the deserts of Mekrán to the farthest wastes of Siberia

This mighty empire he, in his lifetime, had divided among his four sons To the eldest, Júji^{*}, he assigned the Desht, or Plains of Kipchák, but that prince dying some months before his father, the allotment was made over to his son Bátu The territory of this prince comprised the country lying north of the lower course of the Sur or Jaxartes, the Sea of Aral and the Caspian, including the rich countries on the Don and Wolga and part of those on the Black Sea To the second son, Chaghátán Khan†, were assigned the wide extent of desert and pasture land between the Desht-Kipchák ou the west, and the original residence of the Moghul tribes on the east, between the Tibet mountains, the Indus, and Mekian on the south, and Siberia on the north comprehending, besides the wide range of the northern desert, the countries of Kashghar, Khoten, and the Oighurs, as far as the desert of Kobi, Ferghana, and Tashkend on the Jaxartes, the whole of Transoxiana, with Badakhshán, Bálkh, Khwárazm, Khorásán, Ghazni, Kábul, and the other conquests of Chengíz in that quarter To Oktái or Ogatái Khan, a third son, he allotted the original Moghul country, with the tribes immediately around it, and to a fourth, Túli, the possession of Khita or China

To each of these four princes a force was assigned, to enable him to rule the dominions over which he was placed This force consisted of some Ulus, or migratory hordes of Moghuls or other Tartars, which might be regarded as the standing armies of the different khans Our concern is solely with the territories and successors of the two first, Júji and Chaghatái

All the Moghul princes, in the first instance, ac-

* Called also, Chuch, Zuzi, and t Or, Jaghatan Tushi

knowledged Oktán as the head of the empire, and, SECT IL after his death, his place was supplied by election, the Grand Khan continuing to reside in the original Moghul country at Karakorum In the course of some reigns, however, the dependence of the other princes on the Grand Khan became less and less, and finally ceased entirely At what precise time this occurred in the case of the Jún and Chaghatán Khans, is not very clear In Persia, Arghún Khan about A H 690 (A D 1291) joined his own name on the public coin with that of the Gland Khan, and Kázán Khan A H 703 (A D 1304) left out the name of the Grand Khan altogether The change probably took place in the Júji and Chaghatái dominions about the same time, and the khans of these countries seem, thenceforward, to ł. have been regarded as Kliákáns oi Grand Khans, each ٢ in his own territory

The order of succession to the Khans was not strictly It was partly hereditary, partly elective uniform The Khan was always taken from the family of Chengiz, but on his death, if he happened to have a son of some talent who had assisted him in the government, the son was generally allowed to succeed, otherwise, . . the most distinguished of the brothers of the late Khan, or his uncle, or the relation who happened to have most influence in the tribe, was called to the government Minors did not succeed at the time of their fathei's death, but the election was open to them at a future 1 period, when they were of age*

I Of Júji Khan, and the Desht-Kipchák

The portion of Júji Khan, the eldest of the sons of  $J_{uji gcts}$ Chengíz, on his premature death, was transferred to the Desht-Kipchak, his son Bátu It was much enlarged by that prince in AH 624, AB 624, AB 1227

* Miless Shajrat-ul-Atrak, pp Geneal P I c 2 & c 22-25, Abulghazi Khan, Hist ot

Ł

1

¢

his celebrated expedition into the west in which he SECT II took Moscow, reduced Russia and Poland to subjection, and extended his ravages into Silesia, Hungary, Bosma, Ilis succesand Dalmatia, as far as the Adriatic. The operations of the Moghuls in their wide-extended invasions were conducted with their accustomed cruelty and barbarous contempt of human life and suffering They exterminated, as far as they could, the inhabitants of the country which they overran, and spread consternation and dismay over the remotest parts of Christendom * Bátu, on his return from this expedition, in which his brother Sheibáni had distinguished himself in a remarkable manner, made him a grant of some of the extensive provinces conquered from the Russians and other Christians, with a sufficient number of the Kuris, Naıman, Karlık, and Oighur tribes to keep them in subjection, and Orda-Itzen, another brother, made hum a present of fifteen thousand Tartar families for the same purpose but the brothers stipulated with Sheibáni, that he himself should take up his range between the territories of Bátu and Orda-Itzen, passing the summer near the Ural mountains and the Yaik river t. and the winter in the more southern countries on the Sırr and Sára-sú In addition to this, Mangu-Taimur Khan, the brother and successor of Bátu, bestowed on Behåder, Sheibáni's son, the Ak-Orda, or White horde, probably a tribe of Moghuls Hitherto the descendants of Chengiz Khan had been Pagans, but one of Bátu's successors, Uzbek Khan, having been hunself converted лн 720, A D 1320 to the Islam, introduced the Mahommedan religion among the tribes of Kipchák, which he ruled, and was so much beloved by the portion of his subjects who followed hun in adopting the Musulman religion, that they assumed his name, and from him called themselves Uzbeks He appears to have died about A H. 751

> * See D Ohsson, Histoire des † Or, Jaik Mongols, tome 1 Paris, 1824

50T4

vn 751, AD 1350

Uzbek

hbm.

On the death of Uzbek Khan, a series of civil wars sect in followed in the empire of Kipchák, ending in a general civil wars, anarchy, during which several chiefs assumed independ- and inva-ence These disorders continued down to the time of Taimur Mir Tannui, who, when he had usen to power in Transoxiana, found two iivals, Uius Khan and Toktamish Khan, both descended of Juji, contending for the dignity of Great Khan of the Kipchák Toktamish AH 777, being worsted, sought the assistance of Taimur, who, after long wars, seated him on the thione of Seráichak on the Wolga But a quarrel soon ensued between the allies, and Taimui, iaising up Taimur-Kutluk, a thud caudidate for the Khanship, entered and overran the country of Toktamish, destroyed his towns and bloke his power But Taimur-Kutluk, like Toktamish, found it necessary, in his turn, to withdraw from the alliance of Min Taimur, whom he probably found disposed to AB 797, act rather as a master than an auxiliary Mir Taimur, upon this, transferred his support to Kaúrchik, the son of that Urus whom he had humbled to place Toktamish on his throne To and his new ally, he placed in his service a powerful body of Uzbeks There were, there-. tore, at this time, in the distracted country of Kipchák, besides inferior chiefs claiming independence, three - Grand Khans, Toktamish, Taunur Kutluk, and Kaúrchik, all descended of Júji, and all of whom had successively been supported and opposed by Taimur That great conqueror's policy was to rule by sowing discord among the tribes

The family of Júji never recovered the shock which Rise of serva at then received from civil war and foreign invasion ships, Though a Grand Khan continued for some time after AH 805 to be acknowledged, his power no longer prevailed over the whole wide extent of the Desht-Kipchak Many of the heads of the remoter tribes disclaimed all superior authority, and acted for themselves Three separate Khanships were gradually formed in the west, those of

rate Khan-AD 1406

Astrakhan, Kasán, and the Krim while in the east, Kipchák became divided between the Khan of Tura and the Jacks For a time, some one of the Khans descended of Júji continued to exercise authority over the Russians, and other races as fai as Poland and 28Lithuania, 185ued his firmans as sovereign, and, when SECT 11 any quariel arose, carried his mandates into execution with a high hand Yet the Khan gradually ceased to be the same important personage that he had been The arms of the Russians even began to encroach on his dominions, now broken into separate plincipalities, and province after province was swallowed up by their the eastern division, that of the Same To contend from the Value to th extended from the Yalk to the Sirr In spite of their name of Uzbeks, deconded from Ttable The race of rising power Juji, were not descended from Uzbek Than, under whose khanship the tribe had been originally converted to the Musulman faith, but whose posterity had be The Uzw we musumen rarent we whose Posting new we come extinct. It is said that such of the tribes of beks, A 11 750, Uzbek Khan's extensive cinpire as had Joined the Khan AD 1349 in the new opinions, withdrew to the countries between the Yaik and the Sirr The Turki tribes, who divelt in Turkistán, led by their common origin and common faith, gladly united with them Such tribes only as became Muhammedans took the name of Uzbeks did not amalgamate into one tilbe, but continued in their many separate tribes as formerly * ventured to make such a journey (Manger, Arabshali, vol 1 P 373) He mentions that the Turki language was spoken with great elegance in Kipchák It 18 obvious that the * Before the Khanship of Kipchák was broken into so many parts, parcelling of a country among a and especially before the invasion of number of independent sovereigns Taimur, a good deal of trale seems or tribes, must be unfavourable to to have passed through the country the safe or casy progress of caravans Arabshah complaina that whereas formerly caravans used to travel in perfect safety from Khwarazm to or travellers the Krim, a three months' Journey, and were hospitably entertained all along their route, none, in his time,

About a century after the formation of this Uzbek SLCT II confederacy, the sceptie of the tribes descended to Abulkhair Abulkhur Khun an able and ambitious prince. In the khun course of his reign he mide himself formidable to all his neighbours. He united many new tribes to his government, and, by the vigour of his character, inled in the Desht-Kipchak with more absolute authority, and over a larger extent of territory, than any Khan had done for some generations Not content with this, All 815 he engaged in the factions of Sumukind during the An 14a1 wars that followed the death of Ulugh Beg Muza, and may be said to have placed Sultan Abusaid Marza, then a young man and a fugitive, on the throne of Máweiaunalier Abulkhair, when he retired back into his deserts, louded with booty, carried with hum a daughter of Ulugh Beg Mirzh, whom he mained

The despotie superiority of Abulkhur was so sen- scession subly felt by many chieftains of Kipchik, that several of of the Kaizak Lz them, especially some Sultans of the rice of Jun who bees governed important tribes, knowing that they were objects of his suspicion, and believing that even their lives were in danger, moved away with their tilbes from their ancient pastoral range, abundoned the Uzbek country, and seceded from his government Among these were Gerár Khan, Jam Beg Khan and others, who fled towards Moglinhstin " This secession occurred while the khanship of the Moghuls was held by Isan-bugha Khan, Yúms Khan's brother Isan-bugha received the fugitives honourably, and assigned them a * district on his western fiontier There, under his protection, they fed their flocks, free and unmolested, for scveral years †

* The Uzbek Kaizaks are carefully to be distinguished from the Don Cossacks and other Russian Cossacks, who, whatever they may originally have been, have latterly become a very mixed rice

٠.

† The land allotted to these chiefs was Bashi near Jud-Kozi, which hes on the western limit of Mo-Tar Reshids, f 57 ghuhstan Our knowledge of the geography of the desert is so imperfect, that it is difficult to assign a precise situation to almost any of the places mentioned m the annals of Moghulistan

SECT II

Fall of Abulkbair, A 11 870, A D 1465-66

Abulkhair had reigned many years as a victorious and fortunate prince, when a combination was formed, among the heads of the leading tribes in Kipchák, to humble his ambition and to set limits to his overgrown power * He met the confederates in the field with his usual bravery, but being deserted by fortune, was defeated and slain with several of his sons His defeat was followed by a separation of the tribes that had formed the Ulús of the Uzbeks Many tribes resumed their independence, others formed new connections A body of Uzbeks, to the number of twenty thousand men, migrating with their herds and flocks, joined Gerái Khan and Jani Beg, whose new confederacy soon acquired increase of strength, and speedily came to be formidable under the name of Kaizák-Uzbeks A con siderable body of Abulkhair's immediate retainers remained faithful to the family, and acknowledged Bárúj Ughlán, his eldest surviving son †, as their Khan Burga Sultan, the cousin of Abulkhair, and head of a younger and separate branch of the family, though he had been employed with distinction and in offices of high trust by Abulkhair, availing himself of the general confusion that followed his death, took possession of a portion of territory which had belonged to the Khan, an act of

* Abulghazı, P VIII cıv The power of Abulkhair seems to have received a severe shock before this from an irruption of Uz-Taimur, the Taishi of the Kalimaks, who broke into his dominions at the head of a hundred thonsand men Abulkhair having refused to submit to the terms of peace that were offered, a battle ensued, in which the Khan was defeated, several of his principal chiefs slain, and himself forced to take refuge in his castle of Saghák Being finally compelled to agree to the conditions proposed by the Tá-18h1, the Kalimak inundation again flowed back from his country, but in its return wasted the rich provinces of Turkistán, Shahrokhia, and Tashkend The Kalimáks, or Kalmuks, call their chief, Taishi, and from the terms Khan-Táishi are formed the word Contaish, by which he is generally known

+ Shah Bedágh, or Borák, the father of Sheibáni, is usually spoke of as the eldest son of Abulkhan Abulghazi here calls Baruj the eldest son I have added the quantification "surviving,' which was probably what Abulghazi meant. ingratitude that was not forgotten by the grandson of ster in Abulkhur

The Kaizik-Uzbeks under Gerar and Jam Beg. snpf Rise of the ported is they were by the Khan of the Moghinls, be-came so powerful, that Barm Ughlan, Abulkhan's son, was mable to maintain himself in the incient pastoral runge of his father Vielding therefore to necessity, he quitted the wide champing that spreads on the north towards the Yark and retard to the south, into the pluns of Turkistin, on the lower comse of the Sur and the deserts to the north of that river Here he had remaned for some years in comparative seclasion and quiet, when he learned that Yunis Khan, who now governed in Moghulistan, having been defeated in the East by the Kahmiks in a great battle, had retried before them, and with the Gi and Ulus of the Moghuls, 4" 877 consisting of 60,000 fimilies, had entered Turkistan, 73 and taken up his winter-quarters at Kara-Tuk ir on the Seihnn or Juxartes Barny, burning with indignation at the protection ifforded, first by Isanbugha, and now by his brother Ynnis Ichan, to the Kaizák-Uzbeks, whom he regarded as refractory und rebelhous subjects, resolved to gratify his revenge by beating up the quaters of the Moghuls

Having tiken his measures with the greatest skill Baruj surand secrecy, he set out at the head of a body of twenty price he mis han, thousand men, and by a sudden match completely suiprised the encomponent of the Moghuls It happened that the whole of their men had that morning gone across the Seihun, which was frozen over, to enjoy a grand hunting party Bárn consequently found the camp quite undefended, and his people instantly began to drive off the flocks, and to seize and secure the property thus presented on every hand to their rapacity When the alarming intelligence of this most unexpected attack was brought to the Moghul Khan, without waiting to collect his men, who were scattered in every direction over the country, he hastened to recross the river on the ice He was at that moment accompanied by only six of his men, who bore the grand standard He had along with him the great trumpet, which it seems none could sound like himself As he drew near SECT IL the camp, he sounded a blast, by which his friends at once knew that the Khan was at hand The Mogliul women, encouraged by the well-known sound, rose upon the intruders with the spirit that belongs to their race, and flew upon such of the men as had entered their tents, slaying or making thein prisoners The grand standard too, appearing in sight, no doubt remained that the Khan was approaching The assailants, who were dispersed in all quarters in search of booty, thus attacked by the women within the camp, and expecting the more formidable onset of the approaching Moghuls from without, were seized with a panic Bárúj Ugh-lán himself now attempted to mount his hoise and to escape, but was stopped and made prisoner by a but is defeated and slain groom, assisted by some female servants The Khan, on coming up, caused his head to be struck off, and raised on the point of a spear Of the twenty thousand Uzbeks who had entered the camp, few escaped Next day the Khan, pursuing his advantage, hastened to crush the remaining adherents of the family of Abulk-han, who, confounded by this new and unforeseen ca-lamity, unable to resist, were entirely bloken and seattered abroad, insomuch that a great proportion of them, compelled altogether to abandon the desert, re tued into Mawerannaher *

T

Shuhl Reg leaves the de ert Among those who then abandoned the desert was a man destined ere long to acquire a great name in the lustory of the times Shahi Beg, or Sheibáni, was the grandson of Abulkhair Khan by that prince's eldest son Shah Bidágh Sultan After Bárúj's disaster, he hin-

gered for some time in the now inhospitable wilds and SECT IL wastes of his forefathers, subjected to extreme misery, from hardships of every description, but at length, seeing no hope of effecting anything in the old domi-nions of his family, he found himself compelled to abuidon them, and accompanied by a few faithful adherents, was one of those who repured to Samarkand, which was then governed by Sultan Ahmed Mirza, there to await some fay ourable turn of fortune *

By the run of the old Uzbeks the new confederacy The Kalof Uzbek-Kaizák or Kaizák Uzbeks became the ruling power in the eastern district of Kipchák As long as Gerai Khan lived he always retained the chief power, Gerail. and on his death his authority descended to his son Berenduk Khan, who continued to reign for several Berenduk years But the influence of Kásim Beg, the son of that Jani Beg who had accompanied Gerái in the original secession, gradually extending itself among the tribes, Berendúk, finding at last that he had little left but the name of Khan, retired to Samarkand Kásim Beg Kasim Beg Khan, pursuing his advantage, became more powerful than Abulkhair had been, extended his power over nearly the whole Desht, and especially over the range which had formerly belonged to that prince and the elder Uzbeks, and is said to have had at his command an army of a million of men But these events belong to a later period

When, in consequence of the ruin of the Elder rolitical Uzbeks, Sheibáni abandoned the desert, an event that State of the Desht, preceded by a few years the birth of Báber, the Grand Khanship of Kipchák was divided into several separate states The Khans of Krim maintained their independence The kingdoms of Kásán and Astrakhán had already begun to decline under the growing force of the Russians The older branch of the Uzbeks had hardly

^{*} Tar Reshídi, f 118

SECT II a political existence, while the new confederation of the Kaizák Uzbeks was in all the vigour of youth, and even already had attained an extraordinary degree of strength Their territory, besides the eastern parts of the desert of Kipchák reaching westward to the Yaik, included a portion of the western range of Moghulistán

The language of most of the tribes of Kipchák, and in particular of the Uzbeks, was the Túrki *

* The authorities for the history of the Khans of Kipchák are Abulghazi, parts vii, viii, Miles's Shajrat, pp 220-241, Taríkh Abulkhair Kháni, Manger, Arabshah, vol 1 p 367, Alem-arái Abási, near the beginning, Tar Reshídi, ff 57 68, 69, D Herbelot, art Abusaid, Degaignes, Hist des Huns, tom iv p 434, Petis de la Croix, Hist de Genghis-can p 510

SECTION THIRD

11 Of Chaohot Khan - his extensive Dominions

DICINE OF 703 INVELOF THE CHACHATAL MRANS --- DIVISION OF THER AMERICANTO MOBILISTAN AND MANDAINABILS

The dominions usigned by Chengiz to his second son sper me Chighitn hhin were very extensive, and consisted of Chighaidis countries differing from each other in every particulin dominion« The great northern pastoral range beyond the Sur 1 and Kishghur, of several months' journey, was entirely a townless vaste, full of deserts, but interspersed too with lakes and rivers viried with hill and dale, and with plans and meadows, which in the spring and summer were covered with the most beautiful flowers and plants, and in these scisons the climite of the desert was peculiarly delightful, but the extreme cold of the winter compelled the roving inhabituits, during that sensor to repar to the more southern and sheltered districts 2 Käshghar and Yarkend were in a middle state between the deserts of the north and the wealth and population of the south Though abounding in wilds, they possessed some considerable towns, such as Káshghar, Yárkend, Khoten, Aksu, Terfán, &c 3 The countries inimediately north of the Sin or Jaxartes, as well as those as far south as the Hundá-Kúsh and Hazára mountains, Táshkend, Samarkand, Bokhára, Bálkh, and others, were rich and civilised kingdoms, abounding in cultivated fields and flourishing cities The n 2

held together by an able and powerful hand, and the SECT III custom of the Moghul Khans, according to which they allotted particular tribes or districts to each of their children, was calculated still farther to favour this tendency to disunion

For many years, however, the vigour imparted to the government by the genius of Chengiz Khan continued to operate Chaghatái, his son, resided chiefly in the desert at his own head-quarters of Bish-bahgh, and sometimes with his brother Oktái at Karakorum Much of the business of government was conducted by the Minister Káráchár-Nevián or Nulán, by whose counsel later historians affirm that Chengiz, in his will, directed his son to be entirely guided The immediate successors of Chaghatái continued to reside chiefly in the desert, but the ambition and discord so common among Asiatic, and among all princes, were not long of appearing Within a century after Chaghatái's death, it had become much the custom for the Khans, instead of living in the desert among the tribes, to visit and linger in the rich and populous countries on the Sur and the Amu, where they appear at last to have fallen into a state of thraldom in the hands of their ministers

Down to the first Isan-bugha-Khan*, in spite of Division of some disputes and civil wars, we find no distinct trace the khan of a double succession in the Chaghatái dynasty He, He, H 721 we are told, was called from Mawerannaher, where he * D. 1821 then reigned, by the inhabitants of Kashgar, Yarkend, Alátásh, and by the Oighurs, who found no one among them of the posterity of Chaghatái Khan, who might fill the throne which was then vacant This certainly

p 3

* In the Taríkh Reshidi he is called Ais, or Isan-bugha, in the Shajrat, p 378, and by Price (Mohammedan History, vol 111 p 7), following the Kholaset-ul-Akhbar, II, or Ail Khwaja, by Sherfeddin,

, n

Petis's transl, tom 1 p 26, Aimal. and by Abulghazi, "Aimal Khwaja, who reigned in Mawerannaher under the title of Isan-bugha Khan," pt y c 1 & 5 See also the note of the mtelligent English translator, p. 167

SECT III. looks as if a division had already taken place, and as if, even then, different Khans had been acknowledged khans of in different countries However that may be, from Moghulisthis time forward, we find the Grand Khanship of the and of Má-Chaghatán Khans broken up, and two rival or at least werannaseparate Khans, the one of whom governed in the country of the Moghuls and Káshgar, the other m Máwerannaher The latter, who reigned in a civilised country that produced so many able writers, have been noticed by all the general historians of Persia, and a very short notice of them will suffice The former, on the contrary, for a knowledge of whom we are almost entnely indebted to Mirza Haider, who was himself descended from them, have been nearly unknown, and a fuller account of their annals may be allowed.

> Part First -- KHANS OF MOGHULISTÁN AND AMÍRS OF KÁSHGHAR. --THEFIR SUCCESSION --- HISTORY OF TUNIS KHAN AND HIS SONS ---TRANSACTIONS OF THE KHANS WITH THE THE MIRZAS OF MAWER ANNAHER.

ISAN-BUGHA KHAN did not survive many years his election as Grand Khan of the Moghuls * Having died without issue, and none of the family of Chaghatái A II 721---being left in Moghulistán, as the tribes of the desert л p 1321 still disdained to be subject to the titular Khans set up and pulled down at the will of a minister in Transoxiana, discord and disorder universally prevailed The usual evils of anarchy were soon keenly felt and loudly deplored But the men of the desert refused to acknowledge as Khákán any but a descendant of Chaghatái, and none of the race was to be found.

> * Isan-bugha seems to have been called from Mawerannaher about A H 721, and to have reigned in Moghnlistan till about A II 730, but the chronology of the times is very uncertain, tán,

her

153Dbugha

Khan.

730

-1330

Interregnum

SECT III. seck out Shiráwal, and to investigate the alleged story of Mánselik's pregnancy; commanding him, if her issue had proved a son, to steal him away, and bring him off The Amír gave his envoy three hundred goats, that he might live upon their milk in his dreary pilgrimage, or, if reduced to necessity, kill them for his support His messenger had ranged all over Moghulistán, without having discovered the man of whom he was in quest, and his flock was reduced to a single goat, when, in a sequestered district, he fortunately reached the encamp ment of Shiráwal He found that Mánselik's child by the Khan had proved a son, and that since then she had had another by her new husband The Khan's son, who must by this time have reached his eighteenth year, he contrived to steal away, and carry to Aksú On his way to that city, the precious youth, in passing a narrow mountain road, slipped down a precipice of ice, from which, with much toil and danger, he was at length extricated, and delivered to Yúlaji By him he was speedily proclaimed Khan, and was joyfully ac-knowledged in Moghulistán or Jetteh, as well as in Káshghar, by the style of Toghlak-Taimur Khan who is proclaimed Khan

Khan A 11 748. A D 1347 Becomes a Moslem, A 11 754 A D 1353 A 11 761 --3 A D 1360 --2

The new Khan, some years after, became a convert to the Musulman faith, which he succeeded in introducing into a part of his dominions He twice invaded and overran Máwerannaher, in which he established his son Elías Khan On the death of Yúlaji, to whom he owed the masnad, and who, as Uhís begi, had exercised much of the authority of the government, Toghlak-Taimur, from gratitude or policy, bestowed the father's office on his son Amír Khodáidád, then only seven years of age Against this nomination Kamreddín, a younger brother of Yúlaji, remonstrated, claiming the office as belonging of right to him and not to his nephew, by the usages of the Moghuls The Khan persisted in supporting his appointment, as it had been made, though he acknowledged, that, had the claim been earlier preferred, it would not have been rejected Kamreddín, compelled sect III. to conceal his indignation, inwardly brooded over his revenge

Toghlak-Taimur Khan, who died soon after, was Is sucsucceeded by his son Elias Khwája Khan, who was at Eliás that time conducting the war in Transoxiana, where havaia he was opposed by a combination of cluefs of the coun-  $\frac{11}{A_{\rm P}}$  1364 try, headed by Mir Husein and by the illustrious Mir The Khan, after combating the confederacy Taimur with various success, was at last defeated and compelled to take refuge in the desert of Jetteh, where, after a short reign of about two years, he was basely assassmated by Kamreddín, who in one day put to death eighteen males of the family of the Khan, resolved, if of Kamredpossible, to exterminate the very race after which, din. though not a descendant of Chaghatán or of Chengiz, he assumed the style of Khan, and the government of ., the country *

These violent proceedings were viewed with horror Division of Ŀ and alarm by the Amirs of the Moghuls, who had an the Moghul hereditary reverence for the family of the great conqueror. Discoid followed Many of the Moghul tribes refused to acknowledge the usurper, and others were even led to join Mír Taimur, when that warrior, after a long and varied course of discomfiture and success, having at length overcome all his early enemies and reduced Transoxiana under his power, made six expe- Invasions 5 ditions into the Jetteh country against Kamreddin † of Taimur He overran both Moghulistán and Káshghar to then 12

* Sherfeddin, vol 1 pp 1-26, Miless Shajrat, pp 378-380, Abulghazi, pt. v c. v , Deguignes, vol 1 p 317

t Sherfeddin, vol. 1 pp 220-364, Tar Resh ff 28-41, Abulghazi, pt. v c v The Deslit, or Desert, of Jetteli, is often mentioned in the history of the Persians and Tartars as late as the time of Taimur, and the name is applied to the country north of Ferghana and Kashghar, in that age inhabited chiefly by the Moghuls. See Zefernáma, pasam The name, which was probably derived from that of the Getæ and Messagetæ, who mhabited the country in ancient times, was retained probably long after these tribes had left it. It has been

A n 765

Usurpation

A 11 768 --- 794 л D 1367 Death of Kamreddín Story of Khizer

Khwája,

3

who becomes Khan л н 791 A.D 1389

farthest limits, and in the last campaign, Kamreddín, SECT III his armies having been routed and himself pursued over mountains and in forests like a wild beast, worn out with fatigue and disease, seems to have perished in a savage corner of the desert, where he had concealed himself, accompanied by only two attendants

Some tune before Amir Khodáidád was thus relieved from his powerful rival, he had gone in search of a lineal descendant of Chaghatái Khan, whom he might raise to the throne of the Khans, and in whose name he might govern the country IIIs story, which in some respects resembled that told by his father Yúlan in nearly similar circumstances, was, that when Krimeddín put to death the family of the Khans, there was one son of Toghlak-Tamur who was still at the bus Amír Khodáidad, aided by his mother, had concerted the child in Káshghar In vain, it was said, did the usurper use every means to discover the boy, who, when twelve years of age, was conveyed to the hill-country between Káshghar and Badakhshán, then to the hills of Khoten, and finally to Sátigh-Oighur and Lob-Kánik, far in the east, where he remained for twelve years more When Kamreddin's power was on the wane, the young man was brought back, was laised to the Khanship by Amír Khodáidád, under the style of Khizer Khwaja Khan, and acknowledged by many of the tribes After contending bravely against Taunur in the field, the Khan was fortunate enough to make peace with that conqueror, and this pacification he consolidated by giving Taimui his daughter in marriage *

made a question whether the Jats, so widely extended over the Penjab, on the banks of the Indus, and in other parts of India, are descended of them

* Deguignes, in his chapter entitled "Les Mogols de Kashgar,' after mentioning Toghlak-Tammir and his son Ehas Khwaja, and that Ishodinidad placed Ishizer Ishwaja on the throne, adds " Les Rois de ce pays, descendent de ce dermer, mais leur histoire, et meme leurs nomis, ne nons sont pas connus." Hist des Huns, tonic iv p 337 D Herbelot is equally at a loss The Khod adad, while he affected to restore the ancient SLCT III line, did not neglect to retain the real power of the Power of government He clauned, under various grants to hun- the masself and his uncestors, twelve privileges, which transferred berl. to him the entire direction of affinis. By these he was constituted Hereditiry Ulús-begi, or Director of the Tribe with precedence over all others, he could nomunte Amurs or Communders of a Thousand, and dismiss them, without referring to the Khan, he was not to be luble to pum-hment till he had committed and been convicted of nine cipital offenees, and, finally, no order or firm in was to be valid to which he did not affix his scal that of the Khan being to be afterwards placed above it. In this manner the Khim was as much as result reduced to be a cypler in the hands of his inster, and khod adad boasted that, in his long reign F. muety years, he had made six Grand Khans * Khizer Khwaa Khan was succeeded as Grand Khan by his son Multimmed Khen, and he by his son Shir Multunined Khan The Litter veirs of this last prince hammed were disturbed by the unbition of his nephew Sultan Weis He having fled from court, and having collected in the desert? band of adventurous binditti, curied on wi h in some measure to supply this deficiency in the littory of a race Intimately connected with Halkr, has perhaps made the account of the Ishans of the Moghuls, and the Amírs of Ivashghar, in this Introduction, extend farther thin was strictly neces rry. The materials are chiefly drawn from the Lard In Rohidi of Mirza Huder Doghlut, who founded his narrative on the oral traditions of the Monhuls which he carefully collected, and in the latter partion of the history on the information of his father and nucle, who were descended of the Amírs of Kashghar, and, by the female line, of the Ishans of Monhulistin The contemporary history of their times and of his own is extremely valuable See Appendix B

Muhammel Khan Shir Mu-Khan Sultan Wels Khan

۷,

* The e Grand Ishans were, 1 Muzer Maya, 2 Shuman Johan, 3 Nakhsh Jehan, 4 Muhammed Khun, 5 Shir Muhammed, and 6 Weis Khan Tar Resh f 50 The second, third, and fourth were sous of Ishizer Ishwaya, the second and third are not mentioned in the regular succession of the Ishans They seem to have died before their father, in whose lifetime they may have possessed separate governments or khauships, or they may have been associated with him in the general government

SECT III. a predatory war with his uncle, on whose death he was elected Grand Khan Being a prince of great energy, he assumed the management of his own affairs, and was not reconciled to Mír Khodáidád, who had adhered to his uncle. This quarrel with the overbearing Ulús-begi, seems to have made a permanent rupture in the Moghul tribe Khodáidád, who had dependent on him at least twenty-four thousand families, finding himself hard pressed, called in Ulugh Beg Mirza to his aid from Samarkand The allies were unable, with their united forces, to make any impression on the grand tribe, but Káshghar was delivered up to the Mirza by treachery, and continued in his possession about fourteen years.*

л p 1418 or 1421 His death , disputed succession

$

ł

Yunis Khan expelled by Isan bugha,

In the course of the wars arising out of Ulugh Beg's invasion, Weis Khan was accidentally slain by an arrow discharged by one of his own men His death was fol, lowed by new disturbances and dissensions He had left two sons, Yúnis Khan and Isan-bugha Khan, the formei the maternal grandfather of the emperor Báber, but then only thirteen years of age It was probably a misfortune to Yúnis Khan that his mother was not a Chaghatái Moghul, but the daughter of an Amír of Kipchák Parties were formed, some of the tribes adhering to the one brother, and some to the other The great majority, however, favoured the younger of the brothers, and Yúnis Khan, though supported by Mír Khodáidád, found himself compelled to abandon Moghulistán He was accompanied by thirty thousand families of Moghuls, under Irazan, a beg of the Tumán of the Khirás who were attached to Mír Khodáidád As an clder sister of Yúnis Khan had some time before been betrothed to Abdalázíz Mírza, the son of Ulugh Beg, the two friendly chiefs, relying on this connec-

* Tar Resh pp 50 --- 55 Khodatadad at the age of ninetystven (lunar years) made the pilgrimage of Mecca, and died at Medina in or after A 11 850 - A n 1446 tion, carried him to the territory of Simarkand, to sier m solicit assistance from Uhigh Beg, while Ism-bugha Ich in and his adherents remained in possession of the desert

Ulugh Beg heard, and not without alarm, of the Fate of his adherents approach of a minierous and timultuous host, whose incestors had so often overrun the rich plants of Transoxima Headvineed as far as Dizik, north of Simarkind, to witch their movements and met them with every profession of friendship and of readmess to e-poise their cluse Jerlous however, of a power which might so casily be turned to his rum and to that of his country, he determined to deprive them of the incurs of muring him For this purpose he arranged that the Moghuls should all be introduced into the costle of Dry ik in separate households, that their names might be regularly inrolled, so as to admit of their being properly furnished with provisions and pay. As they entered the castle without any suspicion, in small numbers and in succession the chiefs were put to death and all the others made prisoners, and scattered over the country Yums Khan, with a fifth part of the spoil, was sent to Shahrukh Mirza, the fourth son of Lamur, who then reigned in Khornson - The Muza, with the generosity of a refined and cultivated mind, pluced him under the care of Moul in Sherfeddin Ali Shn 171, the celebrated historian of Taimur, and one of the most emment moralists and poets of his age In his house Yums Khan remained at Yezd for twelve years, in useful retirement, improving himself in every liberal study. To him many of the Moulána's verses are addressed The misfortune of the Moghuls, and the massicre of so many chiefs, with the dispersion of their tribe, formed an era long remembered among them A II 832 as "the calamity of Irazan " * A n 1428-9

* Biber's Mem p 11, Tir Resh ff 55, 54

SECT 111

lsan-bugha, Khan of Moghulistán Meanwhile Isan-bugha Khan, the younger brother and successful rival of Yúnis Khan, supported by the principal tribes of the Moghuls, was acknowledged, though still a boy, over the wide extent of the Chaghatái desert. When this power was somewhat settled, Mír Syed Ah, the grandson of Khodáidáid and who had sided with the Khan, asked and received his permission to recover his family government of Káshghar from the hands of the generals of Ulugh-Beg IIe was a man of great energy, who had adopted a different line of policy from his grandfather, having joined Sultan Weis when he roamed as a brigand in the desert, and married his sister. The efforts of Mír Syed Ah, in the course of three brilliant campaigns, were crowned with success, and he became master of Káshghar and its territory

Separation of the Moghul Tribes, The extreme youth of Isan-bugha Khan for some time did not admit of his taking much share in public affairs, but, as he grew up, an act of violence as cruel as it was imprudent, - the assassination of Taimur Oighur, a chief of note, the effect of some party intrigue,spread universal horror and disgust among his adherents With one consent the tribes abandoned him. Mir Syed Ah, his faithful friend, on hearing of his danger, hurried from Káshghar, and conveyed him from Moghulistán to Aksu, treating him with every mark of honour and respect Meanwhile the tribes, no longer bound by one common tie, dispersed in all directions, each acting in-dependently for itself Some bent their course towards the Kalımáks on the cast, others went westward to the frontier of Kipchák, one body even joined Abulkhair Khan, the potent ruler of the Uzbeks, who at that period still held the deserts from the Violets, who at that Some chiefs built forts on the borders of Andeján, Tur-kistán and Seirám, and commenced a regular system of predatory incursions into these flourishing provinces The Konchi Amírs, and a few others, continued to wander as before in the deserts of Moghulistán. All said, having in the course of his successful wars con-SECT III quered Khorásán, took up his residence at Herát Isanbugha, encouraged by his absence from Samarkand, renews his again entered his territories, invaded Andeján with a powerful force, and laid siege to the capital of that So numerous was his army that he is said to name have inclosed the city with a triple line of troops, and to have run mines at once on every side of it The town was taken, but the governor retured into the citadel, where he was soon glad to conclude a capitulation, by which he paid a heavy contribution for his safety The Khan, after visiting the adjoining country, returned to his own deserts, but loaded with treasure, and driving multitudes of captives before him " Down to the present day," says Haider Mirza, "many of the descendants of the people who were then made prisoners and carried off are still to be found in Kashghar, and are become perfect Moghuls "*

Abusald sets up ٩. Yunis.

The news of this invasion was most unwelcome to Abusaíd, who was then in Khorásán preparing for an expedition against Irák He was at a loss in what manner to deal with the Khan If he were to advance into Moghulistán, he knew that his enemy, instead of meeting him in the field, would retreat into the most remote parts of the country, where it was impossible for the Sultan with his army to follow him; and that no sooner should he have commenced his retreat, than the Khan would follow close on his track, surround lum with his swarms of horse, harass him in every march, carry off his stragglers and baggage, and disappear when he turned round to bring him to action Abusaíd, eager as he was to march for Irák, could not leave behind so troublesome and so dangerous an enemy

In this exigency the Sultan resolved to secure his inroads

own dominions by giving Isan-bugha employment at srcr in home, and to ruse up against him, among his own subjects a rivil or master Vinus Khan, the elder brother of Isun-bughn after the death of Moulana Sherefeddin All had left Yozal, and travelled first to Tabriz, and attenuards to Shuriz, where for about fifteen years he remuned in the service, first of Ibrahun Sultan Mirza, and then of Abdulla Mirza, the son and grandson of Sult in Shahrukh Abus id now invited him to Herat, that he night set him up as Khan of the Moghuls, trusting that though eight and twenty years had elapsed since he left Moghulistin, such of the chiefs of tribes as were on bid terms with Isin-bughi would be glad to join his elder brother and that thus a diversion would be produced, which could not full to be favourable to the Mirzy's interests He probably did not wish either brother to gain a decided ascendency over the other It might be more convenient for his views that Moghulistan should be districted by parties, and kept in a state of combustion and weakness *

When Yums arrived at Herát, he was received and who comes entertained with great inaginficence by Sultan Abusaid, who acknowledged hum as Grand Khan of the Moghuls, and entered into a treaty with him in that capacity A grand festival was held on the occasion, in a stately kiosk or summer-palace in the Bigh i-Zaghán, where the Khan was introduced with much ceremony, and seated on a throne The Sultan then addressed him in a long speech, in which he is said to have explained his views without disguise. He observed that when the great Taimur conquered the Khan of the Moghuls, many of his Amírs advised him to put an end to the dynasty of the Khans that Taimur, however, seeing that some were partial to the old system, and having no wish to destroy it, raised Syurghatinish to the

* Tar Resh ff 59-60, Baber, p 11

49

Khanship, issuing all firmans in his name, but keeping SECT III him entirely in his power, that on his death, Mahmúd Khan was made Khan in his place *, that down to the time of Ulugh Beg Mirza, there continued to be a Khan, but that his power was merely nominal that, at this last period, the Khalifs and Khans who claimed superiority over Taimur Beg's family became extinct, and that now the Mirza was altogether independent, that he had called Yúnis Khan from a low estate to make him His agreement with a prince, that the Khan must however renounce the Abusaíd old pretensions of the family, must call himself his friend, and comport himself as such, and that in future, the sovereign mandates should be issued in the dominions of the Sultan in his own name, and in the name of his descendants To these conditions Yúnis agreed, and confirmed them with an oath, from this time therefore the Mirzas of Transoxiana were independent of the Chaghatái Khans in form, as they had long been in reality All the Moghuls who were scattered over the Sultan's territories were now commanded to join Yúnis Khan, who soon after set out to recover his kingdom

His character Yúnis Khan had now reached the age of forty[†], but, though a man of talents, the training which he had received in the last twenty-eight years of his life, while it made him an amiable and learned man, and earned

* Tar Resh ff 58, 59 123 The author of the Shajrat gives us the same information "On the death of Syoorghunumush Khan, the great Ameer Timoor raised to the throne his son, Sultan Mahmood, and his name was written at the head of state-papers as long as the great Timoor lived, and to the period when Timoor departed this life, at the town of Otrar, on his expedition against Khutai, the Khani or sovereignity of Sultan Mahmood was indisputed and independent. Colonel Miles's Shajrat, p 383 The account of the descendants of Chengiz Khan in the Shajrat, being taken from Ulugh Beg Mirza's work on the four Ulús or tribes, closes with Sultan Mahmud The Tar Resh f 123, informs us, that these khans were styled emperors (padsháh), but were mere prisoners It is to be noted, that all the khans alluded to by Abusaíd were those of Mawerannaher, not of Moghulistán

† H18 age was forty one lunar years for hun the title of Ustid, or Doctor, in the refined srer m society of Shinaz, was not equally fitted to make him popular or happy among the inderangers of the desert On entering Moghulistán, he was joined by several lie re entubes who were disaflected to his brother, and especially desert by Mir Kernn-Beidi, who was a Doghlat, and by the Konchi and Begchak Moghuls To strengthen his interest he married Ais-doulat Beguin, the daughter of the Chief of the Kenehi Tumán, and the grandmother of Báber * Ilis followers soon formed a considerable body, but then elucis had for so many years been accustomed to act for themselves as independent, that they yielded but a very imperfect obedience to their new ruler Unable to command, he was compelled to use every ait of conciliation, and to work upon them by such means as were in his power

The two first years of his new reign present a varied ins attempt scene of success and disaster Encouraged by the numbers who joined his standard, he ventured, in the second year after his return, to advance against Káshgar, which was held by Amír Syed Ah, an able and popular prince, who, as we have seen, had adhered to his rival, but was now aged and unable to sit on horseback Amin Syed shut hunself up in the town, which Yims besieged Isan-bugha, who was then at Yuldúz, the farthest eastern extremity of his dominions, on heating of this attempt, collected his forces, and set out with sixty thousand men to the relief of the Amir Such was his speed, that in eleven days he arrived, but attended by only six thousand, all the rest having fillen behind He was joined by the Amir of Káshghar, with thirty thousand of his followers A desperate

 Ais-doulat Beguin was the daughter of Shir Haji Beg, the greatest of the Sighirichi Begs (probably a branch of the Konchi or Kochin) He was, on this occasion, seated along with her on a white fclt, and with great pomp, proclaimed Ishan by the tribes Baber, p 12 She is represented by Báber as a woman of great talents and influence on Lashghar

SFCT III battle was fought, about twelve miles from Káshghar, on the side of Aksú, where Yúnis Khan was completely defeated, and all his baggage, with his wife and eldest daughter, then at the breast, fell into the hands of the vietor. The Amír entertained them honourably, and sent them back to the Khan. Yúnis, on this disconfiture, was deserted by the tribes that had joined him, but which now separated, each to consult for its own safety. Seeing hunself thus deprived of all means of carrying on any active operations in Moghnhistán, he left his family with their friends in the desert, and again repaired to Khorásán [®]

Itis distress

To such distiess was Yunis Khan now reduced, that on his arrival at Herát, he did not possess the means of providing even the customary offering which in the East it is necessary to make on approaching a prince In this distress, he prevailed upon one of the officers of his household to allow himself to be presented to the Sultan as a slave Abusaíd, desirous to keep up the intestine wars in the desert, and wishing to inspire the Mogluls with some confidence in the Khan, bestowed on him the territory of Masíkhi, a small hill-country dependent on Andeján, and bordering on Táshkend, and sent him to renew the contest On his taking leave, the faithful servant, whom he had presented to the Sultan, finding himself left alone in a foreign land, was no longer able to repress his feelings, but broke out into loud lamentations The Sultan, who inquined what was the cause of the man's distress, on discovering the truth, caused the honest Moghul to be properly accoutred, armed, and mounted, and sent him to follow lus master †

Death of Mir Syed, A H 862, A D 1458,

It happened fortunately for the Khan that Mir Syed Alı of Káshghar died soon after his return, and that about four years afterwards Isan-bugha also died, and

* Tar Resh f 60

wis succeeded by his son Dost Muhammed Khan, a sect m man of a violent and imprident character Of the and of Isan two sons of the Amír of Kashghin, the one sided with bugba, Dost Muhammed, and the other, of course, with Yiuns 4 n 866, p 1462 Khan, who, having been previously joured by many of his former adherents, and by some Moghini tribes, now became more powerful than he had yet been He moved castward, and several times entered Käshghar, being fond, we are told, of cities and of cultivated countries, and of living in houses, but the mirmuis of the tribes who disliked and shimned all towns and settled habititions, preferring to dwell under tents, to live the free life ind to breathe the free air of the desert, compelled him as often to actue back into Moghnlistan Dost Muhammed Khim, his nephew and And of now his rival, reigned only four years On his death, hammed, Yhuis Khan, being joined by the chief men who had AD 1465-6, hitherto adheied to his brothei's puty, became all-success of powerful A few of the immediate followers of the lunis funily carried off Dost's son, Kepck Sultan, then a boy, and fled with him to Terfan, at the eastern extremity of the country It was now the wish of Yúnis Khan to have taken up his residence at Aksú, " which compied with Moghuhstan was something of a town," but he speedily found that if he indulged this taste, the tribesmen would go over in a body to his grandnephew Kepek Sultan Compelled by necessity therefore, he returned to the wilds of Moghulistán with all his followers *

Just at this time occurred the disastious expedition calamity of Sultan Abusuíd Muza into Iiák, where he peushed of Irak, with his mighty aimy Three of his sons succeeded in 1468-9 hun, in different kingdoms, in Máwei unuher, Sultan Ahmed Mirza in Samukand, Sultan Mahmúd Mirza in Hissar, Kunduz and Badakhshán, and Sultan Umer-

53

sicriii sheikh Mitza in Andeján and Ferghána Yúnis Khan, in fulfilment of an engagement with Sultan Abusaíd, bestowed three of his daughters on these three Mitzas, with a view at once to strengthen the friendship between the two families, and to put an end to the eminity which had long subsisted between the Moghuls of the desert and the Chaghatáis of Máwerannaher

Y unis defeated by Kalimák*, A 11 877, A 12 1472-3

made prlsoner by Sheikh Jemal, A 11 878, A p 1473

Defeats Bárui ,

Not very long after, in the course of A.H 877, a Kalimák chief (expelled from his own country by intestine feuds), entered Moghulistán, on the east, with three hundred thousand followers Defeated on the banks of the Ili, by the overwhelming force of these invaders, Yúnis Khan retreated westward to Turkistán, and passed the winter at Kara-Tokán It was there that he was surprised by Bárúj Ughlan and his Uzbeks, who seized and plundered his camp, as has been mentioned, when he attacked them in turn, and inflicted on them an exemplary revenge In the spring he moved to Táshkend The governor of that province was Sheikh Jemáleddín Khar, nominally under the Sultan of Samarkand, but in the unsettled state of the country that followed Abusaíd's disaster in Iiák, he yielded but an imperfect obedience to any superior As Yúnis Khan approached Táshkend, the Sheikh came out in state with a numerous retinue, as if to meet and do him The Khan saw, with surprise, his own honour * followers suddenly disappear from his train, nor was he much reassured when told that they were gone forward to receive Sheikh Jemál. Being soon left nearly alone, he was seized by his own people, at the command of the Sheikh, and thrown into prison, where he languished a whole twelvemonth

It appears that Yúnis Khan's Amírs, being discontented with him, had entered into a conspiracy with Sheikh Jemáleddín, to whom the whole Ulús of Moghuls submitted as their chief. The Sheikh, to add insult to in- SECT III jury. bestowed Ais doulat Beguin, the Khan's wife, and Anecdote of mother of the betrothed wives of the Sultans of Samar. Als-doulat. kand and Ferghána, on one of his officers The Begum, when this unseemly transfer was notified to her, uttered not a word Her intended husband, ariiving in the evening, entered the house, his attendants remaining without The Begum's female slaves closed the doors belund hun, and barred them within They then fell upon the unhappy bridegroom and put him to death with their knives In the morning his body was ignominiously cast out of the house When Sheikh Jemáleddm sent to call the Begum to account for this murder, "I am the wife of Yúnis Khan," she replied, "and of hun only Sheikh Jemál has thought fit to give me to another IIe knows whether this is in accordance with religion and law I have killed the man, let Sheikh Jemal kill mc, if he chooses " Jemal was loud in her praise, and allowed her to return with honour to her husband

It was about a year after these transactions when Yunis re-Amir Abdal-kadús, with a small body of men, fell upon leased. Sheikh Jemál, slew him, and brought his heid to Yúnis Khan whom he released from his prison All the Moghul chiefs who had joined the Sheikh now returned to their allegiance to the Khan. They protested to him that they had left him solely on account of his fondness eities and cultivated countries, which to them were The Khan promised that henceforward he odious would entirely give them up, and live and breathe in the pure air of the desert As the Kalmáks had by this time returned to then own country, the Khan moved brek with all his camp to the steppes of Moghulistán Not long after his return, the seivants of Kepek Sultan Ughlan, Dost Muhammed's son, who had been earned to Terfan, slew him and brought his head to Yúms Khan Though in a state of hostility with Kepck E 4

Becomes sole Khan

SECT III Sultan, the Khan was indignant at this act of treachery, and gave up the murderers to undergo the penalty of the Muhaminedan law of retaliation Yunis Khan, thus relieved from all domestic enemies in the desert, remained in Moghuhstán for several years, never even hinting a wish to visit any town, and, during that time, by his amiable manners and by his compliance with the usages of the tribes, succeeded in a very great degree in gaining their attachment But though he thus became sole Khan of Moghulistán, the horde of the Moghuls never appears perfectly to have recovered that degree of unity, or the Khans that degree of power, which they had enjoyed before the death of Weis Khan and the calamity of Irazan Habits of disunion and discord, long indulged, prepared them for new misfortunes

Some of the most important events of Yúnis Khan's later years, were his campaigns in Káshghar, and his transactions with his sons in-law the Sultans of Maweran-The former may be but briefly noticed, the naher latter are more nearly connected with the history of Samarkand

Affilrs of Kúshghar,

Muhammed Haider Mirza, Doghlat, was the Amír of Káshghar, who had joined the party of Yúnis, and was protected by him The Amír had married Jemák, the widow of his elder brothei, to whom she had born a son called Ababeker This young prince, aided by the intrigues of his mother, who completely directed her weak and uxorious husband, succeeded in wresting Yaukend from his uncle and stepfather By his adventurous spirit and the unsparing prodigality with which he lavished on his followers whatever fell into his hands ", he soon attached to him a resolute band of chosen youths, drawn from the highest families in the

and the whole of his most valuable property, to be pillaged

[·] When unprovided with the means of satisfying his followers, he sometimes gave up to them his tents, tribes Aided by them, and with the sunction of the SECT III Anni himself, he took possession of Khoten under ciremistinees of the blickest trenchery * and, rendered bold by success at length advinced to occupy Kashghar itself, the seat of the Amín's government Twice did the Amir oppose him in the field, and twice did Aba which is beker, with a handful of resolute troops defeat his conquered by Abanumerous armies The Amír, in his distress, applied beker to Yums Khan, who hastened to his succour with fifteen The combined runy of the Khan and thousand men Amir, amounting in all to forty-five thousand men, ad- AH 884 vanced towards Yarkend, the sent of Ababeker's power, * 1479 but was met and defeated by that enterprising prince, with a force of little more than three thousand men Next summer the Khan again advanced to the assist- A II 555. ance of his ally, with sixty thousand of his Moghuls but the combined army, amounting to musty thousand, was once more completely routed by Abibekei, who rehed chiefly on five thousand well-trained troops The immediate result of this battle was the occupation of Kashghu by Ababeker The Khan and the Amín fled to Aksu, where the Amir drew the Khan's younger son Sultan Ahmed into a conspiracy against his father, which was with some difficulty defeated In spite of this perfidy of his ally Yunis Khan was prepring to march anew, to restore the Amir to his dominions, when he was called away to protect Ferghana †

Much of the latter part of Yums Khan's life was oc- runis cupied by his transactions with his sons-in-law, the Sul- Khan in Ferghana. tans of Samark und and Ferghána On the present occasion he found the brothers in a state of mutual hostility, and Sultan Umersheikh apprehensive of seeing his territories invaded and overrun by his brother the Sultan of Sumarkand As the Khan approached Feighana, he was met by his son-in-law the Sultan of that

* Tar Resh ff 56-70 + Tar Resh ff 56-70 68-80

A D 1480

sict un kingdom, who assigned to him the little province of Ush, east of Andeján, for his quaiters The Khan laboured zealously to effect a reconciliation between the brothers, but, as he found it a work that required time, he prudently sent back the great body of Moghuls into the desert, under his eldest son. By his friendly intervention the intended invasion was prevented. At the end of winter, when the Khan leturned into his own country, he left Muhammed Haider, the deposed Amír of Káshghar, in the government of Ush, promising to come back and rejoin him at the proper season But this arrangement was not agreeable to Sultan Umersheikh, who, on the Khan's departure, divested the Amír of his authority Muhammed Haider, unable to stay where he was, or to go to Moghulistán, repaired to Káslighar, flattering himself that Ababeker, who was at once his nephew and step-son, would grant him a favourable reception Immediately on his arrival, however, he was thrown into prison, where he languished for a year, when, by a clemency very unusual with Ababeker, he was allowed to leave the country and proceed to Badakhshán Thence he went to Samarkand, where he remained two years; and after wards joined Yúnis Khan on that chief's earnest invitation, and was with him on his death-bed, assisting him by his skill in medicine, for which the Amír was celebrated in his own country Ababeker Mirza was thus left in possession of Káshghar, with all its dependent provinces, which that able but blood-thirsty and unsciupulous tyrant ruled nearly fifty years, and continued to hold at the accession of Báber *

Yúnis Khan was never sony to have a pretext for Ingering near the Sirr He was particularly attached to Sultan Umersheikh Mirza, the father of Báber They are represented as having lived together on the most familiar terms The Khan sometimes carried the Sultan

^{*} Tar Resh ff 68-80 193-195

to Moghuhstán to visit him, and entertained him for a SECT III. month of two in his tents, and, in return, accompanied the young Sultan to Andeján, passing an equal space of time in his palace Umersheikh, who was ambitious and restless, made every exertion, but in vain, to induce the Khan to assist him in the conquest of Samarkand With his own inferior forces he repeatedly invaded that kingdom His brother, Sultan Ahmed Mirza, retaliated by frequent invasions of Ferghána To defeat these invasions Umersheikh, year after year, called in Yúnis Khan, assigning to him some portion of his dominions, in which he took up his residence during the winter with his household and immediate followers, while the great body of the Ulús remained with their flocks in the wide-spreading steppes of their country On the leturn of spring, when the Khan visited Moghulistán, the Sultan resumed possession of his districts This armed mediation of the Khan prevented the suecess of Sultan Ahmed's plans against Andeján

-

On one occasion, however, a serious misunderstanding arose between the two friends Umersheikh had given up to the Khan the province of Akhsi for his winter 5 quarters. Sultan Ahmed Muza, who was ready to invade the country, on hearing of the Khan's movements, desisted from his hostile intentions Umersheikh, thus . relieved from his apprehensions, was impatient that the Khan should withdraw from Akhsi, which was the prinŝ cipal district of his kingdom, and, the Khan delaying < and putting off his departure from time to time, the L Sultin at length, losing patience, advanced to expel him by force All the Khan's attempts to soothe him prov-1 ing ineffectual, a battle ensued at Tika-sakaratha, when the Sultan was defeated, taken prisoner and brought in bonds before Yúnis Khan The good old Khan 10se £ as his son-in-law approached, advanced to meet him, ., made his bonds be removed, loaded him with presents, and set him at liberty, telling him to hasten straight home to prevent such distribunces as might be expected to ensue from the news of his discomfiture and supposed eaptivity, and promised himself to follow without delay The Khan then proceeded to send off such of the tribes as were still with him to Moghnhistán, and soon after, with his private household and a few followers, set out for Andeján, where he spent two months with the Sultan in his palace, and conducted himself in so frank and friendly a manner that no trace of sorciess was left in the mind of either

It was in the course of one of the many quarrels that arose between the sovereigns of Sumarkand and Fcrghána, that Khwája Nasíreddín Obeidulla, a holy man of great celebrity, was called in from Samarkand to mediate a treaty of peace between the Khan and Umersheikh on the one part, and Sultan Ahmed on the other, and was received with much distinction by them all "I had heard," said he, in relating the -cncumstance, " that Yúnis Khan was a Moghul, and I concluded that he was a beardless Moghul, with the rude manners and deportment of an inhabitant of the On the contrary, I found hun a handsome desert man, with a fine bushy beard, of elegant address, most agreeable and refined manners and conversation, such as are very seldom to be met with in the most polished society" One happy consequence resulted from this meeting The venerable Khwája addressed letters to all the Sultans around, with whom his influence was very great, to inform them that he had seen Yúnis Khan, the Moghul "The followers of such a man," said he, " are not to be carried off as booty They belong to Islam and," continues our author, " from that time forward, in Mawerannaher and Khorásán, none bought or sold captive Moghuls, who previously had been purchased in the same way as all Kafirs (infidels) are "*

* Far Resh ff 66-68

Obeld s account of

the Lhan

After the death of Sheikh Jemil, Sultan Mimed sper in Mirzy of Sun uk und had resumed possession of Tish- A 1879 kend ind Scirim which he mide over to his brother A p 1474 Unce-heikh (the father of Baber), who possessed them several years. On the occasion of a new quarel between the brothers however. Sultan Ahmed Lased an army to recover these territories. Unersheikli, as usual called in Yums Khan to his and, and as the An 890 A 16 1445 price of his alliance coded Sen in to him - When the Seces Lui When entered the civilised country in which it lay, of some with the int ation of taking up his writer quarters, a method Mochul numb r of the Moghul tribes always attached to the life of the descrit and judious of their Klain's fourdness for cities and agriculture separated from his ening, described, and went home - The pertuncity with which Yums When so often went in the teeth of their predilections may seem inconsistent with his icknowledged tilents but besides the natural influence of his learned education and carly habits, he was affected by religions metives - Ilis subjects were still in general pagins, or inclined to pagament and his piety led him cirnestly to desire that he could induce them to cultivate the ground being firmly per-unded, sitys his historian, that until they settled and inhabited towns he could not thoroughly introduce the Moslein faith * Hence his repeated though meffectual attempts to lead them to a more settled life. On the present occasion, the more refrictory and resolute of those who adhered to their ancient firth ind usiges, ind they seem to have been the great majority of the Moglinl-, separated from him altogether, ind returned into their deserts, carrying along with them, and putting at their herd, his younger son, Sultan Alimed Khan But, as the extinction of his brother Isunbugha's family had now left Yúnis

• Tar Resh f 112 A similar by Christian missionaries ob creation has repeatedly been made sECT III Khan without a 11val, this defection affected him less seriously than it would have done at an earlier period, as the ascendency of his own family in Moghulistán was still left secure

That winter the Khan passed in Seirám The army of Sultan Ahmed having moved from Sumarkand to recover the disputed provinces, Yúnis Khan sent his eldest son Sultan Mahmud, with thirty thousand men, that he might form a junction with Umersheik, who was on his march from Ferghána, at the head of fifteen thousand men, to attack the common enemy When the three armies had approached near each other, and a bloody battle was on the eve of being fought, Khwaja Nasíreddín Obeidulla, hastening from Samarkand, sent forward expresses to announce his approach The three potentates, obedient to the voice of the saintly man, halted the moment the messengers reached them The Khwája brought the punces together into one apartment, and sitting down along with them, mediated, or rather dictated, the conditions of a peace Tashkend, as well as Seirám, was given up to the Khan by the consent of the hostile brothers, and for some years continued to be the usual residence of one branch of the Moghul Khans

A н 892, A n 1496-7 Death of Yunis Khan

Táshkend and Seirám

ceded to the Khan

His sons succeed,

About two years after these events, Yúnis Khan died, at the age of seventy-four None other of the Chághatái Khans had attained to that age, says the historian, nay, hardly any of them had attained to forty * He was an accomplished, brave, and generous prince, but, in his later years, placed in a situation much at variance with the previous habits of his life

On his death, his elder son, Sultan Mahmúd Khan, generally called in this history "the Elder Khan," was proclaimed his successor as Grand Khan, and reigned over the tribes which had entered Táshkend and Seirám,

* These are lunar years Tar Resh ff 68 80 110

or that dwelt in the neighbouring steppes, but his SECT III. younger son, Sultan Ahmed Khan (called hereafter " the Younger Khan") continued to govern the tribes that ranged in the more distant and much more extensive wilds of Moghulistán, reaching far to the north and east

No sooner did the death of the Khan become known Mahmud to the Sultans of Ferghána and Samarkand, than they hastened to recover what they had lost The former Sultan of having pushed on a considerable force under his most distinguished officers, succeeded in getting possession of Ushter, a strong fortress in Tashkend The loss of the conciliating spirit of Yúnis Khan was now felt Ushter was unmediately afterwards attacked and stormed by the new Khan, and all the Sultan's brave adherents put to the sword As they consisted of his best troops, this reverse entirely bloke his strength, which never had been great *

Nor was the Sultan of Samarkand more successful In the course of the following year he led an immense army, said to consist of no less than an hundled and fifty thousand men, to recover Tashkend, was met by the elder Khanon the Chirr, a river which passes Táshkend on its way to the Sirr, and there completely routed, crowds of his army being drowned in attempt- seizes Turing to recross Mahmud, pursuing his advantage, took possession of the country of Turkistán, lower down the Iaxartes, which had been occupied by the Sultan of Samarkánd, for whom it was then held by Muhammed Mazíd Terkhán, that prince's maternal uncle † The Terkhán was himself taken and kept as a prisoner, and was afterwards useful in negotiating a The government of Turkistán was bestowed, as gives to peace a reward for some important services, on Sháhi-Beg or Sheibáni Khan, who had now entered the service of the Khan and of Samarkánd л н 893

kistún,

which he Sheibáni.

* Tar Resh f 81 Báber does not allude to this loss at Ushter

† Baber's Mem p 21, Tar Resh f SO

Khan defeats the Ferghána,

SECT III

The loss of Turkistán was not the only consequence of the disaster on the Chirr When the news of it reached the Governor of Uratippa, in alarm, he gave up that valuable district to Umirsheikh Mírza of Ferghána, who continued to possess it till his death

Consequent quarrel with the Kalzáks

Fergliána, who continued to possess it till his death Sheibáni, now Goveinor of Túrkistán, gradually acquired a singular ascendency over the elder Khan, his patron, the natural influence of a powerful over a weak mind * No sooner was he established in his government, than the scattered Uzbeks who were attached to the old dynasty, began to assemble from all quarters, under the banners of the grandson of their ancient chief The pationage thus afforded by the Khan to the family of their moital foe, led to keen remonstrances on the part of the sons of Ginái Khan and Jáni Beg Khan, the founders of the new confederacy of the Kaizák-Uzbeks The Moghuls and Kaizáks had always hitherto been connected as friends and allies, the Kaizáks having received from the Moghuls a tract of their country, when they originally fied from the oppression of Abulkhair Khan and renounced his govern-The Kaizáks now complained, that, to bestow ment The Kaizáks now complained, that, to bestow Turkistán on Sheibáni Khan, their hereditary enemy, was binging him into direct collision with them This quarrel produced a rupture, which terminated in a war between the Kaizáks and Moghuls, in the course of which Mahmúd (the elder Khan) suffered two great defeats These discomfitures of the Khan were, how-ever, somewhat connected with another part of the internal policy of his government "Yúnis Khan," says the historian, "had always been the khan of the great chiefs Men who succeed to power without any effort frequently do not attend to, or do not know the worth of men of merit, nay, they vainly imagine that any whom they think fit to patronise or favour thereby ment

Mahmúd defented

Alleged cause

* Baber's Mem pp 9, 10

become men of worth. In conformity with this per meious mixim, the new Khin, forsiking his father's policy protected and patronised persons of low degree, who constantly employed themselves in undermining and subverting the old and dignified chiefs, so that, at list the Khun proceeded to put to death five great Amirs who were heads of departments, and extirpated their finithes placing five others of low rank in their places When the differences arose between the Khan and the Iva, ak Uzbeks on the subject of Sheibám, and went on till they ended in wir, these five mean creatures were his ministers. Hence, ⁴ continues the historian, ⁴ defeat ensued and the fame of the Khan and the terror of his name, which had settled on the hearts of the Sult as around through the exertions of their predecessors in other, were entirely dissipated " . But the power of Sheiban continued to mereuse, and he daily becaute more and more independent in his government of Inclustin

The vonuger khan, who tuled in eastern Moghul-ist in, was a man of much greater energy and capacity than his brother. When in his father's lifetime he Mochulie actreated into the desert from Tashkend, accompanied All 890 by the discontented Moghuls, his first and most earnest concern was to reduce the power of the heads of tribes, meaning by whom his father's plans had often been thwarted To this task he devoted himself for ten years, in the course of which time he attained his purpose, by weak eming some and destroying others. In the prosecution of this design he made in my long and rapid marches, and fought many bloody bittles, and it was only by his uncommon bodily strength and provess, and by his skill in the management of his sibic, that he escaped, though not unwounded, from the attempts made by the indignant and refractory chieftanis to assassinate hun In the end, however, he overcame every opposition, and

Sultan 1hmed Khun of A D 1495

SECT HI

* Far Resh f 83 г

VOL 1

SICT III was implicitly obeyed by all He made successful inreads on the Infidel Kalimáks, whom he defeated in two bloody battles, which earned for him the name of Hachi Khan, signifying in their language "the slaughtering Khan," a designation by which he was even after popu-larly known When his brother Mahmúd (the elder Khan) was defeated by the Kaizák Uzbeks, Ahined marched to his assistance, invaded then territory, thrice drove them from the field, and plundered their country He kept Moglinhstán in such order, we me told, that, for the extent of seven or eight months' journey, not a Kalımák or Kaizak dared to set foot on his territory *

Such was the state of Moghulistán, and its Khans, on the accession of Baber

Part Second CHACHATÁI KHANS OF MÁWI PANNAHI R - THEIR DI-CHINE AND EXTINCTION

Khanship divided н 721, 6 1321

> Máwerannaher

Wr have seen that the Chaghatái Empire came to be divided into two great parts, Moghulistán and Máwerannaher, from the time of the first Isan-bugha, if not earlier The history of the Khans of Moghuhstán we have briefly traced The territory lying between the Sirr and the Hazára mountains, with its inhabitants, more particularly and almost exclusively acquired the name of Chaghatái, a name afterwards still farther restricted to the portion of that territory lying beyond the Amu The earlier succession of the Khans of Máwerannaher was troubled and uncertain, the strongest proof of which is, that, after Isan-bugha's departure for Mo-ghulistán, of the ten who occur between him and Kásán Sultan, from A H 721 to A H 733, in the short space of twelve years, two are not of the Chaghatán hne, (one being descended of Tuli and one of Oktái,) while the SECT III names of fom are not contained in the lists of several historians of the dynasty

83

Kázán Sultan Khan, who reigned about fourteen kázán Jears, was the last of the Khans of Mawerannaher who Khan was not a mere puppet in the hands of the Minister A D 1882-3 Having put to death several Amírs and Núiáus, his tyranny or severity excited ievolt among the chiefs of the different districts of his dominions Mir Kazaghan, the head of a Moghul tribe settled in khutlán on the Amn, was placed at the head of the confederated insurgents, and, after a war carried on with various success, Kázan Khan fell m battle, about a hundred and four His death, yeans after the death of Chaghatán By these events the A 10 1346 power of the Khans of Máweiannaher received a fatal blow "After him," says Abulghazi Khan, "there were indeed other khans in that country, but they were such as only bore the name of Khan without having the power, each head of a tube assuming the liberty of doing what he pleased, and obeying the Khan as much as he thought fit " *

It is unnecessary to follow the series of Chaghatái Titular Khans who succeeded, punces possessed of no real au-Khans, thority, employed merely to sanction the acts of ambitions immisters, and most of them raised to the throne and dragged down and murdered, as state policy of the minister's caprice happened to suggest Transoxiana fell into a state of anarchy, and to the calamity of intestine was added that of Tartar invasion from the north Fiom all of these evils it was relieved by the final success of the great Taimur, who, having overcome all his competitors, reduced the country to order, and suled with uncontrolled power He retained, however, the still venerated name and dignity of the Khans,

Kazan Khan, 18 given in Appendix * Abulghazı, Hıst Gen pt. v c 11 A list of the Chagbatái Khans С of Máwerannaher, who succeeded though, for whatever cause, he elianged the family, in-SECT III stead of a deseendant of Chaghatái setting up one Syurghatmish, of the race of Oktái Khan, in whose name as Khákán or Grand Khan, and not in that of Taimur, all edicts and commissions were issued Though this deference was paid to ancient usage, the Khan was earefully deprived of all real authority, and lus office was a mere name Syurghatmish dying in the lifetime of Taimur, the title was bestowed on his son Sultan Mahmúd Khan, who has acquired a place in history from being the person by whom the Ottoman emperor, Bajazet Ildei im, was made prisoner at the great battle of Angora Sultan Malimid appears to have held the dignity of Khan as long as Taimur lived The future succession is uncertain Tumán Kutluk Ughlan is said to have succeeded Sultan Malimud But with them the Grand Khans acknowledged in Máwerannaher probably ended In the time of Ulugh Beg Mirza, Their ex-Taimur's grandson, the monarchs of Samarkand began to issue firmans in their own name Though the names of Toghlak-Taimur and of his son Elias Khwája, Khans of Moghulistán, are found in the list of Chaghatái Khans contemporary with Taimur, these princes were never recognised to the south of the Sirr, except for a brief period of four or five years, when their armies were in the temporary possession of the country *

When the dynasty of the Chaghatán Khans became extinguished in Máweiannaher, it was succeeded by that of Taimur, to whom, down to the present day, the monarchs of the East delight to trace up their origin

* The principal authorities for rat, Abulghazi, and Deguignes this period are Sherfeddín, the Shaj-

tinction

SECTION FOURTH

YES TUDE IN A TE OF THE TAP IT -- HIS CONDITION -- SHALLSH AND VELT AND AND AND AND AND ADDRESS OF A STREET IN DESCRIPTION OF DESCRIPTION

I APPEA BEC, the founder of a new dynasty, was born stor in in Transoniana at Shehr schr. or lyesh, thirty miles paras rot with of Sun irkand on the 25 Shilom A II 736 (A D Mir Tal mur 1 liste April 9 ) * He was the son of the Chief of the Birlis i tale of the purest Mongol origin but the illionis's southered individuals of which, from long residence in Jur's countries had become Jurks in manners and linguise. His extraction, like that of all other great monachs has been traced back into fabrilous times As Chengiz Johan was the conqueror whose family for a century and a half had given inters to all the princifed countries of Tertiny and Persia, a connection with it was courted as a mark of diginity and importance and a pedigree concerning hun with that family was easily discovered for the successful warnor The period of time which hid clapsed between Chengiz When and Lamm was too short, and the descendants of the great conqueror were too well known, to admit of any claim on the part of Tamin to a direct descent from him - But flattery found their common ancestor in the holy Mankáwa, and Tammr could claim as well as Chengiz, the honour of a heavenly descent. Whether he really did so, or whether the claim was made for

^{*} Abult have pt v c m and iv

( laim to be Hereditary Prime Minister

The Altamgbá of Tumana Khan

hun at a later date, is not very clear He certainly, SECT IV however, if the memoirs ascribed to him are authentic, did claim to be of the same family as Chengiz, and even to have pretensions to be hereditary Plune Minister of the dynasty

The story was that Tumana, one of the ancestors of Chengíz, had twin sons, Kábul and Kájuli The eldest one night dreamed that he saw a blazing star between the heaven and earth, the bughtness of which gradually increased till it obscured all the other stars, and filled the whole earth with its splendom 'The younger brother had the same dream, only his star was smaller, and its effulgence less brilliant Interpreters of dreams were consulted, who predicted that from the face of the elder a mighty monarch would arise, who should conquer the whole earth, which his posterity would rule for ages, and that the younger brother and his descendants were to be then prime ministers Τo carry into effect this declared will of heaven, the two brothers, it is pretended, entered into a covenant, styled "the Altamghá of Tumana Khan," by which it was agreed, that, while the princes of the elder branch of the family were to be invested with all the honours of the sovereignty, the active cares of the administration were to devolve on the family of the younger brother From Kabul, the elder brother, was descended Chengiz, and from Kájuli, the younger, came Mír Taimui * Káiáchár Núian (or Nevian) was the Atálik

* The genealogy given in the Jami-it-towarikli and the Moiz-ulansab (Hist des Mongols, p 679) differs in its earlier stages from that in Abulghazi, Hist. Gen pt iv The dream, as related in the C XV Shajrat-ul Atrak, 15 much more specific and more minutely prophetic, pp 55-57, sec also, pp 358 367, 368 The more important question, regarding the grants of the Visiership to Faimur 5 family, is not free from difficulty It is not clear when they are first mentioned, and there seem even to be discordant claims In Taimur's Institute, as published by White, Taimur states that the agreement between Kabul Khan and Kájuli Beháder was shown to hun by Toghlak faimur himself, pp 22 -25 This is the more singulir as we have already seen that a claun of Minister of Chengiz, during his minority, in pursu- SECF IV ance, it is asserted, of this ancient compact, which Chengiz afterwards renewed That prince is said to its renewal have left Kálachár Núlan as Plume Minister to his son Chaghatán Khan, who, on his part, at his death also committed to that able politician the execution of his will and the care of his children It seems more certain that an agreement in writing was entered into between Dawa Chichan, a descendant of Chaghatái, when he became Grand Khan of the Moghuls, and Alengiz Nutan, a grandson of Káráchát, confirming the two alleged prior contracts From Karáchár, Tannur is said to have been the fifth in descent At all events, to be born like Taimur of the family of the Chief of the noble tribe of Bulás, was no mean origin

But whatever was Tannur's descent, his high eleva- Taimurs tion was due to his own transcendent talents His rise similar to that made for Lannur to be Prime Minister to the Ishan, was set up for Yulaji, the very person who had placed Toghlak Taimur on the throne Yet Faimur was a Birlas, Yulaji a Doghlat Mirza Haider, a descendant of Yulaji and a man of veracity, informs us that he saw the firmans that had been issued in favour of Ishod adad, confirming the previous grants made to his family by Chen, iz Khan and Fog'ilak laumur, in his father's posso sion, that they were dated in spring, in the year of the Hog, at Kunduz, and that they were de stroved in the confusions consequent ou the wars with Shahi Beg Khai I ar Resh f 42 It would seem, therefore, as if claims were made by different families The diversity between the representations of Taimur and Mirza Haider is curious, and may be considered as easting some doubt on the authenticity of the Institutes and Tuzuk of Taimur Gibbon, with his usual critical acumen, remarks, on occasion of the term Uzbek used in them, as applied to the invaders of Transoviana, under Toghlak Taimur and his son, that were he assured that it existed in the original (Turki) Institutes, he would boldly pronounce them a forgery It may be remarked that neither Baber, a descendant of Taimur, nor Mirza Hauler, Babers cousin, both of them princes who wrote commentaries of their own transactions the one in Turki, the other in Persian, ever allude to Taimur as the author of a similar work It is not impossible that h s Commentaries were known only in that branch of his family that reigned in Irak and the West 1 throw out these remarks rather for the purpose of exciting investigation than of delivering an opinion At the same time, a critical examina tion of the Tuzuk and Institutes would be a valuable contribution to Oriental History

71

F 4

SECT IV first contests, like those of Chengiz Khan, had for their object to gain the direction of his own tribe, which, after many vicissitudes of fortune, he attained, and, following up his success, after long and painful exei-tions he became the undisputed ruler of all Máweranand connaher, and had the glory of restoring to peace and to quests. prosperity its various provinces, which had long been a prey to anarchy After this success at home, he led his victorious troops not only into the deserts of Kip-cliák and of Moghulistán, but through the richest provinces of Asia, which one after another he reduced under his power, from the Dardanelles to Delhi, and left at his death one of the greatest empires the world ever saw The troops by which he effected his conquests were chiefly drawn from the Túrki tribes beyond the Oxus

His death. ́л п 807, A D 1405

well known It is only necessary for the present pur-pose to follow the history of the province of Máwer-annaher Soon after Taimur's death, his mighty empire was divided into many separate kingdoins Máwerannaher became the portion of his son Sháhrúkh Mırza, who long held it Taimur's third son, Mırza Mirzy Mir-Muánshah, from whom Báber was descended, had for anshah his lus share Azerbáiján, Syna, and Irák He lived chiefly third son at Tabriz, the climate of which suited his constitution But he fell, not long after his father's death, in a battle with Yusef, the chief of a Turkoman horde, near Tabríz

The history of Taimur and his earlier descendants is

Mirza Sul tan Mu hammed,

Mırza Mıránshah's eldest son, Mırza Sultan Muhammed, at the time of his father's death was residing in Samarkand, where he was treated with great kind-ness by his uncle Sháhrúkh Mirza and by that prince's son Ulugh Beg Mirza, more celebrated for his encouragement of science, and especially for the Astronomical Tables constructed under his patronage, than for his extensive dominions Milza Sultan Muhammed dees not appear to have taken any active part in public ster is life. When visited on his death bed hy his consin-Ulingh Beg he took his son Abusaid's hand, and placing Sultan it in thit of Ulugh Beg, recommended the young man ^{Vuluesia} to his protection. The trust thus committed to him, Ulugh Beg furthfully fulfilled, and Abusud, for some voirs served him with diligence and affection But when one of the sons of Uhigh Beg rebelled and his fither muched from Simukand to chistise hun, Abusud Muza led by a guilty ambition, having secretly formed a purty, occupied that capital Uhigh Beg, hurrying back to quell this unlooked-for revolt, was tollowed and defeated by his rebellions son, by whose order he was soon after mardered, though the decree for his execution is said to have borne the name of the titular Grand Khim * The puriede next defeated An 853, A D 1449 Abusind and made him prisoner, yet survived but a short time, and was imirdered in his time. The young ciptive being released from enstody, after virions reverses of fortune, joured Abulkhan John in the wilds of hypchak and induced hum to lead a body of his Uzbeks into Mawer miniher. I scaping from the khun's camp, after a victory gained by the Uzbeks uch Simirkand, Abus ud suddenly entered that capital, as his leen mentioned, and was received with acclamations of joy by the inhabitants, who above all things dreaded the entrance of the barbarrans, and gladly raised him to the throne † In the course of an active and vigorous reign, he not only subducd Mawerannaher, but extended his kingdom over Khorasan as far as Mekrán and the Indus But having engaged in an expedition into Azerbáiján, to support one tribe of Turkomans against Uzan Hasan the chief of another, who anned at subjugating the province, he was sur-

• This was probably one of the in which the Grand Ishan's name last instances, perhaps the very last, was employed

[†] See before, pp 29 and 17

Піз death, л н 873, л р 1469

SECT IV

rounded by that chieftain's army in the defiles of the mountains near Ardebíl, and perished with the greater part of his immense host This event formed an erathat long continued to be remembered as "the calamity of Irák"

Division of his dominions

On the death of this powerful prince, the grandfather of Báber, his extensive dominions fell to pieces, and were occupied partly by his sons and partly by strangers Of his sons, four became independent princes The eldest, Sultan Ahmed Mirza, became sovereign of Samaikand and Bokhára, Sultan Mahmúd Mirza, his third son, gained possession of the provinces lying between the Hindu-kúsh and Asfera mountains, a tract compusing Badakshán, Khutlán, Turmez, and Hisárshadmán, his fourth son, Umeisheikh Mirza, the father of Baber, continued to rule the small kingdom of Feighána or Andeján, lying on both sides of the upper course of the Sirr, which he had governed in his fathei's lifetune A younger son, Ulugh Beg Mirza, retained possession of Kábul and Ghazni, which also had been given him by his father The rich country of Khorásán, after a long series of revolutions, was at length conquered and enjoyed in peace by Sultan Husein Mirza, Barkery, also a descendant of Taimur, the greatest prince of his time, and an eminent pation of learning. and learned men, as well as of all the fine aits

Ferghann, Sultan Umersheik Mirza Sultan Umersheikh Mirza, Báber's father, had received the little country of Ferghána from his father in early life He was, as we have seen, of an ambitious, restless disposition, and made repeated attempts to conquer Samarkand, the kingdom of his eldest biother, who in return as often invaded his dominions Both married daughters of Yuuis Khan, the Grand Khan of the Moghuls, who on different occasions matched to the assistance of Umersheikh, his favourite son-in-law, and mediated a peace between the brothers Bosides Ferghána, the Mirza for some time possessed the fruitful

д и 890 д. в. 1485 provinces of Tashkend and Seiráni, which passed from ster iv lum into the hands of the Moghul Khans. He also  $\frac{1}{4.000}$  held for a short time Shahrokhia, and when Sultan  $\frac{1}{4.000}$  1484 Ahmed Mirza suffered his great defeat on the Chirr. the governor of Unitippa surrendered that place to Umersheikh who kept it till his death

The Sultin had long reigned in his little kingdom, A H 809, when in A H 809 Sultin Mahand the Khan of the Moghuls and Sult in Ahmed Mirza the King of Simurkind who hid tiken nubrige at some put of his medomi conduct entered into a confedericy to deprive hum of plons in vided his dominions and concrited their innon by the maringe of the Khan with a daughter of the Muza The more effectually to carry then purpose into effect, it was concerted that the Khan should enter Fergham on the north and seize the provinces beyond the river, while the Mirza was to enter the kingdom from the south and some those on the left bank of the over Accordingly, Mahmud, advancing from Tashend with a large anny of his Moghuls, peneti ited nito Akhsi, the chief of the northern provinces and the Mirzi at the sume time introlung from Suntikind, took the direction of Anderin the cipital of the provinces of the south

It was at this crisis when his country was a proy to misdeath, invision, that Sultan Umersheikh Mirza was carried off by an unforcecen accident. His pilice stood on an emmence in the cistle of Akhsi - Like many princes of the ige, he min-cd huiself with training tame pigeons Happening one day to go into a pigeon-house that was constructed within the palice, on the edge of a steep chill overhanging the river below, the foundation gave way, he was precipitated down the cliff along with the building, and killed on the spot This event happened in the thirty seventh or thirty eighth year of his age, when he had reigned about twenty-six years, reckoning

SLCT IV from his father's death * He is described by his son as a brave, good-humoured prince, of a sweet temper, elegant and refined in his manners and conversation, fond of letters and remarkable for his justice In his external policy he was ambitious, restless, and unsteady. He left three sons, Báber Mırza, by Kutluk-nıgár Khanum, his chilthe second daughter of Yunis Khan; Jehángír Mirza, by Fátima Sultan, the daughter of a chief of the Moghul Tumáns ; and Násir Mirza by Umeid of Andeján, a concubine Ile had five daughters, two of them posthumous

> It may not be unnecessary to mention again in this place what were the states that bordered upon Ferghana, and what princes reigned in them at this period

> The Ulús of Moghuls on the Sırr, had for its grand Khan, Sultan Mahmúd Khan, the eldest son of Yúnis Khan, and Báber's maternal uncle Besides the provinces of Táshkend, Seirám and Shahrokhía, he possessed some extent of territory in the desert

> But the wide desert of Moghulistán was held by Sultan Ahmed Khan, Mahmúd's younger brother, and the tribes that acknowledged him, fed their flocks in a lange of country, three months' journey in extent, reaching from Tashkend to Yeldúz

Of the territory of Júji Khan, the Desht-Kipchák, the eastern part was held by the Uzbeks There had been a rupture in their tribes On the defeat and death of Abulkhair Khan, the power of his family was broken His son Bárúj Ughlán had soon after shared a fate sımılar to that of his father, and his grandson Sháhi Beg Khan, had been compelled to quit the desert, and after having lived as a refugee at Bokhára, was now in Turkistán, which he held under the protection of Sultan Mahmud Khan, and strengthened himself by collecting the scattered remnants of the tribe that continued to be

* л н 899, Ramzan 4 (л D nine lunar years old 1494, June 9) He was thirty-

Neighbouring princes

Moghuls

Older Uzbeks.

dren

attached to his family, and such other Uzbeks as were sfor iv discontented with their new rulers

The other branch of the Uzbeks (who got the name of Katzak  $v_z$  Katzak  $U_z$ beks) from having been originally a small predatory body had by the comise of events become the most powerful division of the two, and occupied the entire desert north of Turkistan is far as the Yánk. Their Khan at this period was Berenduk Khan, the son of Gera. That country, by the writers of the time, is often called Uzbekistan.

Kishghar was governed by Ababeker Mirza, a prince Kashghar of great courage but infamous for his tyranny and cruchty

In Miwerinnaher, Samarkind and Bokhúra, with Samar Shehr-schz und Kirshi werd held by Sultin Ahmed ^{kand} Mirza, Umersheikh sielder brother

Histr, Khutlin, Bidakhskin, and Kunduz were in user the possession of Sultan Mahand Marza, the immediate elder brother of Umersheikh

The three brothers Ahmed, Mahmuid and Umersheikh, had each married a daughter of Yums Khan

The more distint kingdoms of Kilbul and Ghazni con-Kabul tunned to be held by Sultan Ulugh Mirzi, a fourth brother of the Mirzis

Khoras in obeyed Sult in Husem Mirz'i Barkera, who Khordsan at that time was by full the most powerful of the princes of the House of Tummr – His capital was Heidt, which for the space of nearly half a century was the most magnificent city of the East, and celebrated not merely for the splendom and dignity of its Court, the architectural beauty of its mosques, tombs, colleges, and palaces, but as being the resolt of the greatest Divines, philosophers, poets, and Instorians of the age, who received the most liberal patronage from the Khákún and lus Amirs *

BOOK FIRST.

FROM BÅBER'S ACCESSION TO HIS FIRST PAPELSION FROM MÅWFRANNAHER

CHAPTER FIRST

CONQUEST AND LO-S OF SAMARFAND -LO-S AND RECOVERY OF ANDEJÁN

ACCF-SION OF I ÅLER-STATE OF FFI GHÁNA VIHICH IS ATTACFED ON ALL SIDPS --PNADPES PEPFTIED -- DEATH OF SULTAN AHATD OF FAMARKAND, AND OF SULTAN MAHMUD, HIS LI OTHFR--RENOLT-TIONS OF THAT COUNTRI-BÁBER INNADES IT.-HE BLOCKADES THE CAPITAL -- HUTS HIS APMY IN VINTEL QUARTELS -- IS ATLACKED BT SHEH ÁNL KHAN -- TAKES SAMAKAND.-- IFNOLT IN FFLOHÁNA, IN FANOUR OF HIS LLOTHER JEHL'S GHL-BÁLET MALCHI S TO QUELL IT -- LOSPS FAMAREAND AND ANDER 'T -- HIS DISTURS' -- APTLIES FOR FECCOLR TO SULTAN MAHMUD KHAN -- GETS POSERSTO OF MAPOHIN'A' -- HIS' O OF THE POPULATION OF FERGHÁNA IN HIS FANOUR -- PECONFES ANDERS' -- KENOLL OF HIS MOGHUL TROOPS -- SUCCESS OF TAMI OL AND HIS DEFFAT -- CAMIAIGN OF KÁSÁN --PÁLEP CO CLUDES A PEACE WITH JEHÁS GÍR AND TÁMEOT

BOOK L

Báber's birth 6 Moharrem, A 11 2-2, Feb 14 A 11 4-2 ZEHÍR-ED-DIN MUHAMMED was born on the 6th day of Moharrem, A II 888 He was the son of Umershcikh Mirza, the sovereign of Ferghána, by his wife Kutluknigár Khánum, the daughter of Yúnis Khan, the Grand Khan of the Horde of Moghuls* His name was

* Baber's genealogy, on the fathers side, was, Baber the son of Sultan Umarsheilh Mirza, the son of Sultan Abutaid Mirza, the son of Sultan Muhammed Mirza, the son of Mirza Mirán-thah, the son of Amír Taimur Korkán.

On the mothers ride, it vas; Kutlul-myar Khanum, the daughter of Yunis Khan, the son of Weis Khan, the son of Shir Ali Khan, the ron of Muhammed Khvaja Khan, the son of Khizer Khvaja Khan, the son of Foghlel-Jaimur Khan, the son of Iran-bugha Khan, the son of Dava Chichan, the son of Borál Khan, styled Ghiás-ed-din, the son of Sular, the son of Kámgér, the son of Chaghatái, the son of Chengiz Khan chosen for him by Khwiqi Nasir-ed-din Obeid-ulla, at entry that time the most celebrated spiritual guide in Transoxiana. The Chaghitais we are told, having some, difficulty in pronouncing the Arabic words Zehn ed din, called him Baber, a name which his parents adopted, and has official designation because Zehreddin Muh inmed Baber 1. At the period of his father's death  $*\pi$  1494 he was hitle more than eleven years of age

The Engdom of Terghunt, now Kokin, to which he Fershbas, succeeded and which has become so fimons as his birthplace though of small extent, wis, as he himself informs us trich in fruits and grain. If is surrounded on all ides by mountains, some of them covered with perpetial snow except towards the south-west between lyhopend and Samark and where there is an opening between the hills and the left bank of the inver Sethian. This river called also the Sirr and the river of Khopend, is the meant Taxartest, which flowing down from the mountains on the side of Kashghar, divides Ferghána into two parts and afterwards proceeding by Tashkend and Turkistan reaches the set of Aral with diminished waters, after passing through a study desert.

The different ranges of hils that surround Ferghina do not seem to have any well-ascertaned general names. Those on the south, covered with perpetual snow, which separate at from the hitle country of Karatigm, may be called the Asfera range the mountains which separate it on the east from Kashghar, and on the north from the deserts of Tartary, seem to bear the name of Alatágh, while, on the west, a branch running from this last-mentioned range towards the Seihun, separates Ferghina from Táshkend, or Shahrokhin – The narrow opening already mentioned, between the Asfera hills

• Lar Reshidi, f 123 The Protector or Defender of the Lauh, Muhammed the Lion though not in the country, the Scilum, in the same way as the An uis called the Johun

+ The Sirr is called in books,

BOOK I

A D 1494 Its divi-

1 and the south bank of the river, is opposite to the  $\frac{1}{24}$  termination of this branch

The country was divided into seven principal districts, of which five were to the south of the great river, and two to the north Of those to the south, the chief was Andeján, in which was the capital of the kingdom and the important fortress bearing the same name, the district of Usk extended to the eastward, that of Marghinán or Marghilán to the westward, Asfera stretched to the south and south-west among the mountains, occupying especially the glens and villages at their roots, and finally, Khojend, lower down the river, a strong place, within a bowshot of the stream, on the road to Samarkand The districts north of the river were Akhsi* and Kásán, the former the second town and the strongest fortress in the kingdom Umersheikh had made it his capital Kásán stretched to the east and north of it

As the little country of Ferghána possesses a rich soil, and lies in a temperate climate, though exposed in summer to violent heat, and in winter to severe cold, it abounds in corn and fruits, especially those of warm countries, such as the peach, the pomegrante, almond and melon Its orchards and gardens were celebrated Game is plentiful The surface of the lower grounds is varied, while in the hills are delightful summer retreats, to which the inhabitants retire to avoid the heat of the weather But though the country is in general fertile, it is intermixed with portions of ground that mark the neighbourhood of the desert

Inhabitants In Ferghána, as in Transoxiana in general, the older inhabitants of the towns and of the cultivated country were Tájíks, and belonged to no tribe, but in latertimes the irruptions from the north had increased the number of tribesmen, both Moghuls and Túrks, so that the population of the open country, and a considerable CII AP I portion even of that of the towns, was of Lurki face, a 11 1494 and nowhere was the Inrki language thought to be spoken in so much purity. It was the linguage of the rulers and was in such general use as to be inderstood even by the town - people, whose mother tongue was Persion * It is but little known that the Turki was it that period a cultivated tongue, in which much poetry and some history had been written. The poets were numerons but Mir Ah Sher Nawa, a nobleman of the first rink in the Court of Herst and a munificent encomager of learning who flourished at this period was generally schowledged in his own age, and the judgment has been ratified by succeeding times as the most distinguished Lurki poet, the second place, by universit consent being issigned to Baber. The commentaries of I mmurate supposed to have enached this I mgnage. as did those of Baber at a subsequent time, and the Gene dogical History of Abulghazi Khan, the Prince of Khwaraziu at a still later period

It is not easy to convey my very correct idea of

* Bab i & Memoirs pp 1-0 The Oxus y s e n ider il as the ancient Loundary between the enpues of Irm and Inran the old Persian and End r menarclace - Yet there is good for on to believe that in very surrent times, the whole citie and coluvated country between the Oxus and Jaxartes with the rich and populous country north of the latter river, as well as the cities and cultivated plains of bashpar, were inhabited by a race who spole the Persian language, while the desert and champain of Aransoxuma and bash har were traversed by wandering trib s, as they now are The old inhabitants, who continue to be the artificers and cultivators, are called Lights and sometimes Sarts The term Tank, which has exented to much discussion and which is in the not only in Frank oxiana but in Afghamstan, Per 15, and Kurdi tan seems to be a cormption of (1 in 1rab lying the name by which the inviding Turks distinguished the subjects of the Araham government, who were the labourers and merchants, from themsclves who belonged to wandering tribes and were the rulers. Hence the familiar use of Turk as opposed to Lujfl, the former indicating a tribesminu, the latter a townsman, a persent The term Lajik, in the mouth of a tribesman, was generally used as a term of contempt, while that of Lurk, employed by the Tajik, often signified a man of rough, unpolished manners See Elphinstone s Caubul the state of society in Máwerannaher, of which Baber's BOOK I little kingdom formed a part The country being natu-rally rich, and when under the Aral dynasty, having been favoured by long peace, had become populous and highly cultivated, and the fields were, in many places, AD 1494 State of society, irrigated by canals, and improved by works of great labour and expense, so that the earlier writers repre-sent it as a garden As Samarkand had for ages been the seat of a powerful government, it had been richly adorned with the triumphs of Muhammedan architec-Of these ture, palaces, mosques, colleges, and tombs some had been erected by Taimur, who, in the midst of his conquests, sent the artizans of Damascus and Delhi to labour in the improvement of his capital Many other cities had shared the general prosperity Trade flourished, to a certain extent, with the useful arts Of their manufactures, those of paper and of crimson velvet were particularly celebrated But the confusion and risks of war had recently interfered with every branch of national industry The constant presence of a court had diffused through various ranks a certain and learn refinement of manners Learning, too, and knowledge, such as are found in Muhammedan countries, were cultivated The instruction given in their schools and colleges, though deformed by bigotry, and though it sometimes taught a superstitious subjection to the commands of a spiritual guide, had, with all its defects, a tendency to exercise the reason, to clevate the imagi-nation, and to mend the heart In them they studied the Koran and its commentaries, containing the principles and the details of religion and of law, the Arabic and Persian Grammar and Logic, the Arabic, but especially the Persian, religious poets, with expo-sitions of the abstruse and mystic passages There were students in geometry, astronomy, and medicine, as well as of history, but the popular and almost uni-ver-al taste was for the works of the national poets,

VOL 1

G

r

In-

especially the Shahnama, which were read with delight, curr r and passages from them were familiarly quoted, not . n 1494 only in common conversation, but even in the transaction of business, and in official correspondence Poetry was a fivourite pursuit and we hardly find my men of note in that age who had not enlighted the art to a greater or less degree - Yew parts of the East had produced more distinguished men of science (especially while it remained under the Arabian government), or more venerated samts

There were particular families of holy men, reve- Religious reneed for their picty, and some dark idea was entertanual that they were endowed with supernatural power, and superior influence with heaven These men had minicrons disciples and adherents, who followed their dictates with blind devotion. They had often a powerful effect even on public affairs of they occasionally embroiled the country with their intrigues, it must be illowed that in other instances they protected the weak, prevented many individual acts of impostice,

* These nuters employed the Arabic at that period the huguage of science Among them may be inchtioned -

Abu Ah Hasan ibn Ah, ibn Sina, b-tter known as the Avicenna of the West, born at Bokhara, and eminently di tinguished as a physicini and as an expounder of the metaphysics of Aristotle (A ii 370 -128, A n 980-1036)

Sheikh Burl in ed-din Ali, a native of Marghinan (A ii 550-591, x p 1186-1195), the author of the Heduya or Guide a Commentury on the Musulman Inw, translated by Captain Charles Hamilton, 4 vols 1to, Lond 1791, and of other works

Ahmed (or Muhammed) ben Ivo thair Al-l erghani, a native of Ferghana, as his name imports, who flourished in the end of the ninth century, in the time of the Khahf Minamon (A 11 269, A D 893), and was celebrated as an astronomer and chronologist Some of his works have been translated by Christomannus (1 rancof 1590, 810) and in Gohns (Amst 1669, 4to)

Nor must we forhet the astrononomers who constructed the tables of the fixed stars, at Ulugh Beg s observatory at Samarkand See Hydes Syntagma, and the Geograplucal Tables, Graves in the Geographi Greet Minores

In these authors may be added Al-I frabi, a philosopher eminent in his own country, though less known in I urope, who was a native of Fáráb, beyond the Sirr, and who was murdered by robbers in Syria (A II S12, A D 954) families

BOOK I

▲ в 1494

overawed the minds of fierce barbanans and of merciless tyrants, and softened the ngours of war When no other person could venture to pass between hostile armies, they, from the sanctity of their character, often acted, first as mediators and after wards as negotiators, in effecting a pacification.

It should at the same time be remarked that some of the Tartar nobles, who had been educated beyond the Sirr, were ignorant even of their letters, and that the want of political stability, and of any general or systematic means of diffusing improvement, confined knowledge to a few Besides this, in later times, the arts and prosperity of Transoxiana were constantly exposed, not only to the ordinary viewsitudes of foreign war, and of internal discord, common to all countries, but to the more dreadful danger of being overwhelmed by the irruption of new hordes of ignorant and rapacious barbarians from the north, who threatened to sweep away the property, the personal liberty, and the lives of the inhabitants

Art of war

Y

As to their skill in the military art, displayed in the conduct of their large armies, they followed the practice and example of Taimur, dividing their host into several bodies, an advance, a centre or main-body, and a rear, besides flanking parties and reserve The great bulk of the army consisted of cavalry the arms in use were the bow and ariow, the cross-bow, the seyinetar, spear, and mace, the defensive armour, the shield, coat of mail and helmet The horses too were sometimes defended by cloth of mail or plate-armour But the Tartars delighted much more in predatory inroads, in sudden attacks and surprises, raids and forays, than in regular warfare With their horses, which were trained to endure fatigue and to subsist on little, they sometimes ' made marches of astonishing length They trained themselves to the use of the scymetal, and much honour was gained by success in the single combats which were often longht by champions in sight of the hostile char i armies. In conducting sieges they had little skill. They are list A n 1494 concrally block ided the place, trying to reduce it by finime But escalide was also often resorted to, and thy were not ignoriant of the use of machines by which the wall was overtopped, or shuttered - Little use seems to have been made of any engine for throwing stones, though they sometimes did employ the manjanil or eatipult But they had studied the art of mming and countermining, which they sometimes employed with success. The use of heavy buttering crimon was introluced by slow degrees, and very martificially employed The number of mitchlockmen, small at first, increased from year to year

Smill as was Baber's kingdom, yet as he was a seion Govern ment. of the nace of Tumm, he had around hun a miniature court composed of the whole establishment of grand officers of state and of officers of the houshold, such as belonged to the most splendid and powerful monarch The instability of the times filled the courts of princes with clowds of bold and needy adventurers. The governine it was a despotism, shired with the heads of tribes and matigated chiefly by the influence of such holy and religions families as those already mentioned, and by the power of insurrection and revolt, a dangerous instrument, of most uncertain operation, but to which the cyls of misgovernment and feelings of despan often drove the subjects in the turbulent times that ensued

The news of the death of Sultan Umersheikh Mirza, nis futhers, which happened it Akhsi on the 9th of June 1494, 4 Raman, reached Baber the following day at Andeján, where he 500, was then hving The young prince instantly took 1494 horse, with such of his followers as were at hand, and without delay rode to seeme the neighbouring eastle He had reached the gate, and was about to enter, when Shiram laghan, one of the nobles who attended him, being seized with sudden apprehension for his safety, c 3

86

BOOK 1

A D 1494

Báber enters Ande

ján

had hold of his bridle, and turned his cour-e towards the public Id-gáh, or Prayer-Ground In truth, Báber's situation was not free from danger Sultan Ahmed Mirza of Samaikand was at that very time invading the kingdom with a hostile army, and it occurred to Shiram, that, if the young prince entered the eastle, the Begs of Andeján, who would thereby have hum in their power, hight make their peace with Sultan Ahmed by seizing and giving up his ucplew. No sooner, however, was it known in the fort that the young Sultan was drawing back, than khwája Moulána Kazi^{}, a man of the first weight, and the Begs who were in the place, sent to invite him to enter, assuring him of their hearty loyalty, and warmest co-operation

The Khwaja was the heid of a religious family of the greatest reputation, wealth, and influence in the country, which for namy years had virtually held, by a sort of hereditary succession, the office of Sheikh-ul-Islam, or Judge in civil and religious cases which in Musulman countries are alike decided by the Koran and its expositions. This family traced back its influence to Sheikh Burhán-ed-dín Kily, a saint of much renown, and had long been regarded as the religious guardians and protectors of the country The messenger of the Khwaja and friendly Begs overtook Báber just before he reached the Id-gáh, and prevailed upon him, and his attendants, to return and enter the castle, as they had at first intended A consultation was then held, when it was resolved to put the town instantly in a state of defence Hasan Yakub, a nobleman of high rank, and some other Begs, airiving a day or two afterwards, from a service on which they had been de tached, joined them, and Hasan Yakub was made Master of the Household.

The youthful monarch, on mounting the throne, found

• He is probably the same whom hammed Sadr, Tar Resh f 364 Mirra Haider calls Moulana Muthat his situation was by no means in easy one, and that, char i smill as his fither's dominions were, he did not enjoy them by a quiet and undistribed succession We have confeseen that I mersheikh Muza not long before his death, deracy had quarrelled with his brother, the Sultan of Samarkind", who hid in consequence entered into a league against him with Sultin Mahimud, Khan of Táshkend To confirm this illiance, the Sult in had agreed to give the khin one of his daughters in muninge, and it was concerted that while the Sultan anyaded Ferghána to the south of the river, the Moghul Khan should enter it on the north

In pursuince of this irrangement, the Sultan of Invision of Sum isk und had already entered Umersheikh's country Sutan Ahmed with his army and had scized the western province of Mirza. Unitappa, which has beyond the proper boundaries of Forghina - ifter which he had advinced into that kingdom and had taken possession of the frontier district of hlagend At the moment of his brother's death he hid idded to these conquests the important town of Mirghman in the licit of the country, and was now mirching, with full confidence of success, towards Andependence of the deputed of his nephew

When he arrived on the banks of the Kaba, only sixteen miles from that place, he was met by a mission,

* The princes of Faimurs fa unity, even those who held the su preme power, had not yet assumed the title of shah or padshah, ling or emperor, they were called Mir or Mirza, and often Sultan In the text, however, the ruling prince is often called lying, for distinction s sake, following the usage of historians in general, and even of Baber lumself. The title of Sultan was not confined to the sovereign, many cluefs, and children of chilefs, especially among the Moghul Iribes, being called by that name, which is an Arabic term, nearly equivalent to I ord The titles, Mir, Mirza, and Shah, came also, in process of time, to be very commonly given to religious guides and holy men, or mendicants, and, from a sort of flattery, were often continued to the descendants as part of the family The title of Mirza, in later name times, has been lavished by common usage on secretaries and clerks, and in general on all who pretend to learning Mirza is merely mirzadch, son of a Mir

C 4

A D 1494

at the head of which was Khwája Moulána Kazi, who in Báber's name entreated the Sultan to withdraw from Feighána, and to allow the young prince to retain the government of his father's kingdom, representing, in the true spirit of Asiatic remonstrance, that his nephew was at once his servant and his son, that the Sultan, even if master of the country, must necessarily exercise his authority by a delegate, and that, by leaving Báber in that situation, he would at the same time gratify his own interest But Sultan Ahmed's ministers, by whom he was entirely guided, being averse to this arrangement, the proposal was rejected, and the army marched on

The expedition, however, entirely failed of its object The Kába which they had to cross in their advance, which the invaders proceeded to cross, but in so dis-orderly a manner, that, numbers crowding over at the same time, all fell into confusion, and many of the horses and camels were pushed over into the river below Something similar had happened to the and drowned and drowned Something similar had happened to the army of Samaikand three or four years before, when the Sultan's troops were seized with a panic in crossing the Chiri near Táshkend, in consequence of which they had been totally defeated by a more handful of Moghuls, and crowds both of men and horses had perished in the stream This coincidence, which seemed ominous, disheartened the troops To add to the impression thus made, a distemper broke out among the cattle of the cump, and carried off numbers of the horses While they were thus dispirited, they found the men of An-deján, on the other hand, animated by the noblest spirit, resolute to defend their country and prince, and detei-mined not to submit to the invaders All these circumstances soon led to a negotiation, and terms of perce were agreed upon, when the invading army had CHAP I advanced within four miles of Andeján What these terms were is nowhere specified, but they were pro- Pacificabibly founded on the basis of the Sultan retaining his tion conquests, since Khojend, Marghinán, and Uratippa continued to remain for some time in the possession of the Sultans of Samarkand Sultan Ahmed Mirza, whose health was fast declining, now ieturned homewards, but had made only a few days' match when he died, in the territory of Uratippa, having survived his brother, Báber's father, only forty drys He was succceded in the kingdoms of Samarkand and Bokhara by his third brother, Sultan Mahmúd Mirza, the sovereign of Hissái *

While these transactions were taking place on the Invasion of south side of the Siri, Sultan Mahmúd Khan, the Khan of the Moghuls of Tashkend, and Baber's naternal uncle, ghuls, had matched up the north bank of that river to fulfil his part of the treaty, had passed the hills that separate the territory of Shahrokhía from Feighána, had entered that country, and laid siege to Akhsi Báber's younger brother, Jehángír Mirza, was then in the town, which seems to have been his appanage Some nobles, who happened to be in the neighbourhood, threw themselves into the place, which was very strong, and bravely defended it Nash Mirza, the third brother, resided at Kasán, a district also on the north side of the river His governor having some quarrel with certain other chiefs, they, influenced by party fcelings, delivered up Kásán to the Khan, even before he approached it, but Násu Mirza was hurried off by his governor, and committed to the custody of Sultan Ahmed Mirza, his uncle, just before that prince commenced his march back from

* Babers Mem pp 18, 19, Tar Resh f 83 Haider Mirza says (Tar Resh f 85) that Sultan Ahmed entered Andejan to prevent its falling into the hands of the Moghuls This does not seem to be borne out by the facts, though it might have been the pretext Ferishta (vol 11 p 5 Briggs s transl.) says that the peace was never ratified

A TO 1494

the Khan of the MoBOOK I Andeján Akhsi was the strongest fortress in Ferghána, the Khan's men were not at all fit for conducting sieges, and he himself happened to fall sick When he found that the Sultan had made peace, and that there were no hopes of taking the town, he became disgusted with the war, and, like his ally, put an end to the campaign, and retired to his own country

In another quarter the Khan seems to have been more successful The province of Uratippa or Ushrushna, which his lower down the Sirr, to the westward of Ferghána, had for some years been in the possession of Umersheikh Just before his death, it was seized by the troops of Sultan Mahmúd Khan, and the government bestowed on his most intimate friend, Muhammed Husein Mirza Doghlat, the eldest son of the late Haider Mirza, the Amír of Káshghar, and who, having married a sister of the Khan, and of Báber's mother, was honoured with the title of Korkán *

and of Ababeker of Káshghar Nor were these the only attacks which the youthful prince had to sustain His dominions were invaded, at this time, on the east also, by Ababeker Mirza Doghlat, the ruler of Kashghar, who advanced, plundering the country, as far as Uzkend  $\dagger$  in the east of Ferghána, where he built a fort But that irruption was checked with less difficulty than either of the others An adequate force being sent against him, Ababeker was glad to conclude a peace and to recross the mountains of Káshghar  $\ddagger$

Muhammed Husein had been brought up in early life with Sultan Mahmúd, who, we are told, could never bear his absence, and always famiharly called him Dash, which, in the Moghul language, means friend Tar Resh f 74 The Moghuls called the Chághatái of Máwerannaher, "kara dásh," f 105 The term Gokaltash, or Kokiltash, which so often occurs in the history of India (frequently and more properly written Gokaldash, fosterbrother), seems properly to mean heart, or bosom-friend, from this Moghul term dash and gokal, which signifies the heart Of Korkán, various derivations have been given, but it seems originally to have meant a son-in-law of the Khan

† Called also, Urlend and Aderkend

‡ Baber's Mem pp 19, 20

All foreign enemies being thus expelled, the chiefs CHAP I who had defended Akhsı with so much success, now _ 1494 brought Jehángír Mirza and the late king's family Hasan across the river to Andeján, where the ceremonies of Tákub, Protector mourning for the dcceased monarch were performed, and governments and other rewards assigned to such of the chiefs as had distinguished themselves in this successful defence of the country The chief direction of affairs, and of the young plince, was vested in Hasan Yákúb, as Protector, who received the government of Andejan This situation, however, that nobleman did not long enjoy Intrigues agitate the court of a little Tartar prince as well as of the greatest monarch An ambassidor having come from Báber's uncle, Sultan ▲ н 900. Mahmúd Mırza, the new Sultan of Samarkand, bring-A D 1494 ing presents on the occasion of his eldest son's marriage, it was alleged, with oi without foundation, and believed, that this ambussador had entered into a treasonable understanding with the Piotector, who had suffered himself to be gained over to the interests of the Sultan The ambassador took leave, "but," says the roy al historian, "in the course of five or six months, the manners of Hasan Yákúb underwent a visible change Hc began to behave very ill to those who were about me, and it became evident that his ultimate object was to depose me, and make Jehángír Muza king in my place "* In consequence of these suspicions, a party was formed, headed by Ars or Isan-doulat Begum, Baber's maternal grandmother, the widow of Yúnis Khan, a lady of high Moghul extiaction and of great influence and talent Having met privately and con-sulted together, the confederates resolved to seize Hasan Yákúb That nobleman, however, getting intimation of their design, effected his escape but soon after, when attempting to make himself master of Khokán†

* Biber's Mem p 27

л D 1494-5 į

Death of Sultan Mahmúd Mirza, Rebi II. A 11 900, January, A D 1495

Bayesın ghar succeeds in

Samarkand

(at the present day called Kokán, and the capital of the whole country), he was intercepted by the troops sent against him, and slain in a nocturnal shirmish

Sultan Mahmúd Muza did not long suivive his exaltation to the throne of Samai kand, having died about six months afterwards IIe is represented as a prince of talent, but of incurably debauched and profligate manners * The population of Samai kand, ininediately on hearing of his death, rose upon Khosiou Shah, his prime adviser, who had accompanied him from his old principality of Ilissái The Terkhán Begs, who at this time possessed great influence in Bokhara and Samarkand, and other leading men, succeeded in allaying the tumult, and sent off Khosiou to Hissár, at that time held by Sultan Masáúd Mirza, the eldest son of the late monarch, to whom his father had given it when he removed to Samarkand They then held a consultation, at which it was agreed to pass over Masáúd, _ and to call in Bayesanghar Milza, his younger brother That prince was accordingly sent for, from his government of Bokhara, and placed on the vacant throne of Samarkand †

We have seen that Báber did not recover possession of Uratippa, nor of Khojend Nor was his hold of the rest of his father's dominions altogether secure At this crisis one Ibráhím Sáru, a Moghul, surprised the fort of Asfera, in the southern province of Ferghána, and declared for Bayesanghar Báber marched against him, and after a siege of forty days, in the course of which he ran mines, and employed battering machines, ieduced the place Ibráhím, who had been long in the service of Báber's mother, came down from the fortress, and presented himself before the young king, in the

* "Mirza Sultan Mahmud, the most discreet and virtuous, according to our author" (the author of the Kholaset-ul Akhbár), "of all the Sultan s (Abusaid Mirza) children," Prices Retrospect, vol. 111. p 624 The instances adduced by Báber do not admit of this conclusion

† Babers Mem pp 28-33

garb of a suppliant, with a seymitar suspended from CHAP T his neek, and, by the intercession of Kazi Moulána, he A D 1495 was pridoned From Asferr, Báber proceeded to recover the important country of Khojend, which, he tells Baber re us, was sometimes considered as no prit of Ferghana, covers and, on his approveh, it was surrendered to him by Bay es ingli il's gov ei nor *

When at Khojend, Báber was not far from Shahrok- Visits Sulhía, where his maternal uncle, Sultan Mahmúd Khan, múd Khan the elder Khan of the Moghuls, then happened to be, and, undeterred by the unfriendly attempt which that chief had so lately made to deprive hum of his dominions, he resolved to pay him a visit, in the hope of removing any misunderstunding that might still exist between them, and at the same time of conciliating his Shahrokhía lies north of the Siri, between fayour Khojend and Táshkend The Khan, a true Moghul, born and bred in the deseit, and the genuine representative of Chengiz Khan, received him in state, sitting in a pavilion which was creeted in a gaiden "Imme-diately on entering," says Baber, "I made three low bows The Khan returned my salutation by rising from his seat, and embracing me, after which I went back and again bowed once, when the Khan, inviting me to come forward, placed me by his side, and showed me every mark of affection and kindness" Having spent a few drys with his uncle, Báber retuined to Akhsı, by the right bank of the river, and then crossed ovei to Andeián "

On his return from this excursion, Baber was at a Plunders loss in what why to pay his thoops A tribe called the Jagraks Jagrak inhabited the wild and sugged country between Feighána and Káshghai Bábei despitched a force against them, which entered the country and drove off about twenty thousand sheep and fifteen hundred horses, which he divided among his followers

^{*} Báber s Mem pp 33, S4

[†] Ibid p S4

A p 1495-

6

Invides Uratiopa,

which is

taken by the Khan

Not long after, Båber made a sudden uruption into Unatippa, in hopes of recovering that district, which had belonged to his father It was then held by Sultan Ali Miiza, under his brother Bayesanghar of Samarkand As Baber approached, the Mirza retired, leaving Sheikh Zulnún in coinmand, as governor Báber sent Khalífa, a favou ite officei, to communicate with Zulnún, and to bring him over to his interest But the Sheikh, far from being shaken in his fidelity, seized the envoy and ordered hun to be put to death Khalifa, with great difficulty, effected his escape, and, naked and on foot, rejoined the camp But the season was far advanced, and Báber, on entering the country, found that the unhabitants had taken in all their grain and provender, so that he was constrained to retrie, from wanting the means of subsistence Soon after his retreat, the Khan's people, crossing the Sirr, attacked and took Uratippa Instead of restoring it to Báber, however, the Khan gave it to his brother-in-law, and particular friend and favourite, Muhamined Husein Konkán, Doghlat, who kept possession of it foi nearly nine years, down to the time when Sheibáni Khan overran and took possession of that and of several of the neighbouring districts This part of his father's dominions, therefore, Baber never possessed *

Ramzan, A 11 901, May or June, A.D 1496

ли 908, ль 1502

Sultan Huseín invades Hissár It was after Báber's return from this expedition that he was joined by a body of Uzbeks and Doghlat Moghuls, who for some time past had been settled in Hissár They had just been driven from that country, by the invasion of Sultan Husein Mirza, the Sultan of Khorásán That able and ambitious prince, probably wishing to take advantage of the death of Sultan Mahmúd Mirza, for at this period the death of any prince seems uniformly to have led to a scramble for his dominions, had advanced with a powerful army into the term tories of Sultan Mashud Muza, who now possessed chap i A D 1496 Hissái-Shidman, and the other states which had been enjoyed by his late fither before he succeeded to Sumark and Misuid collected an army beyond the Annu, marched to Turmez, and for some time prevented the Sultan from crossing the river But no sooner had a detachment of his army effected a passage by stilltagem, thin Masuud, in spite of the remonstrances sultan of Wah, his minister, Khosron Shah's brother, who Massaid proposed a rapid attack on the small party that had erossed fled in alurm to Hissár, and, on hearing of the Sultan's approach, instintly, without even an attempt to free his enemy, abandoned his kingdom, fled disgracefully, and took shelter with Bayesaughar Muza, his younger brother in Summkand

In consequence of this unbeenlity, Mashud's army was broken up, Walt drew off towards Khutlán His brother Biki Cheghaniám, with other chiefs, fortified hunself in Hissir Khunzeh Sultan and Mehdi Sultan, who some years before had left Sheibáni Khan's service and entered Malunuid's with a body of Uzbeks, and Muhammed Doghlat and Sultan Husem Doghlat, who with a body of Mogliuls from Káshgai had settled in Hissin, retired into the mountains of Knintigin The Sultan of Herat sent in pursuit of them a body of troops, who were defeated in the defiles of the country, and the leaders taken, but set at liberty The Uzbek and Moghul chiefs then crossed the mountains to Andeján, as has been mentioned, and offered then services to Báber, who willingly accepted them

Meanwhile Biki, who had thrown himself into Hissár, Báki dewas successful in standing a siege of two or three fonds lis-months, against all the efforts of the Sultan, and his elder brother Khosrou Shah, the prime minister of Masáúd, who took charge of the counties on the south side of the river, adopting on this occasion a bolder and more generous policy than his master, having

A D 1490

and Khosrou, Kunduz,

Bay csanghar defeats the Khans

> ли 900, ли 1495

fortified himself in Kunduz, resisted with equal success the attack of Badi-cz-zemán Muza, the Sultan's eldest son, whom his father had sent with a division of his army to crush hum, and whom Khósrou, with an inferior force, contrived to shut up in his camp So effectually was the Mirza thwarted in his object, that he was at length glad to icticat, when the eneny hung on his real, and halassed him in skirmishes The Sultan, disconcerted by the bold defence of Ilissái, and by his son's want of success, was content to patch up a peace, and to cover the shame of his retreat by negotiating a maninge between a sister of Sultan Mashud and a son of his own This well-timed and successful resistance was the immediate origin of the great power which Khosiou Shah afterwards attained * At this very period some events occurred at Sa-markand, which had great influence on Báber's future fortunes Bayesanghar Mirza, the new Sultan, had been rather foitunate in the commencement of his reign A paity in his capital, at the head of which was Sultan Juneid Birlás, a man of weight in the country, who felt their views of ambition thwarted by the ascendency of the Sultan's Terkhan ministers, had invited the elder Khan of the Moghuls, Sultan Mahmúd, who was ever ready to enter into any scheme that promised to increase his power, to enter the teriltory of Samarkand with a hostile army Bayesanghai, with much expedition and energy, led out a well-appointed body of troops to meet the Moghul invaders He fell in with them near Kánbái, a town of Samarkand, upon which the advanced body of the Moghuls, the flower of their troops, dismounted and began to discharge their powerful arrows against their assailants But the currassiers of the Samarkand army, charging at full speed, broke their lines, trampled them down

Báber, pp 37—39

under foot, and cut them to pieces The main body, char i on seeing this slaughter, were seized with alarm and did not stand their ground Numbers were slain, and л D 1490 many taken prisoners These were brought before the Sultan's tent and beheaded as they arrived, and such, we are told, was the number of Moghuls thus put to death, that the open space in front of it being again and again menmbered with the heaps of dead bodies, it was thrice necessary to shift the Sultan's tent to clear ground The Khan hastened back to Táshkend, with the loss of three or four thousand men *

But this success, though it defeated the machinations Displayer of the conspirators for a time, did not secure the Sultan the Terfrom new dangers He was so imprudent as to displease the leading men of Samarkand, and especially the powerful fimily of the Terkhans Having probably been brought up in early life among the Begs and sol-diers of Hissár, he showed them on all occasions a marked partiality The two last sovereigns of Samaikand, the Sultans Ahmed and Mahmúd Mirza, were the sons of Sultan Abusaid by his chief wife, who was a daughter of Urda-bugha Teikhán Her brother, Derwish Muhammed Terkhán, who was thus the uncle of these two princes, had during their reigns possessed the highest influence, and it was chiefly to him and to the Terkhán family, that Bayesanghar, who was a younger son, owed his crown Derwish Muhammed, indiguant at seeing the principal direction of affairs committed to the hands of provincials, left Bokhara in who prodisgust, and repaired to Kaishi, where Sultan Ali ^{clalm}_{Sultan Ali} Mirza, a younger brother of Bayesanghar Mirza, then ^{Mirza} was, declared hun king, and matched towards the capital

The issue of these proceedings was that Bayesanghar Bayesang was seized by stratagem in his palace and conveyed to her seized.

н

* Baber, p 33

97

the citadel, where Mirza Ali also was The rebels then BOOK L consulted together and determined to send lum to the N D 1496 palace of Gok serái * This was a palace in the citadel of Samarkand, said to have been built by Taimur It was there that every prince of the house of Taimur, when he became king, mounted the throne; and there that every one who aspired to it unsuccessfully met his doom; so that to say that a prince had been sent to the Gok-serál, was perfectly well understood to intimate that he had been effectually disposed of. But while things were in this state, Bayesanghar, having been allowed, under some pretence, to enter a building in the garden of the citadel, contrived to force his way escapes through a sewer or aqueduet, and he afterwards let himself down over the walls of the fortress, and escaped to a village in the suburbs, where he took refuge in the house of Khwájika Khwája, a person of high reputation for sanctity, and of the first influence in the kingdom The Terkháns, after waiting for some time without, entered the garden-house, and ascertained that their prisoner was gone.

Having traced him to the Khwája's house, they surrounded it, demanding that he should be delivered up to them This, however, the Khwája firmly refused, and such was the singular influence of these religious families in that age and country, an influence which in no small degree has been preserved to them down to our own times, that even the despotie Terkháns were too much afraid of the populace to venture to use force to withdraw him from the protection of these venerated men In the course of a few days, some Begs, who were attached to Bayesanghar, being supported by the

Insurrection in favour of > * Green-Palace The Gok-scrai pulace is said, by Baber, to have been built by Taimur, yet the palace of Gok-ser ii is mentioned by Petis de la Croix, Hist. de Gengluz-can, p 214, as existing in the time of that conqueror, apparently on the authority of Abulfaraj, see also the same history, p 287 The palace may have been rebuilt by Taunur citizens, who use trimultuonsly, repaired to the Khwá- chap r ia's house, and bore hun off in traimph into the city A p 1496 They at the same time blocked up Sultan Ah and the Breshang Terkhans in the citadel That fortress, not being prohar vided for a sicge, could not stand out a single day Sultan Ah fell into his brother's hands, along with Derwish Muhammed and other Terkháns, the rest escaped to Bokhara Derwish Muhammed was put to death Sultan Ah Mirza was sent, instead of his brother, to sultan Mi taken the place of Gok-seria, for the purpose of being blinded by the fire-penel. It recordingly was applied to Sultan Ah's eyes, after which, as being no longer qualified for public life, he was allowed to retue into the city There he repared to the house of Khwan Yahia, the brother of Khwanka Khwaja who has been mentioned Yahia, like his brother, had a high reputation for sanctity, but was the head of a different faction, and his rival Sultan All had attached lumself to hum as his spurtual guide He was hospitably and honourably received Whether it happened from want of skill on the part of the operator, or from intention, yet so it was that Sultan Ali's sight had sustained no essential injury This, however, escapes to he carefully concealed, and, in a few days, escaping to Bokhára, rejoined the Terkhán Beys *

Bayesanghai was soon informed of his biother's escipe, and conscious of the danger he had to apprehend from the irritated Terkháns, led an army to expel them from Bokhára But Sultan Ah minehing ont, attacked, defeated, and pursued him back to Samaikand

These events, and the confusion and anarchy with Samarkand which they were attended in the kingdom of Samarkand, did not escape the observation of Báber, who resolved to try his fortune also in that great scene of his ancestors' glory At the same moment, and induced by the same motives, Sultan Masaúd Muza, who had

* Baber, pp 3S-10

retured to Hissár on the retreat of the Sultan of Herát, BOOK I also entered that kingdom at the head of an army, ac-A p 1496 companied by Wali, the brother of his minister Khos-Shawel, 100 Shah His claim was founded on his being the л н 90). June or eldest son of the late king, and the elder brother of two A 10 1490 of the competitors, and was supported by the power of his extensive dominions Thus that unfortunate city, unfortunate from its very wealth and former prosperity, saw itself beleaguered on three sides, at the same time, by the arms of three different potentates, who acted without concert, Báber having advanced towards it from Andeján, Masaúd Muza from Hissúr, and Sultan Ali Mirza from Bokháia Sultan Ali now proposed to Báber that they should enter into a treaty of alhance and mutual co-operation, to which Báber willingly agreed, and these two Muzas, actuated more by jealousy of their rival than by any confidence in each other, accordingly had an interview on horseback near Samaikand, in the midst of the river Kolnk, into which they cautiously advanced from the opposite banks, each attended by gemited number of followers But as the autumn was aready drawing to a close, and winter fast approaching, and as the country round Samarkand, exhausted by the presence of so many armies, was altogether unable to furnish the requisite provisions and provender for the troops, all the invading princes were compelled to withdraw into their own territories On this occasion the Uzbek chiefs who have been mentioned as having joined Báber from Hissár, finding perhaps that his little kingdom had nothing to feed the hopes or satisfy the rapacity of adventurers, instead of accompanying him back to it, separated from him, and went to Samarkand, where they were gladly welcomed, but, in a short time, finding that things were not managed there to their satisfaction, they left it also, and joined their native chief Sheibáni Khan, in Turkistán *

* Baber, pp 41, 42

July,

BOOK 1

"So many of the townspeople and traders came from Samarkand, that the camp was like a city, and you could find in it whatever is procurable in towns"*

From the station of Yuret-Khán, Báber moved first to the meadow of Kulbeh, and next to the hill of Kohek, on a different side of the town. When the people of Samarkand saw the army on its march from the one position to the other, thinking that it was on its retreat, and elated with their supposed success, they sallied out, both soldiers and citizens, in great numbers, towards two bridges, which crossed the river Kohek in that direction Báber, observing this movement, watched for the favourable moment, when he ordered a charge of cavalry to be made upon them It was completely successful Numbers were cut down, and many, both horse and foot, taken prisoners The higher officers and the soldiers were treated with the usual courtesy of the time The same indulgence was not extended to the citizens "Of the lower order of townspeople," says the Royal historian, "there were taken Diwánch, a cloth-weaver, and one nicknamed Kılınásúk, who were notorious as the chief ringleaders of the labble, in fighting with stones and heading riots They were ordered to be put to death with torture, in ictaliation for the foot soldiers who had been slam at the Lovers' Cave † This chastisement put an end to all sallies in future, and the effect was such that the besiegers were allowed to advance unopposed up even to the ditch, and to carry off provisions from under the very walls ‡

* Baber, p 44

t The feelings of Baber and his advisers, towards the fighting townspeople of Samarkand, may remind the reader of the similar feelings of the preux checkliers of the Middle Ages towards the citizens and peasantry taken in arms Both thought themselves justified in treating them with crucl severity, and for the same reason. They regarded the use of arms as a monopoly belonging to a privileged class, and punished the inhitary exertions of the lower orders as a troublesome interference with the rights of their superiors.

‡ Baber, p 17

BOOK I reception which he had expected, while the Uzbek, who in the course of his expedition, short as it was, had seen at once the richness of the prey, and the weakness of its defenders, returned back a few days after to Turkistán This is the first hostile appearance in Máwerannaher, of that remarkable man, who afterwards exercised so powerful an influence on the fate of Báber and of Samarkand *

Bayesanghar abandons Samarkand,

That city had now sustained a siege for seven months Bayesanghar had placed his last hope of relief on the arrival of the Uzbek army Seeing that too fail, he gave himself up to despair, abandoned the place and his kingdom, and, attended only by a few attached followers, took the road to Kunduz That district, which lies beyond the Amu, between Balkh and Badakhshán, was then held by Khósrou Shah, who was nominally subject to Sultan Masaúd Mirza of Hissár, but with whom, since that prince's retreat from Hissár, he had quarrelled, and of whom he was in reality independent Masaud could have no wish that his brother and rival should be able to unite himself with a protector so formidable as Khosrou, and Bayesanghar, the fugitive prince, in passing through the territory of Hissár, escaped with difficulty from an attempt inade to seize him, though not without the loss of several of his followers who fell into Masaúd's hands He finally, however, did succeed in reaching Kunduz, where he was well received by Khosrou, who though he had been the chief minister of his father, being at that time engrossed with his own schemes of power and of conquest, regarded Bayesanghar as a fit institument for his soaring ambition which is occupled by Báber,

ł

No sooner did Báber hear of the flight of Bayesanghai, than he hastened from his cantonments towards Samaikand "On the road," says he, "we were met

* Báber, pp 47, 48

I the chact man of the city and by the Begs, and char i these were followed by the young cavaliers who all  $\frac{1}{A + 0.1407}$ cans out to welcome me. Having proceeded to the  $\frac{1}{1.000}$  of citized 1 dighted in the Bostan Serie (Garden palace). An 903 and towards the end of the month of the former Rebi, Nor 1407 by the favour of God 1 gained complete possession of the city and country of Simarkand'* Baber was then in his fatteenth year.

What share Sultan Ah Mirza had in these transiet ons does not appear no mention being mide of him during the siege. Eaber whether in consequence of special agreement, or of his superior activity, alone entered the city. Sultan Ah had previously, however, overrun some of the dependent districts, especially those in the neighbourhood of Bokhara, and continued to retain possession of them as well as of that city.

The city of Sumark and, the possession of which thus rewarded the perseverance of the youthful Biber, was one of the richest and most populous at that time in the world. It had been the capital of the great Taumin, and still maint aned its pre-eminence in the countries which he had conquered. Baher gives us an interesting account of its masques colleges, and palaces. It was also emiobled by the observatory of Ulugh Beg † The astronomical tables there composed under the eye of that prince, excited wonder in his own time, and still enrich at least the history of science. The city was situated near the Rolink of Zn-etshán river, called also the Soglid, in a fertile and populous country, and in a delightful clumite, and its territory was remarkable at once for its ample hinvests and for producing † See his Tables of Longitude and Laniude of the Lixed Stars in Hydes Syntagine Dis criationum, tom i Oxou 17(18, 110, and his Geographical Lables, published by Graves in the third vol of the Geographic Minores Graci, Oxon 1711, 510, see also La Fande & Astrononomic, tom 1 pp 126, 127 Paris, 1702, tto 7 105

^{*} Baber, p. 18

the finest funts in the world Taimur boasted that m one of its districts, that of Soghd, which probably re A D 1497 tained the original name of the ancient Sogdiana, he had a garden a hundred and twenty miles in length Its manufactures of paper and of crimson velvet, which were celebrated wherever commerce extended, have been already mentioned The whole country, from the Andeján and the Sirr, to the Amu, including Bokhára, Kesh, and Karshi, was understood to belong to it. The inhabitants were celebrated for the refinement of their manners, their love of learning, and skill in the arts The Persian, we have seen, was the language of Samarkánd and of all the other large towns, while the Túrki tubes, who occupied parts of the open country, preserved their aneient tongue, and their ruder manners

Discontent of his troops,

As Báber did not enter Samarkand by storm, but on the invitation of its inhabitants, and would not sanction the general pillage of a city which he intended should, be his capital, the crowd of adventurers, both Begs and soldiers, who had looked forward to the rich plunder that it was to afford as the reward of the toils which they had endured in a long siege, were extremely diseontented Though he bestowed on them such rewards as he had to give, they considered themselves as defiauded of the fairest and most natural recompense of their labours He intimates, however, that his troops had somehow acquired eonsiderable booty in Samarkand, but that, as all the rest of the country had submitted voluntarily, no kind of pillage whatever had been permitted elsewhere It is probable that obnoxious individuals, or refractory quarters in Samarkand were plundered, and, as the arrogance of a victorious army is not easily enceked, other irregularities might have been committed The city, however, worn out from the long continuance of the blockade, for which it was not originally prepared, or vietualled, and the country, laid waste by the movements of hostile armes for two successive summers, had been reduced to a wretched con- chap r dition, insomuch that, instead of any supplies being A D 1497 drawn from the fertile fields around, it was absolutely necessary for the government to furnish the inhabitants with seed-eorn to sow their grounds, and with other supplies to enable them to subsist till the ensuing har-To levy contributions for his army from such a vest country wis, as Baber himself remarks, quite impos-Ilis soldiers were consequently exposed to much sible distress, and he possessed no adequate means of satis- which detying their wants The men began to drop off, and icturn home The example set by the soldiers was soon followed even by the leaders All lns Moghul horse deserted, and in the end Sultan Ahmed Támbol, a Moghul nobleman of the first rank in Andeján, forsook hun like the rest, and returned home

To put a stop to this defection, Báber sent Khwája Moulana Kázi to Uzun Hassan, who had now the direction of aflairs in Andeján, that he might prevail upon Jehángír hum to punish some of the fugitives, and send the rest deján back But it soon appeared that Uzun Hassan was himself the enemy most to be apprehended After Támbol had joined hum, he no longer showed any reserve A party, at the head of which were Uzun Hassan and Tambol, openly stood up in favour of Jehángín Mirza, Báber's brother, insisting that as the Sultan had now got possession of Samarkand, he should give up Andejan and Akhsi to his brother These countries were at the same time demanded by his uncle, Sultan Mahimúd Khan, the Moghul ruler of Táshkend Both appear to have urged their pretensions under alleged treaties

There is some indistinctness in the account which Bábei gives of the claims of his unele and brother, and, it we may judge from the usages of the times and the few facts known to us, there seems to have been some justice in the demands of both The custom which at that period prevailed of giving each son a separate appanage or principality, led to constant civil wars Báber and Jehángír were born of different mothers, both Moghuls, but of different tribes Jehángír seems to have been in possession of Akhsí as his share of his BOOK I A D 1497 father's succession, and the Moghuls of his mother's clan attached themselves to him, and were desirous to make him independent Most of the misfortunes of Báber's early life arose from this cause When he had the brilliant prospect of acquiring the dominions of Samarkand, it was very natural that to secure the active co operation of Jehángír and his friends, who composed a considerable part of the strength of Ferghána, he should have promised that country to his brother, to be held of the great kingdom of Samarkand, and some cession of territory, in return for assistance required, was probably in like manner promised to the Khan, such as his father Yúnis Khan had formerly re-. ceived Báber indeed affirms that his uncle, the Khan, could have no claim, as during the two years that he had attacked Samarkand, the Khan had given him no assistance, while, in answer to Uzun Hassan's claim on behalf of Jehángír, he says, that as the countries of Andeján and Akhsi, though never promised to the Khan, had been demanded by him, were he now to give them up to his brother, it would lead to unpleasant explanations with his uncle, and he besides remarks, that when this claim was set up for Jehángír, he had himself not above a thousand men of every description with him at Samarkand, that the claim made at such a moment too much resembled a command, and was repelled as peculiarly offensive * Certainly, if the demand was in conformity to the literal terms, it must be allowed to be very little in the spirit of the agreement Everything was now unfavourable

ŝ

A n 1498 Illness of Báber

he sets out for Andejún.

Rejeb, A 11 903.

March, A D 1498

Surrender

of Andelan

While these despatches arrived fast upon each other, the young prince lay at Samarkand, slowly recovering from a severe illness Unfortunately, the confusion of his affairs prevented his laying himself up, and a dan-gerous relapse was the consequence of his exertions For four days the only sustenance he received was from having his tongue moistened with wet cotton Even his most faithful Begs and servants, despairing of his recovery, and thinking that all was over, began to leave him It was at this moment that an envoy arrived from Uzun Hassan During the dejection and disorder that prevailed in the household, he was imprudently introduced where the young prince lay motionless, and was afterwards allowed to depart It so happened, however, that in a few days the vigour of Báber's con-stitution prevailed The violence of the disease abated, and he began to recover, but still the attack left behind a thickness or difficulty of speech Yet, imperfect as was his recovery, so urgent were the letters from his beleaguered friends, that he resolved to abandon his recent conquest of Samarkand, in which he had reigned only a hundred days, and set out for Andeján . În a week he reached Khojend, and there he was niet by the painful intelligence that just a week before, on the very day he had left Samarkand, the castle of Andeján had surrendered to the enemy

It appears that Uzun Hassan's envoy, who had been admitted to the Sultan's sick chamber, reported, on his return, that he had seen him lying at the point of death, speechless, and kept in life only by having his tongue moistened by wet cotton This information was without delay communicated to Ali Dost, the governor of Andeján, and confirmed upon oath by the envoy in his hearing, while he stood on the city-wall, near one of the gates Confounded by the news, and imagining any farther resistance to be unavailing, he entered into a capitulation, and surrendered the place The besugers immediately entered, and considerable severities CHAP I were exercised The attachment of Khwaja Kari to A p 1498 Baber was pumshed by his being ignominiously hanged over the gate of the citadel, to the great horror of a population by whom he was venerated. His family ind dependents were given up to be plundered Báber had owed him much, and was smeerely attached to " I have no doubt," says he, " that Khwaja Kázi  $\operatorname{hum}$ was a sound What better proof of it could be required than the single fict, that, in a short time, no trace or memorial remained of any one of all those who were concerned in his murder? They were all completely extirpated Kliwája Kázi was a wonderfully bold man, which is also no mean proof of sanctity All mankind, however brave they be, have some little anxiety of trepidation about them The Khwaja had not a partiele of either "*

Báber now felt lumself in a most trying situation River 8 distress " To save Andepin," says he, "I had given up Samarkand, and now found that I had lost the one, without preserving the other" His capital and his hereditary dominious were occupied by a hostile faction, in the name of his brother The greater part of his army had left him On no side did he perceive one ray of hope to guide him onwards His situation too was new to him It was the first time he had been so deserted "I became a prey to vevation and melancholy," says he, " for, since I had been a sovereign prince, I never before had been separated in this mannel from my country and followers, and, since the day I had known myself, I had never experienced such care and suffering " Uneertain what to do, being equally shut out fi om Ferghána and Samarkand, he turned for succour to his maternal uncle, Sultan Mahmúd Khan

Since the flight and death of Hassan Yákub, the The Khan enters into Akhsi

BOOK I office of prime minister to Báber had been held by Kásım Beg, Kochın, whom he represents as brave, a A p 1468 man of talents, possessed of a rich vein of humour and an elegant wit, though, by an accident not uncommon among nobles of the Tartar race, he could neither read nor write * Kásim Beg was now despatched to Táshkend, to prevail upon the Khan to march against Andeján. He succeeded in his mission The Khan, who, with the true Tartar love of spoil, was ever ready to put his army in motion, where a country was to be plundered, marched up the right bank of the Sirr towards Akhsi, the portion of Ferghána nearest to his The hostile and confederated lords, on their territory part, hearing of his advance, recrossed the river from the Andeján side, and encamped so as to cover Akhsi There they contrived to engage the Khan in a negotiation, and by their arts of persuasion, and, as Báber intimates, by their bribes to the negotiators, prevailed upon him to retire back the way he came

But retreats.

The defection of his only ally rendered the situation of the young prince more desperate than ever Several of the Begs and soldiers who still adhered to him had their wives and families in Andeján Anxious for their safety, and seeing now no other way to protect them, such as were so situated separated from Báber to the number of seven or eight hundred men, and returned home, leaving only two or three hundred adherents to the late conqueror of Samarkand "I was now reduced to a very distressed situation," says he, " and wept a great deal" He went on to Khojend, which still ad-5 There he was joined by his mother and hered to him grandmother from Andeján, and by the families of several of those who were still attached to his fortune, and there he spent the month of Ramzán, the great

* Báber's Mem p 16

Mulianmedan fast* He then renewed his application CHAP L for resistance to his uncle, who was always sufficiently AP 1498 ready to put his troops in motion, though generally to no very great purpose As the Khan's recent treaty probably prevented any new effort against Andejún, Biber determined once more to make an attempt on Sumarkand The Khun sent his son with four or five thousand men to assist hun, but before Báber could join them in the Samarkand territory, they had heard of the approach of the Uzbeks under Sheibáni Khan, and had hirriedly retreated homewards Baber, therefore, unable to accomplish anything with his own slender means, returned to Khojend †

The vigorous and elastic spirit of Baber was not to visits the be broken by this series of disappointments and discomfitures He once more crossed the great river, and repaired to the Court of his uncle, the Khan of the Moghuls, to crave his assistance in recovering his 1 father's kingdom Bábei's mother, we have seen, was the sister of the Khan, Jehángir's, as has been remarked, was also a Moghul, but of a different tribe The Khan, after some solicit ition, granted the young Sultan a feeble and inefficient reinforcement of eight hundred Moghuls, with which he surprised and carried by escalade the fort of Násukh, about forty miles from Khojend But, finding it too far off to be conveniently rctained, he abandoned it, and i eturned back to that town

As Khojend was a small district that could hardly support two hundred retainers, it was of importance to Báber to afford it some relief from the burden of maintaining even his small army For this purpose he endeavoured to prevail upon his neighbour and maternal uncle, Muhammed Hassein Korkán Doghlat, who, as has

Ι

 A н 903, Ramzan, A в 1498, May It was on the 22nd May, 1498, and while Baber was overwhelmed by misfortune, that Vasco been mentioned, had held Uratippa under the Khan for BOOK I the last three or four years, to lend him the village of Bishágher, in the district of Yárailák for one winter. л.п 1498-9 Goes to Bishagher, It had formerly belonged to the late Kkwaja Kazi, and lying on the road to Samarkand, was particularly favourable to Báber's views Muhammed Hussein was finally prevailed upon to consent to this arrangement, and Báber removed to Bishágher, where he exerted himself with such activity during the winter, that, by stratagem or negotiation, he got possession of a great л п 904, part of the country of Yarailák. а р1498 9

When the young Sultan, after occupying Samarkand which he is for a hundred days, had left it on his return towards Andeján, the imperial city was occupied by his cousin, Sultan Alı Mırza of Bokhára, who had been his ally and coadjutor during the siege As Yárailák was dependent on Samarkand, Sultan Alı, now advanced with a large force to expel the intruder, and Báber, _ who had not three hundred men with him, deprived of all means of a successful resistance, was com-pelled to withdraw from the limited conquests that he had made, and altogether to abandon that part of the country Unwilling by returning to Khojend, to oppress the inhabitants of that little district, who for nearly two years had supported him and his band of followers, he turned off to the Iláks, a hilly tract south of Uratippa, where, living the unsettled life of a fugitive, he spent some time perplexed and distracted with the hopeless state of his affairs

> " One day while I remained there," says he, "Khwája Abul Makaram, who, like myself, was an exile and a wanderer, came to visit me I took the opportunity of consulting him with respect to my situation and con-cerns — whether it was advisable for me to remain ~ where I was, or to go elsewhere, --- what I might attempt, and what I should leave untried He was so much affected with the state in which he found me, that he shed tears, and after praying over mc, took his

Goes to the Iláks,

2

¥

compelled to leave

departure I myself was also extremely affected' CHAP I. That very day, about afternoon prayers, a horseman . 1499 was descried at the bottom of the valley. He proved to be a servant of Alı Dost" (the governor who had sur-rendered Andeján) "He came with a message from his master to inform me that he had undoubtedly offended deeply, but that he trusted to my clemency for forgiving his past offences, and that if I would march to join him, he would deliver up to me the town of Mar- Invited to ghinán, and would do me such service and duty as would wipe away his late errors and free him from his disgrace "*

No sooner did the young Sultan receive this welcome message than he mount and set out for Marghinán was then about sunset The next three nights and two days he and his followers rode without halting, except to refresh and feed their horses Before sunrise, on the third morning, they had arrived within four miles of Marghinán, having ridden about a hundred It was now only that they began to consider, that on a former occasion Ali Dost had joined the enemy, and, even at the present moment, held Marghinán for them, that there had been no mutual intercourse with him, by which his real sentiments could be ascertained, that he might at that very time be treacherous, and leading them into a snare Báber and his friends consulted together, and, though they saw that their apprehensions were not unreasonable, still it was agreed that their prudence had come too late, their whole party being worn out, both men and horses, and besides, so desperate was their present condition, that it was worth their while to hazard everything They therefore pushed on, and early in the morning reached the gate of the castle Here they found Alı Dost, who received them standing over the gateway, the gate being shut

* Báber's Mem p 65

Marghinán,

¹²

Discontent in Ferghäus

He asked terms, which were granted him, when he threw open the gates, made his submission to his sovereign, and conducted him to a house in the fort Báber had about 240 followers with him on this journey

The possession of Marghinán, which lay far advanced in Ferghána, placed him in rather a better situation than he had been for a long time past. He found that Uzun Hassan and Támbol, who directed the councils of his brother Jehángír, had resorted to some harsh measures, that their government had become unpopular all over the country, and that his own restoration was very generally desired. To take advantage of the prevailing discontent, he sent Kásun Beg with a small body of a hundred men to the highlands south of Andeján to attempt to raise the country, while Ibráhún Sáru was despatched with about the same number to cross the river towards Aklisi, and to try what could be done in the northern provinces

Uzun Hassan and Támbol, on hearing of Báber's success, collected not only the whole of their own followers with the Moghuls who were attached to them, but called out every man in Andeján and Akhsi who was able to bear arms, and taking Jehángír Mirza along with them, marched to invest Báber in Marghinán Though the flower of the Sultan's little army had been sent off with the detachments, he was not dismayed, but, with the few old followers still left with him, and such new ones as he could raise on the spur of the occasion, he assumed a bold attitude, marched out, faced the enemy as they advanced to the town in battle array and in great force, and engaged and harassed them with such effect as to hinder their advancing beyond the outskirts of the suburbs On two following days, when they came on in force to drive him from his position, he was⁻ equally successful

Meanwhile the two small detachments that he had sent out were daily making progress That under Kásim Beg was joined, as well by the peasants as by the Uzun Has-) san Invades Marghinán, tribes, whether wandering or settled, in the southern CHAP L hill country, while the other under Ibráhím Sáru that A = 1499had crossed the Sirr, found the inhabitants there also universally disgusted with the new government. On their approach, the townspeople of Akhsi, the second city of the kingdom, rose upon the garnison with sticks and clubs drove them out of the town, forced them to fly into the citidel, ind then called in Ibráhím. To add to this success, a body of troops sent by Báber's uncle the Khan imarched up the river, and passing the defiles, joined the detachment in the town of Akhsi

The news of these occurrences alarmed Uzun Hassan He instantly sent back from his eamp at Marghinán a body of chosen men, with orders to cross the river and relieve the troops who were shut up in the citadel of Akhsi When this detachment arrived opposite that town, by some oversight, in not pulling sufficiently high up the stream, the boat in which they were ferried across the Sirr missed the intended landing-place, and by the force of the current was carried down below the works into shallow water, where it could be reached by the enemy's horse, who instantly rode into the river and attacked them. They were all put to death or taken prisoners

When this misfortune was known in Uzun Hassan's but recamp, he saw that he could no longer munitain himself near Marghinán The army was led back in great confusion to Andeján But on reaching that capital the confederate chiefs found, to their consternation, that the governoi had declated for Báber This unlookedfor event entirely disconcerted them The army broke up, each chief shifting for himself Uzun Hassan reached the citadel of Akhsi, which he had long held, and where he had left his family Sultan Ahmed Tambol hastened to the eastward, to Ush, which was his proper government, and, before he arrived there, was joined by Jehángír Minza, who, in consequence of a plot

Báber enters Andeján Zlikadeh, A 11 904 June, A 12 1499 originating in one of those factions and disputes at that time so common, had been carried off from Uzun Hassan by some of his servants and followers", and was now delivered to Támbol, who was Uzun Hassan's rival

On this change of fortune, Báber once more re-entered his capital, from which he had been excluded nearly two years. Many and severe as were the changes of fortune that he had undergone, he was still little more than sixteen years of age.

When Támbol arrived at Ush he found the entizens in the same state of ferment as the inhabitants of the rest of the country, and indignant at his misgovernment and oppression On his entrance, he was furiously attacked by the commonalty with sticks and stones, and fairly driven out of the place, which declared for Báber Támbol, with Jehángír Mirza and a few partisans who still adhered to them, was now compelled to retire northward to Urkend, near the mountains that border' on Káshghar

Pursues Uzun Hassan,

who capitulates Báber, eager to improve his success, did not waste his time in Andeján In the course of four or five days he followed Uzun Hassan, his most formidable enemy, to Akhsi That chief, finding that it would not serve any good purpose to hold out the citadel, since all the country had become hostile to him, entered into a capitulation, by which he agreed to give up the place, bargaining only for the lives and property of himself, his family and adherents, and for liberty to leave the country The citadel was accordingly surrendered to Báber This flow of success placed the affairs of the Sultan

This flow of success placed the affairs of the Sultan in a more prosperous situation in Ferghána than they had ever before attained since his accession He had recovered his native kingdom, and rebellion was quelled Before returning to his capital he devoted some time to settling the northern provinces of Akhsi and Kásán.

He dismissed the Moghul auxiliaries whom his uncle CHAF L the Khan had sent to his assistance, and then returned x p 1499 to Andeján, currying with him Uzun Hassan, his family and dependents. That chieftrin was allowed to leave the country, in terms of the capitulation, and crossed the southern mountains to Kárátigin, on his way to Hiss'ir, attended by a small retinue All the rest of his former followers remained behind

But one act of imprudence blighted the fair prospects Babersimwhich seemed to be opening to Báber, and plunged him once more in an abyss of danger and difficulty The soldiers whom Uzun Hassan had left behind, especially the Moghuls, had been the instruments of various acts of severity committed under his orders, and probably of many more done on their own account After his departure, they seem to have entered Báber's service, or at least to have acknowledged his sovereignty, trusting to the terms of the cupitulation Several of the native Begs and others, however, who detested these rapacious strangers, represented to the young Sultan, that they were the very men who, during the late disturbances, had pilliged his adherents and the followers of the faithful Khwaja Kazi, and had been guilty of every enormity, and that he was not to expect fidelity from men who had abundoned their own ehiefs They therefore urged hun to issue an order for pillaging these notorious plunderers or, continued they, if it seems going too far to order a general pillage, let us at least not have the mortification to see them riding our horses, wearing our elothes, and killing and eating our own sheep before our eyes it is but fair that we, who have adhered to you in all your changes of fortune, should be suffered to reclam at least such part of our own property is we find in the possession of these marauders, who should be very thankful for getting off on such easy terms Without due consideration, Bábei was prevailed upon to publish an order to that effect, though prudence,

1 J

DODE I. In favour of such only as had accompanied him in his campaigns "Nothing," as he himself remarks, "could have been more imprudent When there was a rival like Jehángír Mirza at my elbow, it was a senseless thing to exasperate so many men who had arms in their hands. From my issuing this single inconsiderate order, what commotions and mutimes ensued! It was in reality the ultimate cause of my being expelled a second time from Andeján "* Báber was one of the few princes who had sufficient wisdom to see, and sufficient superiority of mind to acknowledge and profit by, his eriors. It was this frank and healthful spirit of observation that helped to carry him through all the difficulties of his chequered life.

Revolt of the Moghuls

who joins Támbol

Defeat of Kúsim Beg The Moghuls were not to be plundered with impunity. They were not only brave but numerous, amounting to three or four thousand fighting men They immediately put themselves in a posture of defence, and sent to offer their services to Támbol and Jehángír Mirza, marching at the same time to the eastward to join them The affair was treated by Báber's chief nobles as a slight matter, which did not call for the Sultan himself to take the field It was therefore Mirzaged that Kásim Beg, with some other officers, should lead a detachment of the army after them, and chastise their insolence, and the Beg accordingly set out on the service But it turned out a much more difficult matter than had been anticipated The Moghuls were joined by Támbol Hardly had the Beg passed the Hamish river by the ford of Yasi-kijet, when the two armies met face to face, and engaged After a desperate action, Báber's army was completely routed, and a number of his Begs and officers fell into the hands of the enemy Kásim Beg, and the few who escaped, fled to Andelán and were closely followed by Támbol, who CHAP I advanced within a farsang of the place* A.D 1499

* Baber, p 68

This reverse was most untimely The country, after a long season of uproar and confusion, was just beginning to recover its tranquillity and to fall into order Several of Báber's principal supporters were at a distance, actively employed in their respective governments, nid could not, it the moment, assist him The decided ascendurcy which he had just recovered, was lost again Tambol and Jehingir, improving their victory, ad- Audeián vanced several times insultingly towards the town, with threatened their army langed in order of battle, but Baber declined a general action, at the same time that, by posting his troops under cover, in the gardens, houses, and narrow roads in the suburbs, he always checked the enemy in their movements They shifted their ground repeatedly from one side of the town to another, in hopes of gaining some advantage, but, after remaining about a month in the vicinity of the city, without effecting any thing, they were at last compelled to break up, and moved for Ush, the fort of which was held for Baber, by Ibráhun Saru's men †

The Sultan, on being relieved from this danger, sent Baber to collect the whole force of his little dominions which marches to had been dispersed after the surrender of Uzun Hassan, and, when those nearest at hand were assembled, put his troops in motion towards the end of August 1, and 18 Moharsoon arrived near Ush, the enemy, at his approach, retiring to the northward Next morning, as he was A. P 1499 marching past the town to follow them, he learned with surprise that they had given him the slip, and were in full march for Andeján He proceeded, however, in his route towards Urkend, in which district the strength of Támbol lay, and sent out detachments, who indeed

* A farsang is about three miles and three quarters, or four miles

† Baber, p 70

‡ We are hardly ever informed of the positive strength or numbers of the hostile armies at this period

rem, 905, 25 Aug

And Tambol to Andelán

BOOK I. plundered and laid waste the country, but did nothing effectual Támbol, meanwhile, held on his course towards Andeján, hoping to surprise it He arrived there during the night, and entered the ditch unperceived; but, while his men were planting their scaling ladders, they were observed, and the alarm given; so that the attempt failed, and he was forced to retreat Báber, having returned from Urkend into the territory of Ush, attacked and took Mádu, one of its forts, in which was Khábil, a brother of Támbol, with some of his best warriors, a fortunate occurrence for such of the Sultan's officers and men as had been made prisoners at the defeat of Yási-kijet

The armies lie face to face.

The two armies soon after approached each other, and lay for upwards of a month, with not more than three or four miles between them During this time there were daily skirmishes Báber, whose army was the weaker of the two, drew a trench round his position, and carefully guarded against surprise While thus situated, a Moghul chief, with the branch of a migratory tribe which had been obliged to leave Hissár, in consequence of one of the revolutions so frequent in that age, crossed the Kárátigín mountains and joined him * Encouraged by this unexpected aid, which placed him in a situation to meet the enemy in the field, he advanced towards their camp, to offer them battle Having heard, however, of his increase of strength, they did not venture to await his coming, but retreated hurriedly, with the loss of part of their tents and baggage, so that Báber on coming up encamped on the ground they had quitted Támbol, after marching about twelve miles in the direction of Andeján, halted at Khubán Báber followed him, and Támbol found himself at last obliged to march out and

^{} This was Sultan Ahmed Kerá- his clan wal, the father of Kuch Beg, with engage in a regular battle But, such was the ardour CHAP L and impetuosity of the cavalry in Báber's left wing, A p 1499 that, having charged Támbol's right, they broke and Báber do-feats Tám-L_ totally routed it, even before Báber's right had time to bol. come up The victory was complete, many of the enemy being slain, and many taken prisoners, whose heads were ordered to be struck off, according to the barbarous custom of the times Baber halted at Khubán. This victory, in the first pitched battle that he had fought, delighted him much Támbol and Jehángír Murza escaped towards Urkend, and, as the winter was at hand and little grain or forage to be found in the country, Báber led his army back to Andeján

It soon, however, appeared that the enemy, though Winter defeated, were still in great strength, and that it was necessary to take such a position as would straiten their quarters, and hinder them from overrunning the open -country at will Báber, therefore, in spite of the inclemency of the season, marched his army to the eastward, to Suárásı, a favourable position between two rivers, where he halted his troops, and contrived not only to keep the enemy in check, but to make constant inroads and forays into their country He, at the same time, indulged himself in hunting and fowling, in the fine sporting country in which he lay Unfortunately Kamber Ali and some others of his chiefs began to tire of the severities of a winter campaign, so that, to prevent discontent, the Sultan was obliged to give them permission to return home, and the consequence was, that, after remaining six or seven weeks in that station, he was finally compelled, in consequence of his diminished strength, most unwillingly to break up his quarters and return to Andeján "Had I 1emained all winter in these cantonments," says he, "there is every reason to believe that, by the return of spring, the enemy would

* Baber, pp 72-74

campaign

DOOK I have been reduced to the last extremity, without fight- $\frac{1}{100}$  lng."*

> When Támbol perceived the superiority which Báber had acquired in the field, he felt the necessity there was for looking around him for additional assistance He happened to have an elder brother who held a confidential situation in the household of Sultan Mahmúd Khan, Báber's uncle, and, through him, he contrived to prevail upon that restless prince, who seems to have been ever ready to assist indiscriminately all who asked his aid, to send him a body of auxiliaries Támbol, at the same moment that he learned that Báber had broken up his cantonments, received information that a detachment of the Khan's men was certainly in motion to come to his succour This intelligence emboldened him, in spite of the season, to assume the offensive, and to march from Urkend to Suárási

The Khan's son enters Kásán,

ł

As soon as the alarming news was brought to Bábei's that a son of the Khan, with five or six thousand men, had entered his northern dominions, and laid siege to the important town of Kásán, he lost no time, but with his characteristic activity instantly set out, taking along with him such troops as were at hand He marched all night, and next day reached Akhsi " It was the depth of winter," says he, " the cold during the night was intense, insomuch that several of my people were frost-bitten in the hands and feet, and the ears of some of them were contracted like a withered apple " + Crossing the Sirr at Akhsi, he hastened on to Kásán; but, when he arrived within a mile or two of that town, was met by intelligence that the Khan's army, on getting notice of his approach, without waiting to receive him, had made the best of their way back to their own country but retreats Campaign of Kásán,

Meanwhile Támbol, who was marching by Suárási, as soon as he knew with certainty that Báber had left

* Báber, p 75

† Ibid p 76

Andepin, also crossed to the right bank of the Siri, and CHAP L hastened on by forced marches, hoping to reach Kásán, A D 1500 and join the besiegers, before the young Sultan could arrive In the afternoon of the very day on which Báber came to Kasán, the approach of Támbol's army was descried from a distance Disconcerted and disappointed, when met by information of the precipitate retreat of the Khan's troops, Támbol halted his men Báber, with the ardour of a youthful warrior and the instinctive talent of a general, urged the necessity of attacking the enemy without delay, while they were yet surprised and dispirited His older officers urged that, as the day was about to close, it was better to put off the attack till the morrow, and their advice prevailed Early next morning they mounted and rode to the attack, but the enemy was gone Támbol, aware of his danger, had made his troops retreat, fatigued as they were, as soon as the darkness had fallen, and did not permit them to halt for a moment the whole night They were indeed pur-sued, and at length overtaken, but not till they had found shelter in the fortress of Arkhian Here Baber faced them for five or six weeks, he not being strong enough to besiege the fort, and they not venturing to attack his lines

At the end of that time, Támbol, being invited by a petty chieftain among the Andeján hills, who had revolted from the Sultan, decamped by night, and marched to join him Baber hastened to intercept him in his march, but ineffectually Támbol succeeded in reaching the fort of Beshkhárán, and encamped, protected by it As there was only the distance of a mile or two between the camps, daily skirmishes and single combats took place But Bábei's chief Begs and officers soon began to be tired of this fatiguing and ineffectual warfare, and talked of peace Under these circumstances, Ah Dost and Kamber Ah, the chiefs of greatest influence in his army, managed to conclude a treaty, Báber says, with-

BOOK I out informing him or the Begs most attached to him, of its progress or its terms, till it was concluded, when A.D 1500 acquiescence became a matter of necessity The con-Treaty beditions were, that, the river Sirr should be the boundary Báber and between Báber and his brother Jehángír, Akhsi, Kásán, Jchangle and all to the north of the river being given up to Jchángír, while all to the south, including Urkend, was to belong to Báber, that, time was to be allowed to Támbol and his followers to withdraw their wives and families from Urkend; that after the two princes had tranquillised and settled their respective dominions, they should march in concert together against Samarkand; on the conquest of which kingdom, Báber was to give up Andeján also to his brother This treaty was concluded in the end of February A D 1500, and next day Jehángír and Támbol waited upon Báber, when it was confirmed After this, Jehángír proceeded to Akhsi and Baber to Andeján, and the prisoners on both sides were set at liberty *

* Buber's Mem pp 75-78

tween

End of Rejeb, A IT 905. end of Feb A D 1500

CHAPTER H

SHFID AN ANA - SI COND CONQUEST AND LOSS OF SAMARKAND -BABER IS KHAT UNDER BY THS MINISTER -INVITED TO SAMAR-LAND - ALLAIRS OF THAT COUNTRY - HE ADVANCES TO THE CALITAL -MARCH OL SHEIB (NETO ITS RELIEF - HISTORY OF THAT CHIFF -- FLICHT OF BABER BY HISSAR. -- HE RI SOLVES TO AT-TEMPT SAMARKAND -TAKES IT IN SURPRISE - INS BATTLE WITH SHUBANI. AND DELLAT --- HE IS DESIFCED IN SAMARKAND FOR FIVE MONTHS --- CAPITULATION --- HE LSCAPES TO URATIPPA.

WHEN Biber was restored to peace, with his territories thus diminished, he was just seventeen years of age The Beg who had now the chief direction of his affairs Biber's was Mír Alı Dost, Taghár, a Moghul, and a near relation, construined probably the brother of his grandmother This was the same nobleman who had surrendered Andeján to Uzun Hassan, but Báber was indebted to him for his restoration to his dominions, as it was by him that he was invited to Marghinán, from his uncomfortable residence in the hilly Iláks Báber seems never to have liked him, however, and represents him as a man of disagreeable manners, covetous, factious, sour of visage, and harsh of speech Such a person was not likely to win the affections of a generous and lively young prince The Mir found various pretexts for sending away the servants to whom his master was most partial Khalífa, whom Báber always treated as a friend, was discharged Ibráhím Sáru was imprisoned, stript of his government and fined, and Kasim Beg, Baber's favourite minister, a man of wit and talents, was dismissed Several others of the chief officers were deprived of their governments In a word, Ali Dost, relying on the assistance of Támbol, with whom he maintained a close understanding, having removed all opposition, and made all power centre in his own person, acted in every respect with unlimited authority His son, too, began to affect the state of a sovereign, BOOK I A D 1500 and his whole style of living, his entertainments and levées, were those of a prince "My situation was singularly delicate," says the ioyal historian, "and I was forced to be silent Many were the indignities which I endured at that time, both from father and son" It was at this period that Báber married Aisha Sultán Begum, the daughter of his uncle Sultan Ahmed Shaban. л и 905, Mírza, the late Sultan of Samarkand, to whom he had л в 1500. March been betrothed in his father's lifetime *

CIIAP II

л 🛛 1500

But the state of Mawerannaher was too disturbed Samarkánd. and unsettled to leave a long repose to any prince within its limits We have seen that when Báber abandoned Samarkand to return to the protection of abandoned Samarkand to return to the protection of his hereditary dominions, that capital was occupied by his late ally Sultan Ali Mírza, who had previously advanced with his aimy from Bokhára, and seized a great part of its territory This prince, who was Báber's cousin, and still young, was, like him, kept in a state of wretched constitaint and insignificance, by his relations the Terkhán lords, to whom he owed his kingdom They appropriated to themselves the whole revenue, and divided at pleasure the different governments among their sons and dependents Muhainmed Mazíd was the minister who had the immediate direction of the Sultan That prince, having grown up to man's estate, naturally felt uneasy under such treatment, and entered into a plot to remove his domineering servants Muhammed Mazid, getting notice of what was in agitation, and probably uncertain to what extent the conspiracy against his power had reached, withdrew from Samarkand, and was chap it followed by many of the chief men of the country, who A p 1500 were his adherents

Affairs of

It was at this time that Weis Mirza, better known as Khan Muza, the youngest brother of Sultan Ah, whose mother was a sister of the Khan of the Moghuls, entered the territory of Sumarkand on the north, attended by an army furmshed hum by his uncle, Sultan Mahmúd Khan, whose Moghuls, as usual, were ready at every cull Weis Mírza was the fourth of the brothers who had aspired to the throne of Samarkand Many lords of Moghul families who were in the city went out and joined the invaders Muhammed Mazid Terkhán, the offended and fugitive minister of Sultan Ali, also invited the Moghul army to form a junction with him, and had a conference with its chucfs at Shidwar But so little could they agree, that the Moghuls proposed laying hands upon him and his party, though he was fortunate enough to discover and defeat their intentions by a precipitate flight from their camp Thus deputed of his co-operation, the Moghuls were forced to retreat, while Sultan Ah, availing himself of their distress, pushed after them, overtook them in the Yai ailák territory as they were coming to their ground, and completely routed and dispersed them *

When Muhammed Mazid Terkhán and his followers Báber saw that all hope of returning to Samarkand by any marches against Saco-operation with the Moghul Khan, or any reconciliation markand with Sultan Alı Mírza was over, they turned their eyes on Báber, and sent to offer him their services Being then in the uncomfortable situation that has been described, under constraint and without influence in his own court, Báber eagerly caught at the offer Samarkand had long been the grand object of lus

^{*} Babers Mem p 80 Briggs's Ferishta vol 11 p 14 VOL I к

BOOK I

A D 1500

Zikadeh, A H 905,

June 1500

ambition, and it had been expressly presented to hun as such, when the recent peace with his brother was concluded Without hesitation, therefore, he gladly began his march for that city, with the few troops that were near him at the time, sending an express to Jehángír at Akhsi, to follow him without delay

It was now the month of June, the proper season for action but Báber had made only four marches when he learned that Támbol's brother, Khalíl, who had lately been his prisoner, had seized the foitress of Ush Khalíl, having been set at liberty by the late treaty, had been sent by his brother to bring away their families and property from Urkend Instead of executing this commission at once, as he might have done, he contrived, under various pretences, to remain lingering day after day in the neighbourhood, till hearing that Báber had actually set out for Samarkand, and that Ush was but slightly garrisoned, he attacked it by night, and carried it by surprise

Báber had not been prepared for this act of treachery, but he resolved not to be diverted from his great object by any inferior consideration IIe was displeased with those who had the present management of his affairs, and justly believed that he could best shake them off, when he was not surrounded solely by their immediate Besides, as he had been invited by a dependents powerful party of the nobles of Samaikand, it was necessary to avail himself of the favourable moment, or The little kingdom of Andeján was lose it for ever not to be compared to that of Samarkand, and its magnificent capital, the seat of the representative of Taimur He therefore continued his march, and on his route was joined by a number of his adherents, and of adventurers, from his own country No sooner, however, was he fairly engaged in this expedition, than his unslumbering enemy Tambol cutered his hereditary dominions, and left nothing undone, to serve all the castles and districts of Andeján, and its territory, which CHAP II Báber had just left *

1

Báber meanwhile, advancing by Uratippa, reached Encamps Yurat-khan, about five miles from Samarkand, withnear it out opposition On the road he learned that he was not the only foreign enemy in the field Sheibáni Khan, the chief of the Uzbeks of Túrkistán, who had probably been invited a second time by Sultan Ali, having again crossed the Siri, had defeated the Terkháns of Bokhára, and was in full march towards that city At Yuiat-khan Báber was joined by Muhammed Mazid Terkhán, and the disaffected Begs of Samarkand They assured him that if he could gain the cordial cooperation of Khwája Yahía, who has been already mentioned as a holy man of great note and influence in the city, he might enter it without a struggle We have already seen the influence of these spinitual guides in Transoxiana, and the benefit which Baber derived from the aid of Khwája Moulána Kázi in Andeján At this Religious time there were two rival saints of leading influence in guides Samarkand, Khwájika Khwája, and Khwája Yahía They were brothers, but, like the royal brothers, political events and their own ambition had set them at vallance Both of them had numerous followers and adherents When the Terkháns surprised Bayesanghar Mirza in Samarkand, and that prince contrived to make his escape from the citadel, he took refuge, as we have seen, in the house of the former, who was his spiritual guide, and who protected him from the violence of the Terkháns These unscrupulous chiefs, with all their power, did not dare to touch him, in the sacred asylum which he had chosen, and, in a few days, the ~ rising of the people replaced him on his throne And, in like manner, when his brother, Sultan Ali, the present sovereign, a prisoner in his turn, had undergone the

(

131

BOOK I

A D. 1500

Intrigues.

operation which was supposed to have deprived him of his eye-sight, and rendered him unfit for public life, he retired to the house of Khwája Yahía, his ghostly father, who soon enabled him to escape to Bokhára.*

From that period a rivalship subsisted between the two holy brothers Báber, anxious to gain over Khwája Yahía, who was perhaps more attached to the Terkháns than to Sultan Ah, employed persons to enter the city and confer with him in private The Khwája was too cautious to commit himself by returning any direct answer. He said nothing, however, to make Báber despair of success, and quietly took every measure in his power to smooth the way for his entrance into the city Baber now moved to the banks of the Derghám, still nearer to the town, and contrived to send his listill hearer to the town, and contrived to send his h-brarian to the Khwája, who at length told him to make his master advance, and that the city should be given up to him But one of Báber's chiefs, having unfortu-nately deserted at this very moment, informed the enemy that a conspiracy was going on Measures of precaution had in consequence been adopted, which precaution had in consequence been adopted, which baffled the attempt, and the troops, finding the garrison in a state of preparation, fell back upon the camp To make up for this failure, Báber was joined by Ibráhím Sáru, and several of the old Begs who had lately been driven from his service by the hostility of Ali Dost, the prime minister As they were all graciously received, Ali Dost and his son were much offended, and asked leave to retire, a permission which Báber joyfully conceded, whereupon they returned to Andeján and joined Támbol

Hardly had Báber got relieved from his obnoxious ministers, when news of an alarming nature reached him from Bokhára Sheibáni Khan, after defeating in the field Báki Terkhán, who had succeeded his father,

Abdal Ah in the government of that province, had ad- chap in vinced with his Uzbeks and taken possession of the city of Bokhara, and was now in full much towards Simarkind lt mix be proper to give some farther account of the previous life of that extraordinary man *

Sheib im Khan wis descended, as we have seen, from Easty life or Jun the e'dest son of Chengiz Khan His grandfather was Abulkhar Ichan, the formdable Uzbek chief, from whom the Knizik-Uzbeks seconded, and who was finally defeated and slain by a confederacy of the chiefs of the hipchik tribes. The immediate consequence of this event was the dissolution of what may be called the Old Uzbek confederacy Some tribes joined the Knizak-Urbeks, who now occupied a large portion of what had been Abulkhur's peculiar range Other tribes and some clucts even of his own relations, among others Burga Ughlun, in like in inner extended their territory nt the expense of his family The children of Abulkhur who escaped from the bloody field and the slaughter that followed, continued for a time to hold a limited extent of country towards the lower Sirr, on the skirts of the desert, and possessed a considerable body of attached adherents But the new calimity occasioned by the defeat and death of Bárúj Ughlan, a son of Abulkhur's, in his attempt upon the encampinent of  $_{\star n}$  877, Yúnis Khan on the Sirr, completely broke up the old A D 1472 Uzbek tribe and dynasty Sheibáin, or Sháhi Beg, the son of Shah Bidágh Sultan, another son of Abulkhair, was then in the prime of life, but the tribe was too much shattered and dispersed to admit of being rallied, and the surviving chiefs and then followers, after enduring many hardships, abandoned the country of their fathers Sháhi Beg, too, who had his share of suffering,

* He is called by Baber, Sheibhili and Sheibák Khan, by Haider Mirzi, Shihi Beg Khan, and by Abulghazi, or his translators, Sha-'acht (Shabakht) Sultan He was the son of Shah Bidagh Sultan, called also, Budak, Borak, Bidagh, and Shabadakh, only different modes of writing the same name

A p 1500

Shelbáni

unwillingly quitted the desert, and with about three hundred faithful followers, repaired to Bokhára He was there received and entertained by Abdal Ali Terkhán, one of the chief Amírs of Sultan Ahmed Mírza who then reigned at Samarkand * Abdal Ah had married the sister of Sultan Ahmed's mother, who was herself a Terkhán He long governed Bokhára with nearly absolute authority, and had very numerous followers, and now patronised and protected Shahi Beg, who owed much of his future rise to his favour was probably through his means that he returned to Túrkistán, which was then held by Abdal Ali's brotherin-law, Muhammed Mazid Terkhán, under the government of Samarkand When, with the assistance of the Terkháns, Sháhi Beg began to establish himself once more on the border of the desert, the old adherents of his grandfather hastened from the different quarters over which they had been scattered, and came to join his standard, so that by degrees the number of his ad herents became considerable, and they were devoted men, confident in the ability and prowess of their chief It has been mentioned that among those who had appropriated to themselves portions of the territory of Abulkhair, and tribes of his followers, was Burga Sultan, his cousin, for whom the Khan had always shown a particular filendship, and whom he had occasionally placed in command of his armies This injury was not forgotten by Sheibani, who, however, after his retuin, artfully dissembled his resentment, and lived apparently on the best understanding with Burga, but he only waited for an opportunity for revenge tunity at last came Burga Sultan having unsuspiciously taken up his winter quarters on the banks of the Su1, not far from his own, Sheibáni one night A 11 8861 though he lived with him, he did A D 1481 not enter into his service, y 24 * The Tárikhi Reshidi says that he took service with Abdal Ah, Baber, on the contrary, affirms that,

٣

ŀ

BOOK I

He goes to Bokhara

BOOK I traced out, discovered, and brought before Sheibáni, who now, convinced by his own eyes that there was no mistake, made him be put to death, and was joined by all his tribe Sheibáni's uncle, Khwája Muhammed Sultan, married the widow of Burga, though she was then with child by her late husband The offspring was Jani Beg, whom the Khwája, who was not remarkable for his wisdom, affected to consider as his own son *

Betrays Sultan Ahmed

лн 893, лр 1488

On the death of Yúnis Khan we have seen that Sultan Ahmed Mírza of Samarkand led an immense army to recover Táshkend and Seirám from his son Sultan Mahmúd Khan, who defeated the invaders with immense loss on the Chirr This disaster, according to Haider Mírza, was occasioned by the treachery of Shei-báni After the Sultan had been stopped three days on the Chirr by the Khan and his Moghuls, Sheibáni, who was then in the Sultan's army, sent a message to the Khan, it is pretended, to ask a private conference They met during the night, and concerted that in the battle which was expected to be fought next day, the Khan should direct his attack against Mír Abdal's division, in which Sháhi Beg was posted with his troops, the Beg on his part undertaking to abandon his ground, and throw the army into confusion Next day, accordingly, an action did take place, the Moghuls directed their attack as had been concerted, Sháhi Beg fled, and plundered the baggage of his own army A general panic ensued, the confusion and rout of the Sultan's army were complete, and numbers were drowned in the Chirr Such is the account of Haider Mírza, an uncompromising enemy of Sháhi Beg, and therefore a partial witness, though he possessed the best means of information, but it may be remarked that no such insinuation is made by Báber, who was equally his enemy †

* Abulgházi, pt vili c iv Báber, pp 21 24, 25

† Tar Resh ff 80, 81 108,

"time set out with an army against Támbol When he BOOK I had matched three days, some circumstances occurred which balked his designs, and he was obliged to retrace his steps Meanwhile Sháhi Beg Khan got news, in Turkistán, that the Khan had begun his march, and, placing the foot of ambition in the sturup of daring, he set out in person to occupy Táshkend, at the same time sending on Mahmud Sultan against Scirám, which in old books is called Istijáb While on his road to Táshkend, Sháhi Beg learned that the Khan was on his way back, upon which he instantly despatched a messenger to meet him, to explain, that, hearing that his highness had set out to punish his rebellious servant Támbol, he had made haste to protect Táshkend and his family, children, and followers, (though of a truth, except himself, there was no enemy to hurt them), that, however, as he had subsequently heard that the Khan was on his way back to his capital, he too would He at the same time despatched exieturn home presses to overtake Mahmud Sultan, and to enjoin him on no account to molest the country, but to hurry back On the Khan's turning back, his army dispersed, and the various Amírs returned home to their governments Mahmúd, not aware of what had happened, and be heving Scirám to be unprotected, began plundering as soon as he entered the country, and before the messengers from Sháhi Beg could airive The governor of Scirám, Mír Ahmed, who was Támbol's uncle, but a faithful and attached servant of the Khan, hastened out to meet the invaders, attacked and jouted them, taking Mahmúd Sultan himself prisoner, and carried lum in bonds into the presence of Sultan Mahmud Khan, with his hands tied round his neck The Khansent to call my father, who immediately came and interceded for his life, which was granted My father having entreated hun most kindly, sent hun away

ĭ

BOOK 1 recruited by volunteers and adventurers out of every race between the Wolga and Káshghar *

We have seen, that, when called in on a former occasion to the succour of Sultan Ah of Samarkand, Sheibáni had advanced close up to Báber's winter quarters, but had drawn off without fighting, to Sultan Ah's great disappointment, and gone home, that he had afterwards returned, defeated Báki Terkhán, the son and successor of his old patron Abdal Ah, had taken Bokhára, and was now in full march towards Samaikand Takes Bokhara.

Invades Samarkand,

Sultan Alı Mírza, the nominal rulei of Samarkand, was reduced to great distress, both by the foreign invaders of his kingdom and by his quarrel with the powerful Terkhán lords, who had called in Báber His mother, Zuhri Begi Agha, who possessed great influence over a weak and inexperienced youth like her son, being herself an Uzbek, and probably feeling a partiality for her tribe, sent a messenger to Sheibáni, in this exigency, to propose to him, that, provided he would engage to marry her, she would make her son deliver Samai kand into his hands, Sheibáni, on his part, undertaking to restore it to him as soon as he recovered his own paternal dominions The Uzbek chief made no difficulty whatever in acceding to these easy terms. On arriving at Samarkánd he encamped at a garden close to the city. Sultan Alı Mírza, the same day, came out to meet hun, without the knowledge of his principal ministers or advisers His attendants remarked with alarm that the Khan received him with very little ccremony Khwája Yahía, on hearing what the Mírza had done, was filled with consternation, but seeing no remedy, he also, to save appearances, went out and warted on Sheibáni The Uzbek, aware of his intrigues, received him without

* Baber's Mem, passim, Introd cu, pr vin cu-iv, pt ix ci, pp lvn hx, Abulgh'izi, pt vin far Resh f 118

л н 906, Moharrem, л л 1500, August rising, and showed his feelings by some bitter tannts chap in which he let fall Sultan Ali was not long of feeling A p 1500 acutely the degraded situation to which he had reduced hunself He refused, however, to attempt making his escope, and was unceremoniously put to death a few days after Khwán Yahía was bruished to Khorasán, but was waylaid by the Uzbeks and murdered on the road, and the wretched Zuhri Begi, as the reward of all this misery which she had brought on her family and their friends, felt herself degraded to be a mere common concubine in the harem of Sheibáni *

As soon as the approach of Sheibáni Khan from Bokhára had been made known to Báber, he at once perceived that, with his moderate force, it was in vain to think of coping with so formidable an antagonist He therefore hurriedly broke up the blockade of Samar- zilknich kand, and instead of attempting to fall back on his own  $A_{AB}^{AH}$  July, hereditary dominions, now in the hands of his declared 1500 enemies, he crossed the rising-grounds to the south- which he cast, and marched towards Kesh, to which place many right of of the Begs of Samarkand, who had joined him, had Baber, previously sent their families Here he learned the surrender of Samarkand, and not thinking himself safe from the pursuit of Sheibáni even there, he marched eastward to the territory of Hissár-Shadmán, accompanied by Muhammed Mazid and the other confederate Begs, their wives and families On arriving at Cheghámán, the Samarkand Begs, separating from the little camp, entered into the service of Khosrou Shah, the by Hissar powerful ruler of Hissár and Kunduz, and thus left Báber, with his few remaining adherents, to depend on his own exertions

The young prince now once more felt himself in a Khostou most destitute and wretched situation, without army, Shab his or country, or home He knew not which way to turn

BOOK I

ж. b. 1500 ж. н. 903, ж. b. 1497

ан 903, ар 1 198

л н 905, 10 Mohar-

λ π[°]1499, 17 Aug

rem,

We have seen that when Bayesanghar Mirza fled from Samarkánd, at the time when that city was taken by Báber, he had passed through part of the dominions of his brother Masaúd Mírza of Hissár and had placed lumself under the protection of Khosrou Shah of Kunduz That ambitious chief soon after, displeased with Masaud, took possession of Hissár, in which lie set up Bayesanghar as king, with a nominal and short-lived authority Sultan Masaúd meanwhile, who made his escape, repaired to Herát There he was well received by Sultan Husein, whose court in that age was the great asylum of unfortunate princes He soon after, however, most unaccountably left that monarch's protection to go back to Khosron Shah That unprincipled man, though he had been the prince's guardian and governor, cruelly put out his eyes In less than a twelvemonth afterwards, Khosrou Shah, having invited Bayesanghar Mírza from Hissár to join in an attack upon Balkh, treacherously seized him and his chief Amírs, while in his camp on their route to that city, and strangled them with the bowstring He at the same time put to death all such of the chief and confidential servants of the murdered prince as could occasion him any uncasiness, and seized the whole territories of Hissár This event, which happened little more than twenty months after Bayesanghar Murza had been driven from Samarkand, left Khosrou Shah the undisputed ruler of all the extensive dominions that had belonged to Sultan Mahmúd Mírza, before he was called to the throne of Samarkand *

Baher s distress The death of Bayesanghar had occurred not quite a year before Báber entered the territories of Khosrou Shah To remain in the dominions of the murderer of one, and the unprincipled oppressor of several of his nearest kinsmen was revolting to Báber's feelings It and district of Kán - Here he, at length, gained correct . BOOK 1 intelligence of all that had occurred since the arrival of Sheibáni Khan He found that on the taking of Sa-А в 1500 markand, all his own officers had retired from the neighbourhood of the city, and were dispersed in various quarters, that Ibráhún Terkhán had thrown himself into Shiraz, and that Kamber Ah, abandoning the fort of Khwaja Didár as too near the capital to be defensible, had withdrawn to Yai-ailák, and attempted to put the fortresses there in a state of defence Meeting with but an inhospitable reception from the Malek of the hill-country of Kán, Báber descended to the lower grounds, and, with his usual spirit, pushed on for Keshtud, one of the nearest towns to Samarkand, hoping to surprise the Uzbeks who, he imagined, would be in possession of the place, and not looking for an enemy On reaching it, however, he found Keshtúd in ruins, and not a man left in the town Advancing still, he at length halted on the Koluk, a Approaches Samarkand, river of Samarkand He passed it by a bridge, and despatched Kásım Beg with a party to attempt to sur-prise Robát-Khwája They were just applying their scaling ladders to ascend the walls, when the garrison was alarmed, which compelled the assailants to retreat at full speed Baber himself meanwhile had continued his course to Yar-aılák, where he was joined by Kamber Alı, while Ibráhím Terkhán and some other Begs sent to offer him their congratulations, and to declare their steady adherence to his cause

* Báber, pp 60-63

In spite of this assistance, his force was so small, and his situation so desperate, that none but a man of the most heroic ardour would have ventured to think of extricating himself from his difficulties, except by retreat. His army had been broken up and dispersed His own dominions were in the hands of his enemies, so that he could look for no aid from them, since even such of his late subjects as were still attached to him,

BOOK I

A p 1500 His state of venture to approach nearer, and regained Yar-ailák next morning

Some little circumstances mentioned by Báber show how much at this time his mind was absorbed with the great enterprise which he had conceived "One day," says he, "I happened to be in the castle of Asfendek with some of my inferior nobles and officers, who were sitting on the ground talking around me The consitting on the ground talking around me The con-versation turned at random upon a variety of subjects I happened to say, 'Come, let us hit on a lucky guess, and may God make it good! When shall we take Samarkand?' Some said, 'In the spring ' it was then harvest, some said, 'In a month,' some, 'In forty days,' some, 'In twenty' Nevian Gokultásh said, 'We shall take it within a fortnight,' and the Almighty made true his words, for within a fortnight we did take it About the same time I had a remarkable dream I thought that the venerable Khwája Obeid-ulla had come to visit me I went out to receive him, and the Khwaja came in and sat down. Methought a table was laid for him, but not perhaps with sufficient attention to neatness, at which the holy man seemed to be somewhat offended Mulla Baba, observing this, made me a sign I answered him likewise by signs, that the fault was not mine, but that of the person who had laid the table-cloth. The Khwaja perceived what passed, and seemed satisfied with my excuse When he rose to depart, I attended him out, but, in the hall of the house, he appeared to take me by one of my arms, and to lift me up so high that one of my feet was raised from the ground, while he said to me in Túrki, 'Skeikh Maslehet berdi' (Sheikh Maslehet prosper you') A few days after this dream, I took Samarkand "*

Undeterred by his former failure, he resolved to

* Báber's Mem pp 86, 87 Sheikh Khojend Maslehet was a celebrated gaint of ĸ hazaid an attempt once more He set out after noon CHAP II from his quarters in the hills, and at midnight reached A D 1500 the bridge over the Meghák, which runs by the public Another pleasure-ground of the city Halting there, he sent on attempt seventy or eighty of his best men, with instructions to apply their scaling ladders to the part of the wall that was opposite to the place called the Lovers' Cave*, when they had gained the parapet they were to push on against the party that guarded the Firozá gate, of which they were to gain and keep possession, and then to apprise Biber of then success by a messenger The escalade succeeded The top of the wall was gained without alarming the garrison, and the assailants moved along the ramparts as concerted, attacked and slew the officer in command at the gate, with a number of the guard, broke the lock and bars of the gate with hatchets, and flung it open At the same moment - Baber arrived on the outside, and entered So far his enterprise was achieved by his own immediate adherents, but his other followers soon joined him When he entered the town, the citizens were fast asleep On hearing the uproar, the shopkeepers, he tells us, began to peep out fearfully from behind their doors, but were delighted when they found what had happened The citizens, as soon as they were informed of Báber's entrance, being heartily tired of their barbarous masters, hailed him and his followers with acclamations of joy They instantly rose and attacked the Uzbeks who were scattened over the town, hunting them down with sticks and stones wherever they could be found, and put to death between four and five hundred of them The chief men of Samarkand, as well as the merchants and shopkeepers, now hastened to congratulate the young Sultan at his quarters, bringing him offerings and pre-sents, with food ready dressed for him and his fol-

Moghári Ashikán

BOOK I lowers, at the same time pouring out prayers for their success Báber, therefore, repaired to the college of Ulugh Beg, and took his seat under the great dome to receive the congratulations of all who came to salute him. Here, about daybreak, news was brought that the Uzbeks, though driven from every other part of the city, were still in possession of the Iron Gate. Without delay he leaped upon his horse, and accompanied by fifteen or twenty of his men who happened to be near him, galloped to the spot, but, on arriving, found that the mob had already assailed and driven them out of the town. Just as the sun was rising, Sheibám Khan, with about a hundred and fifty horse, was seen spurring on for the Iron gate, but found as he came near that it was no longer in the hands of his troops. In the rapidity of his approach, he had left the rest of his army behind. "It was a glorious opportunity," says Bábei, "but I had with me only a mere handful of men" Sheibáni, finding that he was too late, iode back to meet his main body.

Báber, still only in his eighteenth year, was elated with this signal success, achieved by his own sagacity and heroic spirit. He compares it with pride to the surprise of Herát by Sultan Hussein Mírza, Baikera, of Khoiásán*, the giand exploit of the most celebrated prince of the age, and justly gives it the preference But though he thus saw himself in possession of a noble capital, the smallest part of his work was yet accomplished. It was necessary to defend his throne by the same activity and valour, by which it had been gained. His enemies were powerful, the country wasted, his own force but slender. Fortunately he had the affections of his new subjects. To relieve them, to have his followers more immediately under his own cye, and to watch the motions of the enemy, his first care was to much out of the city, and to encomp at a garden- cuse in pilice in the submbs – Here he wis again waited upon A 10 1500 by all the men in office, as well as by every person of consideration in the place who all offered him then homage The more polished and efferimate inhabitants of a great city viewed the rapacity, the rule manners, the strunge and burburous attne of the Uzbeks, fresh from their deserts, with inixed feelings of aversion and terror The peasantry too and the people of the villiges, were naturally no less mixions to be delivered from the rayages of in insolent and mar using enemy As soon as the young Sultan's success at Samarkind was known, many districts at once declared for him, several forts were put into his hands, and from many others the Uzbeks fled, without leiving a garrison The inhibitints of some of the towns rose upon their Uzbek garrisons, whom they expelled , and repared their walls to resist a new attack. At this crisis the wife and fumly of Sheibam Khun, whom he had sent for from lurkistim to settle in a richer country and a more propitious climite, arrived with their own heavy baggage, and that of the other Uzbeks Sheibam still ingered for some time near Sumark ind, but at length finding the whole country hostile to him, and that the forts shelband retires were rapidly filling into Bibei's power, he called in his troops and marched for Bokhára, turning numillingly lns back on the splendid prize which had es aped from his grisp

* Memoirs, p 88

The tide of fortune had now turned against Sheibán In the tinee or four succeeding months, most of the fortified places in Soghd and Miankál, provinces that he between Sumukand and Bokhára, submitted to Báber The districts of Khozar and Karshi, which are situated south of Samarkand, towards the Amu, were taken possession of by Baki Terkhán, the late governor of Bokhara, while that of Karakúl, which hes to the south of Bokhára was seized by a force that came from Merv, from 1008-1

A D 1500 1 B (ber's dlfficulties, A D 906, A D 1500 -1

beyond the Amu – The Uzbeks were expelled in every quarter, retaining possession of Bokhára alone *

But though Baber's affants went on prosperously during the ensuing winter, he was far from being with-out anxiety or free from danger The Uzbeks, though driven from Sainarkand, possessed the populous city of Bokhára and its feitile territory, and could recruit their force by drawing repeated swarms of hardy barbarians from the deserts Samarkand, that once wealthy, populous, and powerful city, the seat of the arts and of learning, which for more than a hundred and forty years had been the throne of Báber's ancestors, had, as well as its rich territory, recently suffered from misgoverminent, from repeated icvolutions, and the ravages of hostile and of friendly armies Its resources were reduced, much of its wealth destroyed or removed, and time was required to repair its losses, and restore the credit and confidence of its inhabitants. As the military forces of the kingdom were, at the moment, very madequate to its defence, the young king sent ambassadors to all the neighbouring princes to solicit assist-ance From his own hereditary dominions Támbol sent him only one hundred men, Sultan Mahmid Khán, his uncle, sent him four or five hundred from Táshkend, Sultan Hussein Mírza of Herát, the most powerful of them all, gave him no aid whatever, nor did he receive any from that prince's son, Badi-ez-zemán Mírza, of Bulkh, or from Khosrou Shah of Kunduz He was compelled, therefore, to depend entirely on his own limited resources †

Sheibani advances from Bokhara, Though Sheibáni had found it expedient to retreat, his power was unbroken Early in the spring he collected his army. The party that had occupied Karakúl was unable to maintain it Sheibáni marched and invested the fort of Dabúsi in Soghd, took it by storm,

† 161d. pp 90, 91

^{*} Báber, pp 86-89

and put the games to the sword This success com- charpelled Báber to take the field about the beginning of  $\frac{1}{D}$  Is May He proceeded by slow matches on the road to shawal CHAP IL Bokhára, while Sheibáni Khan, advancing in the oppo-site direction, encamped about four miles from him Báber fortified his camp with a palisade and ditch Daily skinmishes took place between their advanced parties and pickets Sheibáni attempted a night suiprise, but found the camp too well for tified and guarded to be carried by a slight attack, and was forced to retire

A battle, however, scemed inevitable, and Báber's mind was evidently fixed on the preparations for it Perhaps this state of excitement working on his military ardour rendered him too impatient, for he resolved to hazard an engagement, though reinforcements to the amount of two or three thousand men would have joined him in the course of two days The delusions of judicial astrology lent their aid to mislead him "The cause of my eagerness to engage," says he, " was that the sahs-yulduz (eight stars) were on that day exactly between the two armies, and, if I had suffered that day to elapse, they would have become favourable to the enemy for the space of thirteen of fourteen days" "These observations," adds the Sultan, "were all nonsense, and my precipitation was without the least solid cxcuse "*

The armies prepared for battle Bábei's marched and en-out, the mcn clad in armour, the horses caparisoned gage and covered with cloth of mail They were in four divisions, consisting of right wing and left, centre and advance, according to the fashion of the times As they moved forward, with their right flank on the river Kohik, which runs from Samarkand towards Bokhára, they were met by the enemy drawn up ready to receive them The hostile army was far the most numerous,

The armies face each other.

^{*} Babers Mem p 92 ь4

and the extremity of its right turned Báber's left flank, BOOK I and wheeled upon his tear This compelled him to change his position by throwing back his left, in doing which, his advance, which was posted in front of the A D 1501 centre, and composed of his best men and officers, was necessarily thrown to the right The battle was never-theless manfully supported, and the assailants in front driven back on their centre It was even thought at one time, by Sheibáni's best officers, that the battle was lost, and they advised him to quit the field Meanwhile, however, the enemy's flanking division, having diiven in Báber's left, attacked his centre in the rear, pouring in showers of arrows, and the whole left of his line being thus forced in and thrown into disorder, that, with the centre, became a scene of inextricable confusion Only ten or fifteen men remained around the Sultan Only ten or fifteen men remained around the Sultan They, seeing that all was over, rode off towards the right wing, which had rested on the river, and on gaining its banks plunged in, armed as they were "For more than half way over," says Báber, "we had firm footing, but after that we sank beyond our depths, and were forced, for upwards of a bow-shot, to swim our horses, loaded as they were with their riders in armour and their own trappings Yet they plunged through it On getting out of the water on the other side, we cut off our horses' heavy furniture and threw it away."* The enemy were not able to follow them Báber defeated, it away"* The enemy were not able to follow them The royal fugitive kept for some time along the right bank of the river, and afterwards recrossing it higher reaches 7 up, reached Samarkand the same evening

Samarkand.

No defeat could be more complete, many of Báber's bravest and most experienced officers, among others Ibráhím Terkhán, Ibráhím Sáru, and Khalíl, the brother of Támbol, with numbers of his best soldiers, penshed

Babers Mem p 93

in the field. The fugitives and stragglers were pur- char is such, plundered and cut off, an operation in which  $\sqrt{p}$  1501 none were more active than the Moghuls of Baber's own army The officers who survived the battle, per-snided that nothing could now resist Sheibáni Khau, seattered in various directions Muhammed Mazíd Terkhan, who had once more joined Báber, fled to khosrou Shih in Kunduz some escaped to Uratippa, ly nuber Ali and others, after reaching Samarkand, histily removed their fimilies from it, is from a place doomed to destruction A very few remained in the city, following the fortune of their prince *

Baber lost no time in simimoning a conneil of such which here Begs ind officers is adhered to him after this great defined columnty. It was resolved to put the town in a state of defence, and to maintain it to the last extremity The young Sult in fixed his head quarters at the Grand Porch of Ulugh Beg's College, which was near the centre of the city, ind, with lyasim Beg, was hunself to commind the reserve. The other Begs and officers hid their stations assigned in different parts of the 1 imparts, and at the gates

In the course of two or three days Sherbain Khan skirmishes mide his appearance, and took up i position at some distunce from the town. The idle rabble, on hearing of his approach, assembled in crowds from all the wirds and lanes of Samarkand, clated, probably, with then former success against his gannson, in the street, hurried to Babei's head-quarters at the college, shouting iloud, "Glory to the prophet," and then marched out clamorously to battle Sheibam Khan, who had his troops ready mounted at the time, and was just preparing to lead them to an assault, not aware, probably, of the composition of this motley body, did not venture to approach the place, as he had intended, and fell back in the field The figitives and stragglers were pur- cave n such, plandered and cut off, an operation in which , p 1501 none were more active than the Moglinls of Baber's own many. The officers who survived the battle, perstuded that nothing could now resist Sheibáni Khan, settered in virious directions Muhammed Mazid Terkhan who had once more joined Baber, fled to khosrou Shih in kunduz some escaped to Uratippi, Kunber Ah and others, after reaching Samaikand, histily removed their fumilies from it, is from a place doomed to destruction A very few remained in the city, following the fortune of their prince *

Baber's Mem pp 93, 94

Baber lost no time in summoning a council of such which here Begs and officers as adhered to hum after this great defend. cilimity It was acsolved to put the town in a state of defence, and to maintain it to the last extremity The young Sultan fixed his head quarters at the Grand Porch of Uhigh Beg's College, which was near the centre of the city, ind, with Kasim Beg, was linnself to command the reserve. The other Begs and officers hid their stations assigned in different parts of the runparts and at the gites

In the course of two or three days Sheibam Khan stimishes in ide his appearance, and took up a position at some distince from the town. The idle labble, on hearing of his approach, assembled in clowds from all the wirds and lunes of Simarkand, elated, probably, with their former success against his garnson, in the street, lurried to Bábei's head-quarters at the college, shouting iloud, "Glory to the prophet," and then marched out clunorously to battle Sheibáni Khan, who had his troops ready mounted at the time, and was just preparing to lead them to an assault, not aware, probably, of the composition of this motley body, did not venture to approach the place, as he had intended, and fell back

Biber's Mem pp 93, 94

nook 1 This only added to the presumption of the inexperimental mob They had even the presumption to march out to a considerable distance from the gates, in γ spite of the remonstrances of the old and hardy vete rans, who received nothing but abuse and insult in return for their advice

One day, not long after, Sheibám Khan made an attack on the side of the Iron Gate The mob, whose confidence had been increasing in consequence of their having as yet met with no check, maiched out farther than usual Báber, afraid of the consequences, ordered a party of house to follow them, and cover their retreat The Uzbeks, watching their opportunity, suddenly attacked the undisciplined multitude, broke in among them, and cutting them down, chased the fugitives up towards the gate Báber's cavalry, chiefly composed of his household troops, then interposed " Kuch Begr sallying forth on those Uzbeks who came up first," says Báber," attacked them sabre in hand, and made a gallant and distinguished figure, in sight of all the inhabitants who stood looking on The fugitives, occupied solely with their flight, had ceased to shoot arrows, or to think of fighting for their ground I shot from the top of the gateway with a cross-bow, and those who were along with me also kept up a discharge This shower of arrows from above prevented the Uzbeks from advancing, and, in the end, they were forced to retire from the field." This event effectually checked the rashness of the well-disposed but undisciplined populace *

Báber was now completely blockaded and the city in a state of siege The rounds of the rampaits and other works were made regulatly every night, sometimes by himself, sometimes by 'one of this principal officers, abusiness which occupied them from sunset to morning

* Baber's Mem p 95

Sheiban Khan, whose activity never slumbered, on cuar u one occasion made an attack by day, between the Iron-A D 1501 and the Slackh "adeh Gites Biber, who happened to be a calibe then with the reserve, instantly led it to repel the defeated is all nots. But this was only a false attack, and, while the young prince was busy in repelling it, the real as all took place in an opposite quarter. There Sheihim had placed seven or eight hundred men in ambush, who when the attention of the besieged was wholly engrossed by the filse attack, issued from their concerlment, made a lodgment close under the rampart, and upplied to the walls five or six and twenty scaling lidders so broad that each admitted of two or three men mounting about to the assault - Kuch Beg, who hid charge of thit put of the rampirt, hid his quarters exactly opposite to the spot where they appeared " As there was fighting on the other side," says Báber, the persons in charge of these works were not apprehensive of my danger to their posts, and the men at these stations had dispersed on their own business, to go to their houses, or to the bazars. The Begs who were on guard, had each only two or three of their attend nits and servants about them - Nevertheless Knuh Beg, Muhammed Kuh Kochin, Shah Sufi, and another brave civality, boldly assailed them, and displayed signal heroism. Some of the enemy had already monuted the will, and several others were in the net of scaling it, when these four persons arrived on the spot, fell upon them with the greatest bravery, sword in hind, ind, dealing furions blows around them, drove the issulants back over the wall, and put them to flight Kuch Beg distinguished hunself above all the rest, and this was an exploit to be for ever cited to his honour He twice during this siege performed excellent service by his valour. The alarm being given, the neigh-bouring posts were on the alert, and, after fruitless

BOOK I

A b 1501 Blockade continued

efforts, the Uzbeks retried completely baffled on all sides *

But though, after this, Kásim Beg made a successful sally, bent back the Uzbeks, and, to use the language of the times, brought in a few heads, the situation of the town did not improve The harvest had arrived, but no supply of corn had found its way within the beleaguered walls 'The siege had now lasted a long while, the provisions originally in the place, which had never been victualled for a siege, were expended "The inhabitants," says Báber hinself, " were reduced to extreme distress, and things came to such a pass, that the poor and meaner sort were reduced to feed on dogs' and asses' flesh Grain for the horses becoming scarce, we were obliged to feed them on the leaves of trees, and it was ascertained from experience, that the leaves of the mulberry and blackwood † answered best," Many used the shavings and raspings of wood, which they soaked in water, and gave to their horses "‡

For three or four months of this period, Sheibám Khan, renouncing active operations, did not approach the fort, but kept every passage to it blocked up, and changed his ground from time to time After this he approached by night, beating his kettle-drums and i using the war shout, as if for an assault, so that the garrison, exhausted as it was, was constantly kept in alarm, and compelled to be ever on the alert Night after night was this repeated, till the strength of the small garrison was quite worn out Things now appeared desperate None of the neighbouring princes seemed to take any interest in what was going forward, no provisions or supplies of any kind arrived The soldiers and inhabitants lost all hope, and began to-~ inake their escape from the town in small parties

* Baber's Mem pp 95, 96

+ Kara-ighaj

† Baber's Mem p 96

Sheibini Khan, knowing their distiess, moved nearer CHAP in to the city, and encamped near the Loveis' Cave, in  $A^{D} 1501$ consequence of which Báber also moved his headquarters in the same direction, to be near and to watch hum At this unpropitious moment, when he could no longer be of use, Uzun Hassan, the grand instigator of the revolt of Jehángír Mírza, contrived to enter the town with ten or fifteen followers The famine was already at its height Even men about the Sultan's person, and high in his confidence, unable any longer to bear the grinding piessure of the misery by which they were worn out, began to let themselves down from the walls and make their escape There was no longer 100m even to conceive any hope of a successful defence In these circumstances, Sheibáni Khan proposed a capitulation on terms "Had I had the slightest expectation of relief," says Báber, " or had any stores remained in the place, never would I have listened to him Compelled however by necessity, a sort of capitul-lation was agreed upon, and about midnight I left the tion town, by the Sheikh-zádeh gate, accompanied by my mother the Khanum Two ladies besides escaped with us, the one of them Bechega Khalífa, the other Mingelik Gokultásh My eldest sister, Khanzádeh Begum, was intercepted, and fell into hands of Sheibáni Khan, as we left the city on this occasion" Of this capitu-lation Báber evidently speaks unwillingly, and in few words, but his cousin, Haider Mírza, informs us that the marriage of Báber's sister, Khanzadeh Begum, to the Khan, was one of the articles of the treaty, and part of the price paid for his unmolested escape She married Sheibáni and had a son by hin, who died young Samarkand had sustained a siege of about five months, when it fell, probably in the month of September, A D = 15011501 *

* Babei's Mem pp 97 98, Khan, when he took Samarkand the Tar Resh ff 125 156 Sheibáni first time, had married Meher-nigar

BOOK I A D 1501

Bábei's account of his journey after he was driven from the capital, which for the second time he had enjoyed during so short a period, is lively and interest-He was still only in his nineteenth year quitting Samarkand, "having got entangled among the great branches of the canals of the Soghd, during the darkness of the night," says he, "we lost our way, ıng and after encountering many difficulties, passed Khwaja By the time of early morning prayers we arrived at the hill of Karbogh, and passing Dıdár about dawn it on the north, below the village of Khardek, we made for Ilán-úti On the road I had a race with Kamber Alı and Kásım Beg My horse got the lead As I turned round on my seat, to see how far I had left them behind, my saddle-girth being slack, the saddle turned round, and I came to the ground, right on my head Although I immediately sprang up and mounted, yet 1 did not recover the full command of my faculties ulf the evening, and the world, and all that occurred atthe time, passed before my eyes and apprehension like a dream or a phantasy, and disappeared The time of afternoon prayers was over ere we reached Ilán-úti, where we alighted, and having killed a horse, cut him up, and dressed shces of his flesh We stand a little time to rest our horses, then mounting again, before daybreak next morning we alighted at the village of Khalila, whence we proceeded to Dizak Táher Duldái was at that time the governor Here we had nice fat flesh, bread of fine flour well-baked, delicious melons, and excellent grapes in the greatest profusion, thus passing from the extreme of famine to abundance, and to whom he gave Ballh, but whe

Khanum, the eldest sister of Baber's mother, and consequently the maternal aunt of his sister Khanzadeh Sheibani now divorced the aunt that he might marry the niece Khanzádeh he had a son, Khurram, died young He afterwards divorced her also, being jealous of her partiality to the interests of her brother Baber, whose favourite eister she was from danger and suffering, to security and enjoyment " (IIAP II)—"In my whole life, I never enjoyed myself so much " (IIAP II)—"It has been my lot," he adds, "four or five times, in the course of my life, to pass in a similar manner from distress and suffering to enjoyment and ease, but this was the first time I had ever been so circumstanced, and most keenly did I feel the transition from the injuries of my enemy, and the gnawings of absolute hunger, to the charms of security and the delights of plenty Having rested and enjoyed ourselves two or three days in Dizak, we proceeded on to Uratippa" By the road he tuined aside to visit his old quarters at Besháger *

* Babers Mem p 98

CHAPTER III

SHEIBÁNI'S CONQUIST OF TÁSIIKIND AND FERGHANA — FX-PULSION OF BÁBER.

BÁBI P VISITS THF KHAN — RFTURNS TO DEHKÁT — HIS MODE OF I IFF — RFVISITS THF KHAN — ARRIVAI OF THF TOUNGER KHAN — THI KHANS INVADE FFRGHÁNA — BÍBER SURPRIZED BY TÍMBOL, AND WOUNDED — TÍMBOL, HARD PRESSED, CALLS IN SHEIBÍNI — AI FAIR OF AKHSI — BÍBFR DRIVFN OUT — HIS FI IGHT AND D'MGEP — THF KHANS DFFFATTD AND TAKFN PRISONFRS BY SHEIBANI, WHO CONQUERS TÁSHKEND — ARE SFT AT LIBERTT — DEATH OF THF HOUNGER KHAN — TÍMBOL REMAINS IN POSSESSION OF FERGHÍNÁ — ATTACKED BI SHEIBÍNI — BÍBFR ABANDONS FERGHÍNA — SUBSE' QUENT HISTORY AND DEATH OF THE ELDER KHAN — DISPERSIÓN OF THE TRIBE OF CHAGHATÁI MOGHULS

As Ferghána was now in the hands of Jehángín Mírza ROOK I and Sultan Ahmed Támbol, Báber did not venture to A D 1501 revisit his old dominions Uratippa was possessed, Báber visits under the Khan, by Muhammed Husein Mirza, Doghlat, Uratippa, the husband of Báber's aunt, whom the fugitive king visited, and who agreed to let him have the village of Dehkát for his winter quarters In Dehkát Báber left his baggage, and in a few days set out for Táshkend, and the elder Khan where he waited upon his uncle Sultan Mahmúd, the Khan, and saw a number of his maternal relations The Khan was prevailed upon to give him Uratippa, but on the young Sultan's return to that country, Muhammed Husein, probably by an understanding with His life at the Khan, refused to give it up Baber therefore was Debkát obliged to repair to Dehkát, the district which the Mírza had assigned to him It hes on the skirts of a high mountain the inhabitants were not Túrks, but

Sarts or Tájíks, and of course speaking the Persian CHAP III. tongue, though Báber remarks it as singular that they _ 1501 had large flocks of sheep and brood mares, like the wanderers of the desert Their sheep might be about forty thousand in number. He and his followers lived in the houses of the peasants and shepherds In this quiet retreat, his young and elastic mind soon recovered from the pressure of the nusfortunes which had lately weighed upon it "I lived," says he, " in the house of one of the head men of the place He was an aged man, seventy or eighty years old His mother was still alive, and hid attained an extreme old age, being at this time a hundred and eleven One of this lady's relations had accompanied the army of Taimur Beg, when he invaded Hindustan The circumstances remained fresh in her memory, and she often told us stories on that subject In the district of Dehkát alone. there still were of this lady's children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and great-great-grandchildren, to the number of ninety-six persons in life, and, including those deceased, the whole amounted to two hundred One of her great-grandchildren was at this time a young man of twenty-five or twenty-six years of age, with a fine black beard While I remained in Dehkát, I was accustomed to walk on foot all about the hills in the neighbourhood I generally went out barefoot, and, from this habit of walking barefoot, I found that our feet soon became so hardened that we did not mind rock or stone in the least In one of these walks, one day, between afternoon and evening prayers, having lost the road, we met a man who was going with a cow in a narrow path I asked him the way He answered, keep your eye fixed on the cow, and do not lose sight of her, till you come to the issue of the road, when you will know where you are Kwája Ased-ulla, who was with me, enjoyed the joke, VOL. I. м observing, 'What would become of us wise men were the cow to lose her way?'"* In some of these incidents BOOK I A D 1501 we may trace a resemblance to the boyhood of Henri Quatre, wandering barefooted among the simple and hardy peasants of the mountains of his native Béarn, a training which he often acknowledged had fitted him more easily to endure and surmount the hardships of his future life Adversity and difficulties in their early days have been, for obvious reasons, the best school for princes who were destined to become great The stories told to Báber by the aged lady, in this remote village, concerning the wonders of India, probably fired his youthful imagination, and may have assisted in im-planting that ardent desire, which he tells us, he felt, at a later period, of visiting that distant land, and the fulfilment of which led to the most celebrated achievement of his life

It was now winter, and many of his remaining fol⁵ lowers, whom the season hindered from going out on plundering parties, asked leave to go to Andeján. Kásim Beg, his chief minister, advised him to take that opportunity of sending some article of his dress to his brother Jehángír Mírza, as a present He accordingly agreed to send him a cap of ermine The Beg then asked him, "What great harm would there be in sending some present to Támbol?" "Though I did not altogether approve of this," continues Báber, "yet, induced by the pressing instances of Kásim Beg, I sent Támbol a large sword, which had been made in Samarkand for Nevián Gokultásh, from whom I took it This was the very sword that afterwards eame down on my own head, as shall be mentioned in the events of the ensuing year" †

While Báber was thus engaged, Sheibáni Khan having taken possession of Samarkand and the territories

^{*} Buber's Mem p 100

BOOK L naturally keen and ardent, and from the nature of his early life he had escaped that tendency to selfishness, which flattery and the indulgence of every wish as soon as it is excited, generate in every situation of life, as well as upon the throne He now returned to his winter quarters in Dehkát

With the return of spring, Sheibáni advanced against Uratippa. As Dehkát was in the low country at the foot of the hills, and therefore liable to be overrun by an invading enemy, Baber left it, and passed by Abburden, to the mountainous country of Masikha, where he remained some time. There is so much interest in the various little incidents which Baber relates of his youthful wanderings, and it is so seldom that Asiatic history descends to such familiar incidents, that, in spite of the length to which this narrative has been extended, we may still continue to follow him for some time longer "Ab-burden," says he, "is a village which lies at the foot of Masíkha Beneath Ab-burden is a spring, and close by the spring is a tomb From this spring towards the upland, the country belongs to Masíkha; but downwards from the spring it depends on Yelghár On one of the sides of a rock which is on the brink of this fountain, I caused the following verses to be carved - that gree

"' I have heard that the to Támu-mshíd Inscribed these words on thIS." Séside a fountain — Many a man, like us, has rested by this fountain, And disappeared in the twinkling of an eye Should we conquer the whole world by our manhood and valour, Yet what part of it could we carry with us to the grave^{?!"*}

In these highlands, the practice of cutting verses and other inscriptions on the rocks is extremely common While in Masíkha he had a visit from Múlla Hajári, the poet; and, to soothe the hours of his exile, he exercised

* Verses from the Bóstan of Sádı

164

Báber in Masíkha

лн 907,

A D 1502.

himself in poetical attempts in the Túrki, his native char ni tongue * p 1502

When Baber was informed that Sheibani Khan had sheibani actually advanced into Uratippa, in spite of the fewness Uratippa of his followers and their bid equipment, leaving his household and brggage in Masikha, he marched down from the lulls, so as to reach Dehkát about the end of the night, intending to hover on the enemy's flank and seize any accidental advantage that offered But he found that Sheibini had retired immediately after laying the country waste Báber therefore retraced his steps to his mountain abode

Here he naturally began to reflect upon his own Baber visits situation It was evident that to continue wandering the khan an exile on burren mountains, without house or home, could lead to nothing, and was throwing away his time He resolved, therefore, to visit once more his uncle the Khan, and to attempt to interest him in his behalf In pursuance of this determination he proceeded by the pass of Ab-buiden, was at Shahrokhia on the great Muhammedan festival of the Id-e-korbán, and joined  $_{A}$  in 207, the Khan at Táshkend, his capital Kasun Beg, Baber's  $_{A}^{10}$   $_{D}^{20h4jeh}$ , minister, who had a quairel of blood with the Moghuls, June 16 not venturing to accompany hum, left him and went to Hissár

Just at this time Tainbol led his army against the Khan, and had advanced as far as the Dale of Abengeran, when a conspiracy was discovered in the heart of his camp, at the head of which were Muhammed Hissáii and Kamber Ah The conspirators escaped, and fled to the Khan Támbol on this retired, and recrossed the river, but soon after entered the territory of Uratippa

This invasion drew the Khan from his indolent re- A H 908, He assembled his troops, and after a grand re- * D 1502. pose

^{*} Bábers Mcm p 101 м З

view, led them up the Sırr* It does not, however, appear that he entered Uratippa; and he soon returned home again "This expedition of the Khan's," says Báber, "was rather an useless sort of an expedition He took no fort, he beat no enemy, he went out and came in again "†

Such inactivity was little suited to the youthful ardour of Báber His keen and ambitious mind preyed upon itself To fill up the long intervals of leisure now afforded him, he devoted his mind to poetical pursuits, and he records with pride the time of his composing the first ghazel (or ode) that he ever wrote ‡ But, though now, as at every future period of his life, he delighted to fill up with liberal and elegant studies the hours which he could steal from business, he had sat upon the thrones of Andeján and of Samarkand, and ambition was still his ruling passion One of his thrones was now filled by a brother younger than himself, the other by his inveterate enemy "While I remained at ~ Táshkend at this time," says he, "I endured great vexation and misery I possessed no government, nor had I hopes of acquiring any Most of my servants had left me from absolute want, the few who still adhered to me were unable to accompany me on my journeys from sheer poverty When I went to my uncle the Khan's diwán (levée), I was attended sometimes by one man, sometimes by two, but in one respect I was fortunate, that this did not happen among strangers, but with my own kinsmen After having paid my comphiments to the Khan, I was in the habit of going in to Shah Begum, his mother, bareheaded

* The particulars of this review are detailed with great spirit in Báber's Memoirs, and form a curious picture of the manners of the Moghuls Mem p 103

‡ The commencement of this poem shows the state of the author's mind -

BOOK L

A D 1502

[†] Báber's Mem p 104

[&]quot;I have found no faithful friend in the world, but my soul, Except my own heart, I have no trusty confidant."

and barefoot, with as much freedom as a man would char m use at home, in his own honse At length, however, I AD 1502. wis worn out with this unsettled way of hving, and with having no house or home, so that life itself became burdensome to me I considered with myself, that it was better to take my way and retire into some corner where I might live unknown and undistinguished, than to continue to drag on existence in the wretchedness and misery which I then endured, that it were far better to flee way from the sight of man, as far as my feet could carry me, than to exhibit myself as a speetacle in such distress and absement I had thoughts of going to Khitie, a country which, from my infiney, I alw is had had a strong desire to visit, but had hitherto been prevented, from my being a king, and from my duty to my relations and connections Now, however, my kingship was gone, my mother was safe with her mother and brother, in short, every obstacle to my journey was removed '† His only difficulty was how to get away from his relations To effect this, he represented to the Khan, through his friend Khwája Abul Makárám, that the conquests of Sheibám Khan in Transoxiana had added so much to that chieftain's power, that Turks and Moghuls had equal grounds for apprehension, that it was necessary to watch his progress with jealousy, and arrest his course before he succeeded in reducing all his neighbours under his sway, when it would be too late to think of checking him, that it would be well if the Khan, and his younger brother, Sultan Ahmed, who ruled that part of the Moghul tribe which was in the desert, could come to an understanding, and act in concert, that, as the Khan had not seen his biother for four or five and twenty years, and Báber had never seen him at all, that prince might visit the younger Khan, and act as a channel of communication between the brothers It was Báber's A. P. 1502 plan, had he been allowed to depart under these pretexts, to have visited Moghulistán and Terfán, after which the reins were in his own hands to turn whither he would But this design he communicated to nobody; well knowing that his mother, Kutlak-Nigár-Khanum, would not endure the mention of it, and feeling it painful to impart such a plan to the few steady friends who had followed him in all his wanderings, with very different hopes. The Khan and his mother, Shah Begum, at first agreed to the proposed plan; but, as on reflection it occurred to them that he had asked leave to go in consequence of the poor reception that had been given him, some demur ensued, besides this, the Khan perhaps thought it probable that his brother might pay a visit to Táshkend, as the rapid success of Sheibáni had made the brothers desirous of acting in concert with all their force against the common enemy And accordingly, at that very crisis, a messenger did arrive with information that the younger Khan was already on his march to meet his brother This put an end to Báber's project. A second express soon followed, bring-ing intelligence that he was close at hand, on which Shah Begum, his mother, with the Khan's sisters and other relations, and among the rest Báber, set out to meet him.

* China

† Memours, pp 101, 105

BOOK I

Arrival of the younger Khan.

This family party had advanced as far as some small villages between Táshkend and Seirám, without exactly knowing when the younger Khan would arrive "I had rida, a out carelessly to see the country, when, all at once, I found myself face to face with him I immediately alighted, and advanced to salute him The moment I alighted, the Khan knew who I was, and was much disconcerted, for he had intended to alight somewhere, and, when duly seated, to receive and em-brace me with great form and decorum, but I came too quick upon him, and dismounted so rapidly, that there was no time for ceremony, as, the moment I CHAP HL sprang from my horse, I kneeled down and then em- A p 1502 He was a good deal agitated and disturbed, braced but at length ordered his two sons to alight, kneel, and embrace me " They then mounted, and all rode on to meet his mother, Shah Begum, and the Khanums, his sisters, and, after embracing them, " the party sat down, and continued talking about past occurrences and old stories till past midinght "*

Next morning the younger Khan presented Báber with a dress of honour, and one of his own horses rendy saddled This dress Baber describes as consisting of a Moghul cap embroidered with gold thread, a long frock of Cluna satin, ornamented with flowered needle-work, a cuirass of Chinese work, of the old fishion, with a whetstone and a purse-pocket from one side of this purse-pocket hung three or four articles, such as a perfume-case and its bag, with other trinkets, such as Lastern ladies wear at their necks, while as many dangled on the other side When Báber returned back tricked out and disguised in all this Moghul finery, he relates with much glee that even his intimate friend Khwája Abdal Makáram did not kown him, and asked what Moghul Sult in that was

About twelve or fifteen miles from Táshkend, the Meeting of elder Khan, seated under in awning elected for the the brooceasion, received his brother in all the pride of Moghul state The ceremony, as described by Báber, The younger Khan advanced right towards is curious his brother, and, on coming near hun in front, turned to the left of the elder Khan, fetching a complete circle round him, till he was again in front, when he alighted; and, on coming to the distance at which Coinish is per-•--formed, he knelt nine times, and then went up and embraced him, the elder Khan, as his brother came

* Memoirs, pp 105, 106

neur, studing up and embracing him in turn; they stood a long time clasping cach other in their arms. The younger Khan, while retuing, again knelt nine times, and, when he presented his tributory offerings, again knelt many times, after which he went and sat BOOK I A p 1602 down All the younger Khan's men were dressed in the Moghul fashion, —in rich clothes such as had been presented to Báber, with their horses caparisoned and bedizened in singular style

The Lians march to Al hsl

Ush

The younger Khan brought with him only about fifteen hundred men, but the brothers soon took their resolution to attack Sultan Ahmed Támbol in Andeján As there was some danger that Sheibim might move to the assistance of Támbol, or at least try to make a diversion by an inroad into Táshkend, Sultan Mahmúd's eldest son was left with a strong force to guard Tásh-kend, and a reinforcement was sent to Muhamined Husein Mirza at Uratippa, for the purpose of impeding-Sheibáni's advance in that direction The army under the Khans amounted to thirty thousand men, and crossed the chain of hills that bounds Akhsi on the west To create a diversion. Báber was sent with a detachment of Moghuls to cross the great river, and, proceeding towards Ush and Urkend, to take in the rear Tambol, who was said to have collected his forces in Akhsi ready to face the Khans Baber does not Báber takes mention with what professed intention, so far as concerned himself, the Khans entered his country From what followed, it seems to be probable that they in-tended to seize it for themselves, and wished to use Báber only as an instrument for forwarding their own purposes We find nothing like conscience or honour among the chiefs on the Sirr or the Ainu, in this age. – Ambition sanctioned every degree of treachery and deceit, even towards their nearest relations Báber, with his detachment, marching to the north of Akhsi, crossed the Sirr on rafts, and by a lapid march, surprised and took Ush, on which, all the tribes who char in. occupied the hills and plains to the east and south of  $\frac{1}{A \cdot P - 1502}$ And can glidly declared for him Urkend, a place of great strength lying on the Käshghar frontier, and formerly the cupital of Ferghána, also tendered its alleginnee The people of Murghinán, in like manner, expelled Lámbol's garnson and joined Báber, so that, in a short time, the whole kingdom south of the Sirr, Ander in only excepted, acknowledged his anthority Tambol, inclusible, indisinged, lay with his army Tambol near Akhsi facing the Khans, in a strongly fortified Akhsi position Daily skirmishes ensued, with little advantage on other side

Báber, thus unster of one portion of the south side Biber adof the river, understanding that the men of Andeján  $\frac{vances to}{Andeján}$ also were anxious for an opportunity to join hun, advanced towards the place by night, wishing to introduce into the town some person who might confer with his friends, and concert with them a plan for surprising the place This plan failed from one of those accidents to which night attacks are so subject. In consequence of a mistike of his Moghul auxiliaries as to the watchword,--- military practice to which they were not accustomed, - two parties of his troops, in the darkness of the mght, engaged each other as enemies, and the whole were compelled to retreat Baber, learning soon nfter, howeven, that Tambol's troops at Akhsi were disheartened, and beginning to desert from his camp, ventured to march openly from Ush upon Andeján He was met at some distance from the suburbs by a brother of Tambol's, whose troops he charged without hesitation, driving them back into the fort Báber, with his habitual ardour, was keen for making a push to enter the gates along with them, convinced that such an attack would certainly succeed, but the greater caution of the older leaders decided that it was too late in the day for hazarding such an attempt, at the same time holding it certain that the place must fall next

>

BOOK I.

Is surprised by Támbol,

morning, without loss to the army The troops were accordingly drawn off, to encamp at some little distance. The Sultan, with that frankness and magnanimity which distinguish his character, acknowledges that, after retiring from the town, his conduct was most incautious News had already reached him that Támbol, obliged to abandon his ground near Akhsi, was in full retreat on Andeján; yet, instead of occupying the strong ground along the banks of the Jákán, he crossed that river, and encamped on a level plain, near a village on the other side, and went to sleep, in negligent security, without outpost or vidette Just before dawn, an alarm was given that the enemy was upon them Báber, springing from sleep, rushed out with about ten of his best men, who were at hand to check their progress He drove back the party whom he first met, but soon after fell in with the main body under Támbol himself, whom he did not hesitate to attack with his arrows In an instant, however, he was himself wounded by an arrow which pierced his right thigh, while Támbol, riding up, discharged full on his head a furious sabreblow, which stunned him The blow was inflicted by the very sword which Báber had so lately presented to Though the steel cap which he had on was not him cut through, his head was severely bruised In wheel-ing round he received another sabre-stroke, the force of which was luckily broken by falling on his quiver The enemy were now fast gathering about him, and only three of his followers were near him, so that he had nothing left for it but to try to extricate himself by a hasty retreat He plunged into a deep stream which he met with in his flight, and was fortunate enough to hit upon one of the few places where it was fordable, and, falling in with two or three of his men who joined him, by taking bye-roads he succeeded in reaching Ush. Many brave officers and men fell that day *

Támbol was not able to avail himself of all the ad- CHAP III vantages which this success seemed to offer, as the A D, 1502 Khans had followed close after him when he broke up from his camp at Akhsi, and now advanced to Andeján Two days afterwards Báber joined them from Ush, and Joins the waited upon the elder Khan On this occasion the Khans, Khan communicated his intention to give up to his proposed younger brother, Sultan Ahmed Khan, the whole of arrange-Ferghána south of the river, comprising all the tract of country recovered by Báber, with Andeján when conquered, under pretence that it was necessary that the vounger Khan, as he came from a distance, should possess some convenient station for himself and his troops, near enough at hand to enable him to act against Sheibáni Khan, to check whose growing power was now the grand object Báber was, in the meanwhile, to have Akhsı, and, when matters were settled in Ferghána, both he and the Khans were to march in conjunction against Samarkand, in the event of that city's being recovered, the younger Khan was to get Akhsi also, while Samarkand was to be given up to Báber All this was not very agreeable to the young Sultan, but he saw no remedy, and was obliged to submit On leaving the elder Khan, he went to visit his younger uncle, who, being on this occasion better prepared than when they first met so unexpectedly, came out ceremoniously beyond the range of the tent ropes to welcome him, and, as Báber walked with difficulty and leaning on a staff, in consequence of the wound in his thigh, his uncle took him by the arm, and led him into the tent, telling him that he had behaved like a hero As the younger Khan had passed all his life in the remoter deserts of Tartary, his manners were rude and his accommodations but in-" The small tent in which he sat," says his different nephew, "certainly was not distinguished for its neatness, it had much the air of a marauder's, grapes, horse-furniture, and melons were lying huddled about

BOOK I in it, here and there, in rare confusion" He insisted on Báber's taking the aid of his surgeon to manage his wound, and the serjeant-surgeon, from the report of his patient, appears to have been a quack worthy of his tribe

To assist in carrying into effect the arrangements which it had pleased the Khans to make, Báber was sent to the north of the river with a body of one or two thousand Moghuls, to reduce Akhsi and Kásan, the provinces that had been allotted to him, while the Khans employed themselves in the siege of Andeján He soon got possession of Noukend, a castle on the road to Kásan, and of Páp, a very strong fort in the Akhsi territory

The success of the Khans and of Báber had reduced Sultan Ahmed Támbol and his party to great distress Támbol saw no hopes of retrieving his affairs, but by detaching Báber from his uncles, but he believed that, if that could be effected, it would be impossible. for the Khans to keep their ground in the country Sheikh Bayezíd, Támbol's younger brother, and governor of Akhsi, communicated on the subject with Báber, and invited him into the city Báber, who did not wish to separate himself from his uncles, informed them of the proposal, they advised him to pretend to enter into the plan, to accept the invitation, and afterwards to seize Sheikh Bayezíd

Báber was not fond of this mode of proceeding, as it implied a breach of faith He was, however, eager to get into Akhsi, and to have the co-operation of Bayezíd, hoping perhaps that in due time he might detach him from his brother's interest, or even use him to stiengthen his party against the Khans An agreement was accordingly entered into, the terms of which Báber does not mention, and he was in consequence received into the town, Sheíkh Bayezíd coming out with Násir Mírza, Báber's youngest brother, to receive and do him

Támbol attempts to gain Báber,

who is received into Akhsi

BOOK I A D 1502. Even Sheikh Bayezíd himself was now at a loss how to act Affairs had become complicated Some of Báber's Begs advised him to seize Bayezíd, to occupy the citadel of Akhsi, and trust to his own strength and good fortune Báber objected to this proceeding, as contrary to good faith, and, before they could come to any resolution, Bayezíd moved into the citadel, which he occupied, and which was thus lost During the general confusion, Báber neglected to place a guard on the bridge that led into that fortress, and, before the sun was up next morning, Támbol, who had hastened from Andeján, arrived, attended by two or three thousand cavalry in complete armour, passed the bridge and entered the citadel without opposition.

Bayerid scired

Báber had not at this moment many more than a hundred of his followers with him, all the rest having human the of his followers with him, all the rest having been sent out on various missions, to collect the reve-nues, to take charge of districts, or to garrison forts^{*}. He was himself in the town, which was open towards the citadel Defence might justly have seemed hope-less, yet Báber, whose temper led him never to despond, was busy posting his few troops at the extremity of the different streets, and in procuring supplies of military stores for their use, when Bayezid and Kamber Ali came galloping out of the citadel, to propose terms of pacification on the part of Támbol Báber conducted the envoys to his father's tomb, which was near at hand, and sat down with them in the portico, that they might confer together He sent to call his brother Jehángír, to join them That prince accordingly came, along with Ibráhím Chápuk, but they, after consulting together, had come to the resolution of making Ba-yezíd prisoner Jehángír whispered their intentions to Báber Things were so much changed since that plan was first proposed, the enemy being now in posses-sion of the citadel, and having a powerful force there, while Báber's scanty numbers had not a wall to defend them that he it once perceived that more wis to be envrous hoped for from negotiation than from force, and therefore told his brother that the time for that was gone by Jehanga upon this, made i sign to lbrahim to desist, but he either really misunderst inding the sign, or only pretending to do so had hold of Bayezid, who was munichately surrounded and rudely diagged away by their rough retainers. There was now in end of all treaty. It only remained to take to horse and prepare for action

On observing this let of treachery, the soldiers in the nose citiel immediately attacked the town. They were far what superior in numbers. The feeble force which Baber possessed, in spite of a gill nit resistance, were driven from street to street. The combat was hopeless from the first After brave but fruitless exertions, Baber's followers begin to think of siving themselves by getting out of the place. They made a push for one of the gites, and forced their way through - Bayezid had fortunitely escaped in the confusion which followed the attick When out of the town, Biber imprudently hilted to wait for his brother and the stragglers. The force opposed to them by the enemy was overpowering Only twenty or thirty men were left with the young Sultin Convinced it last that ill wis over, he set off in member full flight without his brother, and had hundly crossed the bridge, when a luge body of the enemy appened at the other end, and followed them in keen prismt Min after man wis overtiken and unhorsed, they had hardly ridden three nules, as fn as the village of Sang, when their party was reduced to eight men in all After passing that village they saw no more of their immediate pursues They rode up the banks of the river Sing for a long time, by a byc path, mong winding glens, remote from the high road, and, then, leaving it before sunset, emerged from the broken country into an open plain. Here they saw something which they suspected VOL T ١ might be a party of men at a distance Báber placed his companions under cover, and ascended a rising ground, in order to discern with greater certainty what it might be; when suddenly a number of horsemen were seen galloping up the hill behind them Not knowing how many they were, they all again took to flight The horsemen pursued Again they were overtaken, one after another, and unhorsed, till at last, of the seven who had been left with the young prince, Mírza Kuh Gokaltásh alone remained, and the pursuit was still continued. "Our horses were too tired to admit of being mucho the gallop," says Báber, "we went on at a canter, Tryt the horse of Mírza Kuli began to move slower and slower. I said to him, ' If deprived of you, whither can I go? Come then, and be it death or life, let u's meet it together' I kept on turning from time to turne, to look for Mirza Kuli At last he said, 'My horse is completely blown, and it is impossible for you to escarge, if you encumber yourself with me Push on, and shift for yourself Perhaps you may still escape' My situation was singularly distressing Mirza Kuli also fell beburnt and I was left-alone "* beirami and Bandeh Ali, were gaining upon Eaber, whose horse began to flor. There were along upon Eaber,

Also left bendlar. Mills moment, two of the memy, Baba beirámi and Bandeh Ali, were gaining upon Dáber, whose horse began to flag There was a tract of rocky ground near at hand, and a steep hill about two miles off He had only twenty arrows left in his quiver He was divided between dismounting at the first, and there defending himself as long as his arrows lasted, or, of pushing on for the second, where he thought he might place a few arrows in his girdle, climb up the hill, and set his enemies at defiance As he had great confidence in his own nimbleness and speed, this last seemed his best chance of final escape, and he spurred on his weary horse It was too fatigued, however, to exert its speed;

* Báber's Mem pp 117, 118

BOOKI

A D 1502.

and his pursuers got within bowshot of him IIe was CHAP III. unwilling to shoot any of his ariows, on which his safety  $_{A \ D \ 1502}$ might finally depend The pursuers, on their part, seemed unwilling to engage in close combat, or to come nearer, but kept tracking him

It was about sunset when he got near the hill His pursuers then called out, and asked hun, whither he meant to go, informing him that both his brothers were prisoners This intelligence added to Bábei's danger and alarm, for he well saw that if the enemy once had all the three biothers in their power, every restraint was taken away from them He said nothing, but kept on his course After some time they again addressed him in a humbler style, dismounting and leading then horses, but jestill went on, and entered a glen, up which they conting ed to follow hun He came to a steep ledge of rock, 2-1 tried to mount it, but his horse lost its footing. Again they addressed him in a mild tone of expostulation, asking him, what end it could serve, in so dark a night (for the night had now fallen dark around them), to go on m a line were there was no pathway They asserted, and confirmed their assertion with an oath, that it was Támbol's wish to place him on the throne He replied that he had no confidence in Támbol, but that, if they really wished to serve him, they might do so by showing him some road by which he could join the Khans, if not, he entreated that they would go, and leave him to his fate They replied that they could not think of leaving him in so desolate a situation, that they heartily wished that they had never come, and were ready to serve him and follow him, go where he would He bid them swear by the Koran that they were sincere, and they swore

After this orth he began to show them some confidence, though his trust was far from being entire

^{*} Baber's Mem p 119 >> 2

He made them go before hum, to point out the way They misled hum, however, and about midnight pre-tended that, in the darkness, they had passed the road which he had wished to take; but offered to conduct BOOK I A D 1502 him to the village of Ghiva, whence he could easily reach the Khan's dominions About three in the morning they came to the Karnán river, when one of them went on to reconnoitre, and returned to report that there were a number of men passing along the road, so that it was not safe to venture on it Báber was in the midst of enemies, and morning was coming on He proposed to his companions that they should all conceal themselves in the hill, during the coming day, and, when night arrived, get something to refresh their horses, and then cross the Sirr, and make for Khojend. Bandeh Ah, who was Darogha (or chief magistrate) of Karnán, offered to go to that town, which was not far off, to procure some food for themselves, and provender for their horses, and get it conveyed to them This. was agreed to, and they all took the road of Karnán, and halted about a mile or two from the place, while the Darogha went in He did not return till after the the Darogha went in file did not return till after the sun was risen, when he brought out three loaves for the party, but nothing for their horses They went off to a hillock hard by, to eat their bread, tying the horses lower down in marshy ground, out of sight, and kept watch on different sides of the hill They first saw a party of five, one of whom they knew, pass by, going to Akhsi Báber did not venture to speak to them, knowing them to be indisposed to him; but, as they were likely to halt for the night at Karnán, he laid a plan for carrying off their horses They next saw a single horseman riding over the plain, but did not think it safe to accost him It was, as he afterwards discovered, a fugitive from the rout, one of Báber's Begs, lurking like himself As their horses had had nothing to eat for two days and a night, it was necessary to go down to the plan to let them  $grv \in About$  ifter noon prayers, cave mixture they had gone down they observed a horseman  $\frac{1}{2002}$  radie over the very height they had left. Baber receiptised hum for the balanter (or Heidman) of they went up to hum and addressed hum with kindress tried to g m his good will and m the end det tached hum to bring provender for their horses is me tood for the nucleus and the tackle used in passing rive. They engaged hum to meet them on the same space of the drive process.

ł

Lecting provers were past, when they descried a hor man going from Karnan to Gluva - They hailed him and he inswered them. It was the very sime ho, cman they had seen before but though he was a Beg who had been five years in Baber's service, and was well-known to hun, so successfully did he change his verse for the purpose of concentment, that Baber did not recognise hun. On the contrary, he was so un as from this man's passing and reprising them in this suspicious way, that he was afraid to adhere to his assignation with the Kilinter. It was settled, there fore that they should go to some retired garden house near karnan and there get a person who might repair to the oppointed place of meeting, and bring the Wilanter. To Kurnan they all accordingly went, and on their army dathere as it was winter, they brought the Sult in a clock made of year old lambskin, with the wool in-ide ind course woven cloth without, such as is used for wirinth in thit country. They also proented for him a homely mess of pottage of boiled millet flom, which he cat with much relish On his inquiring if they had sent mybody to meet the Kalanter on the hill, they assured him that they had, but the truth was that they were playing fulse, and had not only met him dividy, but had despatched him on to Tambol, to let hun know where the Sult in wis to be found. At the sinc time, pretending great care for Baber's safety, NI

BOOK 1

they waked hum after a fire had been lindled, and, when he had empoyed but a few moments' rest, made hum get up, mount his horse, and ride to another house in the suburbs, which they represented as safer, from being more out of the town

While the Sultan lay down to rest in his new quarters, Buba Seiráim, one of his late pursuers, went to the terrace roof of the house, to keep a look-ont Λ little before noon, he came down and reported that he saw one Yusef, a Darogha, coming towards them As this man was well known to be a magistrate in the service of Tambol, Báber desired Babi to go out and ascertain if he had come in consequence of hearing that the Sultan was there On his return Baba reported that Yúsef had met a man at the gate of Ahksi, from whom he had learnt that the Sultan was there, that he had put the min in close custody to prevent his abusing his knowledge, and had hustened to the spot to meet his sovereign Báber, who began to fear that he had -all along been deceived, asked Baba carnestly what was his real opinion of the matter IIe answered that they were all his servants, and that there was nothing left for it but to join Tainbol and his party, who would certainly make him king While they were yet conversing, Yúsef entered, and throwing himself on his knees, exclaimed, "Why should I conceal anything from you?" Sultan Ahmed Támbol knows nothing of the matter, but Sheikh Bayezid has got information where you are, and has sent me lither" On hearing this, Baber gave up everything for lost, and entreated Yúsef, if all was indeed over, to inform him honestly, that he might, while there was yet time, perform his last ablutions, before prostrating himself in prayer, and thus prepare for his fate, like a brave man and a true behever Yúsef swore again and again that he was sincere, but Báber did not believe him, and ietired into the gaiden to spend the few moments yet left morning light returned, and it was ascertained that he was gone, and that his march was directed towards BOOP I л в 1503 Andeján, express was despatched after express to give to Andelán,

Andejun, express was despitiened after express to give the Khans notice of his approach The expresses and Sheibáni reached the army of the Khans nearly at the same time; and the armies neither of Táshkend nor of Uratippa had time to march to The Khans had still with them about their succour 15,000 men, and, after their hurried retreat, on the first alarm, across the river at Khojend, into the Akhsi territory, were joined by Báber, who had escaped without followers They now believed themselves for a time at least, to be in perfect safety, when of a sudden, the in-defatigable Sheibáni, with 30,000 horse, burst in upon defatigable Sheibáni, with 30,000 horse, burst in upon the camp The Moghuls, taken by surprise, had hardly time to mount and draw up Being in confusion, and borne down by superior numbers, resistance was un-availing, and the defeat complete The horses of the Khans being worn out in the flight, they were both made prisoners Báber effected his escape, and made his way to the southern hills of Ferghána " Sheibáni, after his decisive battle, lost no time in improving his victory Bayezíd waited upon him from Akhsi, and both he and his brother Támbol expressed the deepest gratitude for his aid, and the most devoted attachment to his interests The Uzbek, on his part, seemed quite satisfied with their professions, did not seemed quite satisfied with their professions, did not waste time by going back to Andeján, but, leaving them to complete the reduction and settlement of the rest of the country, moved down the Sirr, towards the dominions of the elder Khan

Conquers Tushkend,

He met with no opposition Consternation and dismay had marched before him As soon as the news of the defeat of the Khans, and that they were both pri-soners in the hands of Sheibáni, reached Táshkend,

• The disaster of Tashkend was See Tar Rish f 117 in Cancer, A 11 908 (June, 1503)

defeats the Moghuls and takes the Khans Sultan Muhammed Sultan fled with his family, children, CHAF III und the Moghul Ulús, into the deserts of Moghulistán A n. 1503 Muhammed Husein, of Uratippa, regarding any opposition as unavailing, and likely to be fatal, abandoned that place, and, unable to inake his way across the Scihun, fled to the mountainous region of Karatigín, with his followers and whatever he had time to carry Sheibam mennyhile marched downwards by away Shahrokhin, Táshkend, and Uratipph, occupying the country and the towns as he went along IIe had formerly been ambitious of an alliance by marinage with the family of the Khans, but his wish had not been gratified IIe now enlarged his demand to three intermarriages, and he himself, his son Taímur Beg, and his nephew Jáni Beg, mariied each a princess of the family Sheibáni behaved to the Khans with great courtesy, and, after the conquest of Táshkend, set them at liberty, releases the in consideration of the patronage he had himself re-ceived from the elder Khan, but he detained as many of the Moghuls as he could, and no fewer than 30,000 of them were added to the Uzbek army He seems to have borne a particular grudge to Báber's old friend Khwája Abul-Mokáram Immediately after the battle he despatched a messenger to Táshkend to announce that the two Khans were in his hands, and that Báber had fled the country, and to add, that, if the inhabitants had any wish to save the captive plinces, they must prevent the Khwája's escape, and detain him in custody He was accordingly thrown into prison, but in a short time after effected his escape To prevent his being recognised, he submitted to the mortification of cutting off his beard Unable, from his age and infirmities, to reach any place of safety, he was compelled to take refuge with a man who lived in a village near Táshkend This person concealed him for a day or two, but aftei wards gave him up, when the Khwája was carried before Sheibáni, who on seeing him inBOOK I A P 1503 quired, "What have you done with your beard?" The Khwája answered by quoting two Persian verses, "He who puffs at the lamp which God has lighted, singes his beard," but the felicity of the allusion did not avail him, and he was put to death. Sheibáni, having placed Uzbek garrisons in the chief towns, returned straight to Samarkand, while the two Khans, seeing their power broken and their army destroyed or transferred into the ranks of their enemy, retired into Moghulistán *

Sheibáni invades Hissár

Sheibáni's stay at Samarkand was short. His ambition had been fired by success, and he now aimed at the conquest of Khorásán itself But he saw, that, bethe conquest of Knorásan itself But he saw, that, be-fore ventuing on such an attempt, it was necessary, in order to prevent any attack on his flank or from be-hind, to reduce not only Ferghána, but Hissár, Balkh, and other countries north of the Parapamisan range Khosrou Shah, who now ruled Hissár, Kunduz, and other extensive territories on both sides of the Amu, fully anticipated such an attack, and used every exer-tion to be prepared for it When Muhammed Husein Doghlat field from Urations to Karatigín Khosrou II. tion to be prepared for it When Muhammed Liusein Doghlat field from Uratippa to Karatigin, Khosrou in-vited him to his court, and questioned him earnestly as to the power of Sheibáni, the composition of his army, and his military tactics Khosrou did not expect an attack that year, but thought it likely that he might be invaded the year after Early in the winter, however ‡, Sheibáni, who never slumbered over his projects, led an army into Hissár His purpose was not to seize Khos-rou or to conquer his territories, but merely to try by experience the extent of that prince's power, and the experience the extent of that prince's power, and the temper of his military force IIc ravaged Khosrou's country, meeting with little resistance, and then marched down to Balkh, which was held for Badi-ez-zemán Mírza,

* Far Resh ff 113---119, Rozet-es-Scfa, vol vn

+ 1 his expedition seems to have taken place in the winter of A ii 909, probably in October or November, A D 1503 Tar Resh ff 117, 118 Balkh continued to be besieged during the winter •

the eldest son of the Sultan of Herát IIere too he met CHAP III. with hittle to oppose hum, and hid siege to the capital  $A^{D} = 1503-4$ Having thus gamed experimental proof of the nature and extent of what he had to fear from the rulers of Hussir and Khorásan, he resolved, before going farther, to march back, and remove whatever might occasion him danger or annoyance from behind IIe, therefore, returned to Samarkand, and soon set out onee more with a strong army for Andeján

The pretext for this invasion does not appear but Sheibáni Invades An-Sheibáni wished to possess Andeján, and was never at dejan 1 loss for a pretext Sultan Aluned Támbol, ever since Spring of the battle of Akhsi, had been busily employed in re- end of A D 1504 ducing the hill-tribes of Andeján, and was in the country of the Jageráks, in the south east of Ferghána, when he heard that Sheibám had entered his territory Without losing a moment, he hurried back to his capital, resolved to defend it to the last Foi that purpose he called in all his garrisons, as well as the troops that were scattered in stations over the country These proceedings Sheibini saw with delight His plan had been to lay siege in person to Andeján, to send out detachments in every direction to seize the castles, ravage the country, earry off the inhabitants and reduce it to a desert, and then to retire, he proposed next year again to spread his troops over the country in the same way, to carry off or destroy the crops, to run whatever had escaped the year before, and complete the devastation These measures, the plan of operations adopted by Támbol unexpectedly shortened Sheibáni saw the possibility of deciding the contest at one blow As his troops approached Andeján, Támbol, who had concentrated his whole force, marched out with a considerable body of men to harass the advance, but discovering that, not the advance only, but the whole hostile army, was close upon hun, he retired with piecipitation, and his active enemy, following close behind, cut a number of his

BOOK II A D 1504 Besieges Támbol,

who surrenders and is put to death.

troops to pieces, before they could re-enter the town Sheibáni, thereupon, resolved to block up the army of Támbol thus collected at one point, and dispirited by the loss they had recently sustained, and at once to push on the siege vigorously to a conclusion The siege had lasted only forty days, when Támbol found that all his means of defence had failed. It would appear, that, trusting to his being able to keep the field with at least some part of his army, he had not made sufficient provision for the supply of the whole within the walls He therefore began to think seriously of capitulating, and discovered, by accident, a mediator in the enemy's camp Muhammed Husein Doghlat of Uratippa, whom Khosrou in the course of that winter had expelled from Karatigin, having, with a part of his followers, effected his escape over the snowy mountains of that country, had descended into the high' dunds of the Jageraks, with which tribe he had united  $i_{thc_{n}}$  repelling the late attack of Támbol. He had subsequery nently re paired to Sheibáni's camp, under a promise of il  $H_{mmunity}$ There he had been most hospitably entertaisromed and feasted, by Sheibáni and the Uzbek chiefs pes On the morning of the forty-first day of the siege, 's Támbol, finding himself reduced to extremity, and perec_{ceiving} Muhammed Husein in the enemy's trenches, callgled out to him from the top of a lofty turret, "My Mír. 2a, do not forget me, and think of the times when we sucked milk from the same breast Tell me what I should do, and I will do it " Támbol had been his foster-brother, and Muhammed was much affected He asked Támbol, why he stood out, if he had no hopes of success; and intimated that the only step left was to surrender at discretion Taimur Sultan, Sheibáni's son, was standing by at the time In a word, Támbol, compelled by necessity, at length came out, accompanied by his brothers Conscious of his danger and filled with alarm, he threw his arms round his fosterbrother's neck. The Uzbeks hesitated not a moment, but unrelentingly put them all char m to the sword on the spot The gates of the town were,  $\frac{1}{1004}$  nt the same tune, closed, and not the slightest plunder or excess was permitted within the walls Andeján was bestowed on Jam Beg Sultan, Sheibám's consin, and Sheibám soon after retanced his steps to Samarkand, where he mide every preparation for returning to sub-due those countries on the Amu which last year he had only visited *

During all these transactions, and ever since the Babera bittle in which the Khins had been taken prisoners, in Andej in Baber had been compelled to wander as a fugitive and an outlaw in the hill-country on the south of Andeján, and especially among the mountain recesses of Sukh and Husluar, districts of the province of Asfera In all his winderings he was accompanied by his mother by some individuals of his family and household, and by a few futliful followers, who adhered to hum in the midst of all his misfortunes. After he had been subjected for nearly a year to the utmost extremes of hardship and suffering, hunted from village to village, and from forest to mountain, finding the toils of his pursuers closing around him, that his partisans in the low country were totally dispersed, and that not a chance of success was left, he held a consultation with his small but devoted band There was little room for diversity of opimon Their prospects were dreniy and dark The kingdoms of Samarkand and Bokhara, which had so long been held by his family, and the former of which he had himself twice occupied for a brief spice, were now in the firm grasp of an Uzbek barbanan, the territories of his uncle, the elder Khan, had shared the same fate, and his own little kingdom of Ferghána, a kingdom which, if we examine his history critically, he cannot be sud ever to have fully enjoyed, had in like manner been added to the overgrown dominions of his rival BOOK I. Opposition was hopeless; and he could not expect long A D. 1504 to secure even his life, if he continued to roam as an adventurer in a territory which he had once vainly called his own Young and brave as he was, the world was before him, and he resolved, abandoning for a time his native country, to court in foreign lands that success which fortune denied him at home The territory and court of Khorásán naturally presented themselves to his imagination That kingdom was governed by Sultan Husein Mírza, a monarch of great power and reputation, and beyond comparison the most distinguished prince then living of the family of Taimur Accordingly, in the summer of A 11 910, Báber bade a last adieu to the Sets out for Khorásán land of his nativity, and the whole party set out to cross the lofty and snow-covered range of mountains that separate Andeján from Karatıgín and Hissái * Moharrem, 3 л.п 910,

* Tar Resh ff 118 121, Baber, p 168

While bringing to a close this first period of Báber's eventful life, it may be proper to advert briefly to the fate of his uncles the two Khans After they were released by Sheibáni Khan, both the brothers retired into the younger the desert. The younger Khan, Ahmed or Ilachi, retired to his own dominions in the east of Moghulistán, where he spent a few months His previous life had been a fortunate one, and his late disaster preyed upon his mind, and affected his health He never regained his spirits, and died in the end of the following winter † Haider Mírza relates, that, he had heard from Khwája Taj ed-din Muhammed, a saintly man, whose family were the hereditary Sheikh-ul-Islams of that country, that, when the Khan was suffering much from dysentery, he had observed to him --- that it was reported that Sheibáni had caused noxious herbs to be mixed with his food, and that, if such was his highness's wish, he

> ' Báber's Mem p 127, Tar † End of winter of A 11 909 Resh f 125 probably March, 1504

J June,

AD 1504

Death of

Khan,

would procure the precious teriák, or antidote against CHAF III poison, brought from Khita, and would administer it The Khan replied with a sigh, "Yes, Shahi Beg Khan has indeed poisoned me, and I will tell you how From a low degree of abasement he has raised himself to such a pitch of elevation, that he has been able to make us two brothers prisoners, and set us at large again From this disgrace originates the disease that has preyed upon my frame If you know any antidote for a malady of that nature, it may be useful "*

The death of Sultan Ahmed Khan was, as usual, followed by civil dissensions in Moghulistán When that prince had set out from Aksu to assist his brother on the Seihun, he caused his eldest son Mansúr Khan to be installed as Khan of the Moghuls, and now, on his father's death, Mansúr continued to hold that high station His uncle, Sultan Mahmúd, howevei, who was at the time in Moghulistán, secured the chief power among the tribes in the western range of the desert, while Mansúr exercised his authority at Aksu, and in the whole territory to the east, as far as Chálís and But Mahmúd's reign in the western desert Terfán was not undisturbed Dissensions and civil wars soon broke out His nephews Said Khan and Khalil Khan, the youngei brotheis of Mansúr, carried on against him a harassing warfare, in which defeats were in turn suffered on both sides, and the success was various But the aidoui and activity of his youthful competitors, who naturally drew into their ranks the more adventurous spirits of the tilbes, in the end secured the ascendancy Sultan Mahmúd, who was naturally indolent, had also much of his fither Yúnis Khan's preference for feitile and populous countries, and, disgusted with the hardships and sufferings to which he was exposed,

• Tar Resh ff 115—119, Ro zet cs-Sufa, vol vu., MS — Briggs s Ferishta, vol u. p 22 Ferishta declared, that the most wretched situation in Táshkend BOOK L was better than the sovereignty of Aksu. He retired to Betikend in Moghulistán, where there was some cultivation After lingering about five years in the country, which was then a proy to civil discord, finding himself hard pushed, he finally resolved to throw hunself on the protection of Sheibáni That chief was at Herát when the Khan returned towards his old dominions The Uzbek was not of a character to expose and of his brother himself to any risk, by harbouring a prince of high buth and pretensions, and whose restless disposition might cause him future trouble "I have shown him favour once already," said he, "to continue to lavish it, would be permicious to my country" The Khan was accordingly seized at Khojend and put to death with five of his sons The eldest, Sultan Muhammed Sultan, AH 914, AD 1508 who had used every effort to prevent his father from putting himself in Sheibáni's power, did not accompany him, but remained in Moghulistán, and afterwards repaired to Berendúk Khan, and Kásim Khan, the chiefs of the Kaizák Uzbeks The succession of Khans of the Moghuls was carried on for many years afterwards, in the family of the younger Khan, Sultan Ahmed *

> * Tar Resh ff 84-116 131 The history of the Khans of the Moghuls, and of the Amirs of Kashghar, subsequent to Taimur Toghlak Khan, is detailed at great length in the Tarikhi Reshidi of Haider Mirza, and indeed forms the proper subject of the two first books of These details are the that work more valuable as the succession of the Moghul Khans and of the Amirs of Káshghar, from that period, is not contained in any other work with which I am acquainted, and the learned Deguignes, as has been already observed, omits the subject from want of materials, observing, that, even the names of the princes of Káshghar, subsequent to Taimur, were unknown Hist, des Huns, tom iv p 337 The Tarilhi Rethidi well descrives to be published in the original, or translated It 15 the production of a learned and accomplished man, and, in the two latter parts, of a contemporary, intimately acquainted with the men and events that he describes Central Asia was then in a transitionstate, which ended in the settlement of the Uzbeks in Transovizua, of the Kirghiz confederacy in Mochulistan, and of the Chaghatai Turls in India. The minute details which the author gives of his own sufferings, and of the sufferings of his nearest relations, during the period that followed the ascendancy of Sheibáni Khan in Máwerannaher and Khorasán, — of their escapes, adventures, successes, and discomfitures, — let us more into the condition of the country and feelings of the inhabitants of these states and of Káshghar at that crisis, than perhaps any other monument extant. A portion of the last book relates to the history of Kashmir and Hindustán, and the whole work is interspersed with geographical accounts of countries, especially to the east CHAP III of Mawerannaher, little known in Europe The rise and fall of several tribes, or associations of tribes, in the desert, are recorded with much clearness and a perfect acquaintance with their external and internal policy It would form a most valuable accompaniment to the Commentaries of Baber, which it illustrates in every page The two royal cousins are worthy of each other, and do honour to their age

1

BOOK II

PABEL'S FRANSACTIONS IN KALLE AND MARTEAN NAILP

CHAPTER J

CONQUIST OF KALL

BABER PASSIS THEOLOH THE RESAL TELETORS — HE-TOLY OF KHO-ROU SHAH — RAFET JOINT D DE LAKE — (105518 THE AND — 9071-RANE CONQUERS HISSAL AND FEEDER THEOL HIS FEOTIFIE. EAST CONQUERS HISSAL AND FEEDER DE ATH OF HIS FEOTIFIE. I (BER JOETED BY KHOSEOU'S MOUTLES — DEATH OF HIS FEOTIFIE. WHO IS DESERTED BE HIS FOLLOW ES — BARTE MALLEN OF KHOSEOL. WHO IS DESERTED BE HIS FOLLOW ES — BARTE MALLEN AT CANST, K (RUL, WHICH HE TAKES — STATE OF KABUL.— BALLES OF CLITOLS CAMAREN ON THE INDUS — AFFAIRS OF RADAKIESIAN — KHOSEOUS DEATH — BABER TAKES AND ABANDONS KHEAT — FAKE DISMISSED — JEHANGIP TEELS FROM KABUL.

BOOK II

A D 1504 Baber enters the Illesar lerritory When Báber felt that not a hope of success, or even of safety, was left for hum, if he persisted in hingering in his native kingdom, and that it was vain to contend any longer against the overwhelming superiority of Sheibáin Khan and his Uzbeks, we have seen that he pitched upon Khorásán as the scene of his future exertions That kingdoin had been governed for nearly half a century by Sultan Husein Mírza, Baikera, a descendant of Taímur Beg, and consequently of Báber's own family He was the most powerful monarch of his time, and his splendid court was the great resort of men of letters, of artists, of military adventurers, and of unfortunate princes At the period when Báber set out on his perilous adventure³, in which he was

^{*} Moharrem, A 11 910, begins 14th June, A p 1504

Attended by his two brothers, as well as by his consined and the structure of the source of the second provided and the structure of the source of the second provided and the second provided at the second

The fugitive prince's followers bore every external mark of having participated in his long misfortunes They were, as he himself describes them, a motley band of between two and three hundred men, most of them on foot, miseribly dressed and equipped, with brogues on their feet, clubs in their hands, and blouses or long trocks over then shoulders, and who carried on their persons all that they possessed in the world They had only two tents in the whole party, Baber's own, which he gave up to his mother, who also accompanied him, and shared his exile and his fortunes, and an ordinary felt tent* of 1 kind common among the Tartars, con-structed of cross poles, which was easily folded up when struck, and as easily unfolded again, to be pitched at the next stage, and which served for head-quarters Though bound for Khorásán, the young prince was not without hopes that, in the general confusion which prevailed all over the countries on the Amu, something favourable might cast up by the road Separate ad-venturers daily joined his little band, and brought the report, to him by no means disagreeable, that the Túrki and Moghul tubes of Khosrou's country were in a very unsettled and discontented state †

By the return of his envoy, Báber found that nothing was to be looked for from any friendly disposition on the part of Khosrou Shah, but his expectations from the impratory tribes were rather confirmed He accordingly moved forward, and, as he advanced, was met by an ambassador from Khoston, who, though sent under pretence of doing him honour, was in reality commissioned to act chiefly as a spy on all his actions, and who prescribed to him the direction and length of each day's journey, and even the spots where he was to halt. Báber complains that though he twice, when in distress, passed through the territories of that chief, so famous for his hiberality to others, he never was a sharer of it. And, indeed, it is certain that Khosrou, who had formed for himself a powerful principality on the ruins of one portion of the cinpire of the hon-e of Taimur, did not feel much pleased at the visit of a prince of that family, of high pretensions, and, what to a successful usinger was still more alarming, of acknowledged talents, and warm with all the fire of youthful ambition

† Bahers Mem p 127

* Ilachak

Khortou Shuh, his carly life, Bábci had a fixed abhorrence of Khosrou Shah, and not without reason Khosrou was originally from Túrkistán, of a Kipchák tribe He had been in the service of different Túrki chiefs, and finally of Sultan Mahinúd Mírza, one of Bábei's paternal uncles, whom he accompanied in the disastrous expedition into Irák, in which Sultan Abusaid Mírza, Mahinúd's father, lost his life. In the course of the retreat he did Mahinúd most essential service, and gained great influence over him. Khosrou accompanied him to Hissár, of which that prince became the sovereign, and, on the death of Sultan Ahmed Mírza, when Mahinúd succeeded his elder brother in Samarkand, Khosrou accompanied him to his new capital, where he was his principal minister and adviser during his short and unpopular reign in that city. On Sultan Mahinúd's death, Khosrou for some time concealed the event, and seized on his master's treasure. But no sooner was the demise of the Sultan known, than Khosrou was forced to fly from Samarkand, by the popular commotions that ensued, and which were in a priticular manner directed against char i humself, as the prime instrument or abettor of his mister's gross licentiousness and tyranny Sultan Mahmúd, on succeeding to the throne of Gains hun-

POOK H

A # 1501

Samukand, had given the country of Hissán to his eldest son, Sultan Masaúd Mírza, who had, in consequence, taken charge of it Khosiou Shah had emoyed the government of the rich province of Kunduz, to the south of the Oxus, before Sultan Mahmúd's deith, and even then had already attained such importruce that he numbered not less than five or six thousand men among his private retainers Availing lumself of favourable circumstances, as they presented themselves, he went on mercasing his power and term-tory, till he had gamed possession of the whole country between the Annu and the Hundú-kúsh mountams, and from the mountains of Badakshán down to Balkh; and drew the revenues of it on his own account He paid great attention to financial matters, of which, says Baber, though a Túrk, he understood the details, and he made a liberal use of his wealth * He was fortunate also in his wars When Sultan Husein Miza * " 901, of Herát led an army against Hissár, Khosrou, as we have seen, bravely maintained himself in Kunduz, sending his biother Wah to support Masáúd Mírza on the Ilissár bank of the river Sultan Husein, though bifiled for a time, at length found means, by a stratagem, to effect the passage of the Anu, upon which Masaúd, sciled with unreasonable alarm, could not be prevailed upon to remain and keep his ground, in his own teiritories, but crossed the hills, and fled to his younger brother, Bayesánghar, the Sultan of Samarkand, while Walı, thus deserted, retreated into Khutlán

Sultan Husein, finding the field clear, laid siege to Repulses Sultan Hissár, a very strong fort, and at the same time sent II usein.

A b 1496

^{*} Baber's Mem p 31 0 3

lus eldest son, Badı-ez-zemán Mírza, to attack Khrosrou BOOK 11 ins eldest son, Badi-ez-zeman Mirza, to attack Enroston in Kunduz Hissár, deserted by its sovereign, was bravely defended for several months by Baki Cheghá-niáni, another of Khosrou's brothers, assisted by some officers of Masáúd Badi-ez-zemán, meanwhile, maiched against Khosrou, who, on his approach, concentrated his force at Kunduz The Mírza advanced within ten or twelve miles of that town, upon which Khosrou, though inferior in numbers, boldly marched out, and offered battle This Badi-ez-zeinán declined, and kept onered battle Inis Badi-ez-zeinan declined, and kept within his trenches, but soon after, leaving Kunduz behind, he advanced with his army higher up the country to Talikán Khosiou despatched detachments after hun, which watched his movements, gained several advantages over him, and straitened his operations by repeated skirnushes The old Sultan, observing how matters went, began to be uneasy about the result, especially as the spring rains were at hand, which would render his situation hered the mean would render his situation beyond the river uncom for his army He was glad, therefore, to save ap-pearances by agreeing to a peace, which was confirmed by the marilage of one of his sons with a daughter of Masáúd Mírza Having thus a pretence for retreating, he raised the siege of Hissár, and, recrossing the Amu, directed his efforts against Khosrou Shah, all whose detachments he drove in, and he was preparing to lay siege to Kunduz, when, by the mediation of Badi-ez-zemán, a peace was concluded, and the prisoners that had been taken, on both sides, restored After this, the Sultan bestowed the government of Balkh on his son Badı-cz-zemán Mírza, and returned to Khorásán *

The success thus obtained against a sovereign so able and so powerful as Sultan Husein, added wonderfully to Khosrou Shah's reputation When, in the following year, a misunderstanding took place between the Sultan

ан 902, ар 1497 und his son, which ended in i civil war, in the course CHAP L of which the Sultan expelled Badi ez-zemán from Balkh, Khosrou Shih gave the young primee a favourable reception, and supported him, and all his followers, in so handsome a manner, that, we are told, hardly any difference could be perceived between their new style of equipment and their former one at Herát, the most splendid court of the  $ige \in$  Khosrou having quarelled with Sultan Masifid, who had returned to Hissái on the perce, sent Badi-ez-zemán Mirza, with two of his own brothers, to conquer that country But this having been speedily composed, the Mirza, leaving Khosrou, crossed the Hazara mountains, and joined Zuhnán Beg Arghián in Zemin-dáwer

It was not long after this that Báber took Samarkand the first time, when Bayesanghan Minza, driven An 2003, from his throne, fled through his elder brother Masáúd's Rebi 1 A 197, territories, and sought refuge in Kunduz with Khosiou Nov Shah, under whose tuition he had at one time been Khosrou saw the use that could be made of the Mírza, as a fit instrument for gratifying his own ambition He desputched an envoy to Sultan Masauid, proposing that they should march in concert, with all their forces, to retake Sumarkand, and that, when they had eonquered it. Masaud should fix the seat of his government in that capital, and give up the inferior principality of Surprises Hissár to his brother Bayesanghár By these negoti- Hissar ations, Masáúd was thrown completely off his guard, while Khosrou, accompanied by Bayesanghár, advanced as it on their route to Samarkand, till they reached Cheghánián near Hissár, where they halted, under pretence of waiting till they were joined by Masaud and the Hissár army It happened that Masáúd, just at that time, had deprived some of his Begs of their jágns or estates, a encumstance that had excited violent discon-

⁻ Bibers Mem pp 44-46 o 4

BOOK 11 tent among them, in consequence of which some of them had already left him, and joined Bayesanghár Khosrou, availing himself at once of this dissatisfaction and of the state of thoughtless security into which he had lulled Masáúd, by a sudden march surprised and took possession of the fort of Hissár Masáúd himself escaped with difficulty, and sought refuge with Sultan Husein Mírza in Khorásán

After this success, Khosrou placed Bayesanghár in Hissár, and bestowed Khutlán, a portion of Masáúd's territory, on his own brother, Wali He then marched to invade Sultan Husein's dominions, that he might co-operate with Badi-ez-zemán and Zulnún Beg Arghún, who had revolted in the south He laid siege to Balkh, at the same time sending on Wah to make an inroad towards Shiberghán, from which he brought back a hundred thousand sheep and three thousand camels Sultan Husein had marched in person towards Kandahár against his rebel son, and had taken Bist, but, having failed to reduce Zulnún, the powerful chief by whom that prince was protected, he found himself compelled The rebels were encouraged, by the failure to retreat of this expedition, to hazard a bold enterprise, and pushed forward a large body of troops, which had nearly taken Herát by surprise The declining years of the Sultan were embittered by the rebellion of his sons, and by civil wars. The fugitive Masáúd, meanwhile, was well received by Sultan Husein, who gave him one of his daughters in marriage, but he had afterwards the unaccountable weakness to yield to the solicitations of Bákı Cheghániáni, Khosrou's brother, who had taken refuge along with him in the Court of Herát, to flec from that city, without taking leave of the Sultan, his father-in-law, and to rejoin Khosrou

Blinds Mashud Khosrou Shah, on the arrival of Masáúd, sent to call Bayesanghár Míiza from Hissár He had now in his camp thiec princes of the house of Tamur, Sultan

new attack on Balkh but as his plans were now rije BOOK 11 for execution, and his own power firmly established, he A p. 1504 threw aside all disguise, and caused that annable and Murders accomplished prince to be strangled, after which he Bayesanusurped the sovereignty of the whole country from 10 Mohar-Karatigin to the Kindú kúsh mountains, and from A 11 905, Balkh to Badakhshán This power he had already en-joyed for about five years, when Báber arrived for the second time in his dominions When Khosrou was at х в 1499 the height of his power, his army amounted to between twenty and thirty thousand men. He was a prince of great capacity, liberal to lus dependents, fond of show and inrignificence, an able administrator; but lieartless, profligate in his manners, totally unprincipled, and a slave to ambition *

In marching through the territories of Khosrou Shah, Báber, as has been observed, was attended with jealous watchfulness by that prince's officers When he arrived at Kabádián, a city on the Amu above Turincz, he was met by an envoy from Báki Cheghániáni, a younger brother of Khosrou, and who held the government of Cheghánián, Turinez, and other districts north of the uver Báki, as seems to have been the invariable custom of the age, was then on indifferent terms with his brother, and the envoy assured Báber of his master's readiness to join him, and to acknowledge him as his sovereign Báki hunself soon after waited on Báber, while he was crossing the Amu at a ferry near Uby, and, having conferred with him, invited him to move down the lift bank of the river, till he was opposite to the town of Turmez, where he promised to meet him There Bakı accordingly brought across his whole family, and his most valuable property, and then proceeded, m concert with Báber, towards Kahmerd, a district lying high up in the mountains between Libák and Bannan, and at that time governed by Ahmed Kásun d

Balkrs Mem p 72 , p 51

ghất

rem,

17 Aug

Paher joined by Bákl л и 910, A D 1504

Crosses the Amu.

nephew of Khosion It was the intention of the conicderates to deposit their women, and Báki's heavy

. baggage, in Ajer, a fort in that territory, after which they would be free to follow then fortune, wherever it mght cill *

The influence of the youthful Bábei's fame and Johned by tannly, which Khosion had so naturally dicaded, soon khosion began to be felt Every day, while on their march, dependents they were joined by men of note, who deserted from Khosiou, and who brought assurances that all the Moghuls in his service, a numerous and powerful body, only waited a favourable opportunity to declare for Báber It happened that, at this causis, all the wander ing tribes in that country, of every face, were dissatisfied with Khosiou, though the leading causes of the general disorganisation that prevailed were assuredly the terior inspired by the rapid progress and conquests already made by Sheibam and Ins Uzbeks, and then advance towards Hissár

Sheibam, after the reduction of Andelán and the sheibani death of Tambol, returned to Samarkand There he missár was occupied for some time in preparations for reducing Hissán, and for attacking the dominions of Khorásán His anny, by the addition of the Moghuls, was now nearly doubled, and the experience of the preceding winter had convinced him, that he would have little trouble with Khosiou, "whom he could drive away like a fly from its dish by a wave of the hand " He marched tirst to Hissár, which was bravely defended by Shiram, Chehreh, a servant of Khosrou's Sheibám m peison superintended the operations of the siege, and Shiram after a time, surrendered by capitulation, on the promise of being allowed to leave the place in safety, a promise that was faithfully observed †

While the siege was going forward, Sheibam ordered

* Baber pp 127, 128

+ Iar Resh ff 115 121. Biber p 168

CHAP I

N D 1504

his brother Mahmúd Sultán[®] to take what number of BOOK IL. men he chose, and advance against Kunduz It was An 1504 the stronghold of Khosiou, who, for many years past, Sends his had been filling it with magazines of provisions and brother rgrinst military stores, as well as treasure, and had loudly hunduz, proclaimed that he had laid up such abundance of everything, that, if all else failed, he could at least defend hunself for twenty years in the castle of Kunduz In the midst of this boastful trifling, news arrived that Sheibáni was besicging Hissái, and that Mahmúd Sultan was on his murch to closs the Amu That same hour, abandoning all his stores and preparations, he packed up his treasure and such of his valuables as were at hand, and fled in dismay from the town, to seek shelter and safety in the recesses of the neighbouring mountains Hardly had he quitted Kunduz, when Mulla Muhammed Túrkestám, one of his old and confidential which he servants, took possession of it, and declared for Sheibánı; and, two days after, Mahmúd Sultan arrived and occupied it with his army †

Death of his brother

takes

After the surrender of Hissár, and when news of the reduction of Kunduz had reached him, Sheibáni, having committed the government of Hissár to Khamzeh Sultan, and of Cheghánián to Mehdi Sultan, began to march lessurely home As the direct road by the Derbend Ahenein (the Iron Gate)[‡] was narrow and difficult for so numerous an army, incumbered with plunder, he led his troops by way of Buyeh and Turmez, an easier though more circuitous 10ad. An incident that occurred on this occasion, and which is illustrative of the character of Sheibáni, may be best given in the words of Sultan Said Khan, a son of the

* The Alim-Arai-Abasi calls Mahmud Sultan the uncle of Sheibani, but the Tar Reshidi and Abulgházi mention hun as his brother

† Tar Resh f 121, Báber, n 130

‡ This defile is also called Kahluga younger Khan, and afterwards a very distinguished СНАР І iulei of Káshghai, who was then a prisoner at large in Sheibáni's camp "After we reached Buyeh, I was A p 1504 sitting one day about noon in the Audience Pavilion It was before people had come in any numbers, and only a few were present, composed eluefly of the Khan's unmediate servants and dependents, when a man ar uved in great haste with a face of terior and dismay, and laid a letter at the foot of the dignified throne While he was engaged in reading the letter, a great change came over him He 10se up before he had finished it, and retired into the Harain, commanding his horse to be brought. He made some stay in the private apartments, which he left after noon-tide players and mounted Great numbers attended him It became known that Mahmúd Sultan had died at Kunduz. and that they were bringing his body After he had left the eamp and advanced to a distance, we saw a great crowd, as of mourners covered with black and drowned in grief and lamentation, who had laid down the bier and were standing behind it in lows perceiving this he made a sign, and all the Sultans and others dismounted and came to attend him The men who have been mentioned raised a ery of mourning, and those on our side also raised a shout of sorrow As he approached nearer he made another sign, when all the men who were with hun formed themselves into a line and stood still, while he rode forward alone, till his horse's head was over the biei He made another sign, when all became silent, and the men who had attended the bier, ceased from tearing their elothes and beards He then called one of Mahmúd Khan's Amírs, and asked him such questions as are usual at eeiemomes of mounning, when he remained silent for about an hour *, showing no alteration in his visage and ut-

* Saat

HISTORY OF INDIA .

tering no groan or sigh After this he raised up his head and said, "Twas well that Mahmid should die Men said, the power of Shahi Beg 15 supported by Malimud Now let it be known that Shahi Beg depends on no man Carry him away, and bury him All were filled with astonishment at his sternness and The death of Mahmud Sultan, Moglul, was a severe loss, as he was in every respect a thorough Moghul "* Sheibáni, who never rested, and who no sooner accomplished one undertaking than he piepared composure for another, on his return to Samarkand, got everything in readiness for attacking Khwárazm, which belonged

Meanwhile Baber, having executed his intention of marching to Ajer, rested there a few days The news to Khorásán of Sheibání's advance to Hissár had not yet reached him, and it was still doubtful in what direction the de structive torrent was about to flow While lying there, he received letters from Sultan Husein Mírza of Herát, which grieved and alarined him That powerful prince, the only one who was now equal to meet the Uzbeks in the field, instead of concentrating his force for active operations, proposed to confine his exertions merely to the passive defence of the banks of the Murghab, and of the line of fortresses that lay along the bottom of the Parapamisan hills, and invited Baber and Khosron Shah to adopt a similar defensive plan of operations This, Baber believed, must prove not only totally inefficient, but ruinous But hope sprang up to him The Moghuls in Khosrou's service, who were encamped near Talikán, a powerful and fickle tribe, had openly quarrelled with him Baber, from another quarter to be at hand to take advantage of this occurrence, leaving in the fort of Ajer such of his men and horses as had been worn out by the fatigues of his long * Tar Resh f 130

Baber reaches Ajer,

206

BOOK II

AD 1504

journey, with the fumilies and biggage of Báki and cuse i of some Annáks who had recently joined him, set A D 1504 out to retrace the hill-road by which he had advanced is joined by As he proceeded, various reports of the deepest Moghuis interest ienched him in rapid succession He soon learned that the Moghuls were in full march from Talikán, by Ishkemish, on their way to meet him As he advanced on his route, the farther information aruved, that Sheibani and his brother were hastening to Hissár and Kunduz, and he soon after received the important intelligence that Khosrou Shah, believing that in the present distracted state of his affairs, and weakened as his army was by intrigue and defection, he had no chance of resisting so powerful an enemy as Sheibáni, had abandoned Kunduz, which was immediately taken possession of, by the Uzbeks, and that now that chief had withdrawn from his dominions, and was on his maich for Kábul, with such of his troops as still adhered to him When Báber reached the Suikhib, a river which flows through deep valleys by Doshi and Kunduz, and one branch of which rises near Kahmerd, he was met at length by the Moghuls of Hissár and Kunduz, who, to the number of three or four thousand families, joined his eamp, and acknowledged him as their sovereign *

Khosrou, who had advanced from Kunduz, by Ghúi1, Khosrou on his road to Kábul, by the deep and narrow valleys of that mountainous tract, now found himself not fai distant from Báber's encampment Though still attended by a large body of troops, he perceived that the game was up Seeing no hope of success from meeting his adversary in arms, he sent to propose an accommodation To this Báber was prevailed upon by Bákí, Khosrou's brothei, to agree, and a compromise was entered into, by which, on Khosrou's resigning all his

^{*} Baber's Mem pp 127-130, Tar Resh f 121

Is described by his followers territories, his life and his private property were se-cured to him Báber now marched down the Surkháb, BOOK II A D 1504 to its confluence with the Andcráb, which he crossed and encamped in the district of Doshi Khosrou, whose camp was not far off, here waited upon Báber, who received him, seated under a tall palm-tree Having made his submission, as to his superior lord, he returned back to his quarters. When the conference was over, Báber, whose abhorrence of Khosrou was as deep as it was just, ordered his treasurer to send back the treasure, horses, and whatever else had been presented to him, just as they were, although, says our author, the king had only one horse suitable for a person of his rank, and that was used by his mother * But the blow was struck The act of submission, of a chief so haughty as Khosrou, sufficiently explained to the world the extent of his humiliation, and, that same day, even those adherents who till now had remained faithful to him, began to desert, and passed over incrowds to Báber, so that, before the evening of the following day, hardly a man of any consequence re-mained in his camp Without loss of time Khrosrou, having loaded a number of mules and camels with his jewels, gold and silver plate, and other valuables, - for he was celebrated among the chicfs of the time for his wcalth and magnificence,-set out for Khorásán, under the protection of a guard furnished him by Báber Some part of his least portable property was probably left behind, and fell into the hands of Báber's followers[†], as well as the whole of his military equipments, horses, and arms, of which the young king took possession It was not one of the least remarkable of the numerous reverses of fortune in that unsettled period, that a prince,___ who, but a few days before, had had at his command

* Tar Resh f 126

† Khafi Khan speaks of much treasure and rich jewels acquired by Báber, which is inconsistent with that prince's narrative, as well as with that of the Tarikhi Reshidi

Treaty

twenty or thirty thousand troops, was obliged to avail CHAP I himself of the protection of a youth who had so lately A p. 1504 entered his territories as a fugitive and a wanderer, with not three hundred naked and unarmed followers*

On the evening of the interview with Khosrou Shah, Mirza Báber's cousin, Mírza Khan, the only surviving son of claim of Sultan Mahmud Mirza, Khosrou's old master, and the blood brother of the two unfortunate princes, one of whom had been put to death, and the other blinded, by Khosrou, came unto Báber's presence with his charge of murder, and claiming the retaliation of blood, as allowed by the Muhammedan law But Báber, deeply as he detested Khosrou, pleaded his faith, pledged by the convention, as a ground for sending him away in safety, and, by expressing the most heartfelt sympathy for the Mirza and his wrongs, soothed his wounded feelings, and pievailed upon him to desist from his legal claim of blood †

From the time that Báber was joined on the Amu by Bákis ad-Bakı Cheghániáni, that nobleman became his chief vice. minister and adviser He now strongly urged Báber to send away his brother, Jehángír Mirza, into Khorasán, representing to him, that, in the confusion in which the whole country then was, with a number of different chiefs all striving for pre-eminence, that prince would certainly be pitched upon, by some ambitious man, as a convenient person to be set up in opposition to himself But, whatever truth Bábei saw in these remonstrances, the generous feelings by which he never eeased to be animated, prevailed Though almost from the hour when he first mounted the throne Jehángír had been set up against him as a rival, and had even deprived him of his heieditary kingdom, he resolved, whatever had been the jealousies and heartburnings which had

+ Baber, p 132, Tar Resh * Baber, pp 129-131, Tar f 126 Resh ff 125, 126  $\mathbf{P}$

VOL I

209

BOOK II formerly exis

A D 1504

formerly existed between them, on these accounts, or whatever the prospect of future feuds likely to arise from the same source, that he would not treat with unkindness a brother who had left his country to accompany him in his exile He acknowledges, however, that everything happened piecisely as Báki had predicted At the same time, at Báki's solicitation, Kamber Ali Moghul, Jehángír's chief adviser, was sent away from the camp *

Baber sets out for Kábul

Although Báber's force had been so much increased by the numbers of Khosrou Shah's followers who had joined him, and especially by the accession of the Moghuls,-a brave, though turbulent race,-he did not venture to return back towards Kunduz or Hissár, where he must have measured his strength in an unequal contest with the Uzbeks, who were rapidly spieading over all the country between the Ama and the Hindú-kúsh mountains A detachment of them, which had penetrated into the hills, was at that very moment ravaging the territory of Doshi, not far from Báber's camp Báber had lost nothing of his hatred of his inveterate foe, nor had adverse circumstances damped his activity A party of horse that he sent out fell upon these plunderers, routed them, and brought in a number of their heads But he saw that in the present condition of his own affairs, and in the disorganised state of the country in which he was, it was not possible to offer any resistance on a large scale to the progress of the invader, that it was necessary to yield to circumstances, and would be prudent, for a time, to interpose the barrier of a mountain range between him and his victorious enemy Kábul seemed to offer a more promising field for his exertions His cousin, Abdal-rizák, the king of the country, had only recently been expelled by Mokim, a son of Zulnún

Arghun whose government was probably still unsettled Il using therefore, divided among his troops the arms and armonr which Khosion had left behind hum in his camp, among which were eight hundred costs of mail, and suits of horse-furniture, he set out with aidour upon his new enterprise

For some days he pursued his toilsome march among the precipices and over the steep and panful passes by which the Hindu kush mount uns are crossed - Having surmonnted the northern ascent, he proceeded to descend by Ghunhend On reaching Ushter-shehr, he leanned that Shirkeh Arghún, a favourate officer of Mokun Arghún, had taken post with a considerable force on the Baran river, for the purpose of intercepting any fugitives or juxiliaires who might attempt, by the route of Penjshir, to join Abdal-rizak, the expelled monarch, who was then in Langhán, and that he was still quite ignorant of their approach. Upon this Baber resolved to march forward for the purpose of surprising him He set out in the ifternoon, and rode all night The appearance of the stars of the southern hemisphere showed that he had entered upon another clime " Till this time," sixs he, "I had never seen the star Soheil (Canopus), but on reaching the top of the hill, Soheil appeared below, bright in the sonth I sud, 'This cannot be Soheil' They answered, 'It is indeed Soheil' Bála Cheghámán repetted the couplet [of an emment Persian poet] -

"'O Soheil' how far dost thou shine, and where dost thou rise? Thine eve is an omen of good fortune to him on whom it falls'"

"The sun," continues Báber, "was a spear's length high, when we reached the foot of the valley of Senjed" The troops in advance fell in with Shirkeh, below Karabágh, instantly attacked him, and kept harassing him with a skinmishing fight, till reinforcements came up, when the whole detachment charged and routed his CHAP I

A D 1504

BOOK II troops, and made him and some of his best men prisoners *

A D 1004 Is joined by other tribes,

When Khostou Shah retired from Kundúz, he seems to have set out attended only by his household and regular troops, without incumbering himself with the n regulars and the wandering tribes whe were in his service, with some of whom, indeed, he had quarrelled The various tribes, which differed from each other in race and in manners, formed, with the irregulars, five or six separate bodies Of these, the Moghuls, we have seen, joined Báber. The others also hastened to cross the mountains, to try their fortune in a more favourable region Two bodies,-one of them the Hazáras of the Desht or wilds, who had advanced by the Penishír pass, while Báber had taken that of Kipchák, another consisting of some clansmen of Yusef and Behlul Ayub, -now airived and joined the king below Senjed Other two divisions, - the one from Khutlán, under Wali, Khosrou's brother, the other composed of Nukderis and Aımáks who had ranged about in Kundúz,-advanced up from the lower countries by the Anderáb and Seiráb. intending also to pass by the defiles of Penishir The Aımáks, who reached Seiráb before Wali's division, took possession of the defiles, attacked, defeated, and plundered Wah's troops as they came up, and forced Wah himself to fly back to the Uzbeks, by whom he was sent to Sheibáni, who made his head be struck off in the public market of Samarkand Both the Aimáks and the scattered remnants of Wah's force now arrived and joined Báber, who marched down to Akserái near Karabágh, twelve or fourteen miles west of Kábul The number of Khosrou's fighting men of various classes who joined Baber, is said to have amounted to twenty thousand †

Báber, observing the motley composition of his new

* Báber's Mem p 133 † Tar Resh, f 126

must made up principally of hereditary manaders, CHAP I who while in Khosrou's service, had been indulged in  $_{A,D}$  1504 the most infinited extent of licentions violence and whom he plunder, resolved, in justice to the peaceful and more order enabled inhabitants of the country on which he was entering, to take the first opportunity to check these excesses and to reduce his followers under the rules of discipline Nor was an occasion long writing An ictive retainer of Sidim Ali Deibin a Hazára elnet, having carried off a jar of oil by force, from one of the inhibiting was ordered to be seized and beaten with sticks, according to the practice of the country IIe expired under the pum-hment, and this prompt and stern example, joined to an assurance of Biber's determultion to defend the natives from oppression, at once put an end to such practices But the want of a na-tional force, and the necessity of employing bodies of binded adventurers of different tribes, was always one of the great difficulties which Baber had to encounter, and on several occasions in the course of his future encer exposed hun to the most miniment danger *

As Kihul was now so close at hand, it became necessary to decide upon some plan of operations. Some of mear kabut, his ofheers were of opinion, that, as the season was far spent, it was most idvisible to go down to Leinghan, to pass the winter there, and make up their minds at leisure as to future operations. Báki Cheghámáni, on the other hand, advised hum at onee to march upon the capital, and this advised hum at onee to march upon the capital, and this advise he adopted, in consequence of which the camp was once more moved one stage forward, and pitched in the park or meadow of Ama, close by Kabul

Here Baber was joined by his mother, and by the Joined by fumilies of his troops that had been left at Ajer When his family he set out for Kábul, he had commissioned his mother's

^{*} Biber's Mem pp 132-154

relation Shiram Taghúi to conduct Khosrou a certain way on his road to Khorásán, after which he was to return by Ajci, and to bring on the household But Shiram had not gone far when he discovered that Khosrou was no longer under his control, and his BOOK 11 A D 1501 Knosron was no longer under mis control, and my prisoner, instead of proceeding on his journey, insisted on accompanying him back to Kahmerd On reaching that place, Ahmed Kásin, the governor, was induced by his uncle Khosrou to behave very harshly to the families that had been left in the district Many of families that had been left in the district Many of them were Moghuls, who were not disposed to submit quietly, and, in concert with Shirain Taghán, laid a plan for seizing both Khosrou and his nephew, who, having discovered the plot, fled by the valley of Ajer towards Khorásán Thus relieved of all apprehensions from Khosrou, the detachment left Ajer with the families under their charge But they had new dangers to encounter, for, the clans that inhabit the hills, roused by the rich boots presented to their repeating a reby the rich booty presented to their rapacity, were all in arms to seize and plunder the numerous stragglers, and bands that were now crossing the mountains in every direction, from Kunduz and the north, and had occupied all the passes The detachment from Ajer, occupied all the passes The detachment from Ajer, with its convoy, going on by Kahmerd, shared the common danger Many followers both of Báber and of Báki were made prisoners, others were pillaged and dispersed Bábei's family and houshold, however, made their way by the Kipchák pass, and, after many dangers and distresses, at length reached him at Ama

Besleges Kabul

State of the kingdom,

From Ama, Báber next proceeded to the meadow of Chálák, and, having now determined upon the siege of Kábul, he made the army take up its ground on the different sides of the city *

The country of Kábul, the conquest of which Báber now determined to attempt, was hardly more tranquil than the miserable and plundered provinces which he curr r had left behind, though from a different cluse After Sultan Abustid's death in Irak, Ulugh Beg Mirza, Kibull one of his sons and Baber's uncle, became Sultan of kibul and Ghizm, and had continued to govern these kingdoms till his death, which occurred about three years before Biber made his appearance on the south of the Hundn-kush

That prince was succeeded by his son Abdal-112/ik Factions at Mirza Whit became of his other son, Miran-shah court Muzi whom we have seen a few years before in his AR 1502. fithers lifetime, and in arms igainst his authority, we hre not told Abdul-nzik being yoning, his minister Shirun Zikei " ruled hum and his territories with abso-Inte power, and might really be sud to have usinged the government, an occurrence at this period common to ill the different descend ints of the finitly of Tannin, who, educated for a throng in ease and effeminacy, were kept in it from that knowledge of men and things which could alone qualify them to fill it with honour

Shirim did not long maint in his iscendency. The court of the young prince soon became a siccle of faction A conspiracy was formed against the and intrigue munster by some of the first men among the nobles, who suddenly entered the capital with three hundred followers and murdered hun is he was sitting at table in the Presence-II ill of the place, at a great Muham-  $_{A D}$  gos, inclus festival, when he had enjoyed his power about a  $_{A D}^{10 \times 10 \text{ Jb}}$  jeb, twelvemonth But, as none of the conspirators was so GJune much more distinguished than the rest as to enable lum to take a decided lead, the kingdom on this event because a prey to all the evils of anarchy

Encouraged by this state of aflairs, Muhammed Mo- Mokim surkím (a son of Zulnún Arglinn, the governoi of rather habul ruler of Kandaliái), who held for his father the Germ-

^{*} He is called Zaki Beg by Ferishia, ii p 24

EOOK IL sir, (a considerable province on the Helmend,) supported

A p 1504 by the Hazáras, who inhabit the hills that he along the upper course of that river, nearly as far as Kábul, and who were much attached to his father,-passed secretly through that mountainous tract, after a rapid march appeared suddenly before Kábul, and made himself master of the town Abdal-rizák Mírza fled, and found refuge among the Turkoláni Afgháns in Lamghán; while Mokim, with little opposition, occupied the kingdoms of Ghazni and Kábul, and soon after, to assist in consolidating his power, married the daughter of Ulugh Beg Mírza, the late Sultan Mokim's father, Zulnún Beg, when informed of what had happened*, wrote to his son, disapproving of the enterprise, but at the same time advising him, as the best means of retaining the acquisition he had made, to be ever watchfully on his guard, and especially to retain none of the old nobles of Kabul about him In compliance with this advice, Mokim dismissed most of the old officers, and filled their places with creatures of his own Abdal-rizák made several unsuccessful attempts to recover his father's dominions, and Mokím still continued to govern them, when Báber descended from the northern mountains and invested his capital †

Surrenders it to Baber

The advance and attack of Báber being wholly unexpected, Mokím had made no provision against such an event, and, from the suddenness with which the town and castle were blockaded, he found hunself totally unprovided with the means of supporting a siege The citizens, too, were all in favour of Báber Mokím therefore saw no hopes of safety but in a capitulation, which soon followed, and by which it was stipulated that he, his family, and followers, were to march out with their effects, and to be permitted to return home uninjured

* The author of the Tarikhi Sind makes the news of Mokim's conquest reach his father, Zulnun, when he was on the Amu with Badi-ezzemán, f 90 v

+ Báber's Mem , Taríkhi Sind

The place was accordingly suitendered after a siege of char Ionly a few days * Although Baber had placed Mokim  $\frac{1}{A \cdot P \cdot 1504}$ and his family under the protection of his own houshold troops and servants, commanded by his two brothers, whom he had ordered to guard them as they left the town, yet such was the violence and crowding of his unruly followers, pushing forward, eager to plunder the rich prey which Mokim's biggige was supposed to offer, that the Sultan hunself was hastily sent for to appease the tumult, and this he could not accomplish till he had ordered several of those most active in the sedition to be shot by his archers, and others to be sabred This constant determination in the young prince to maintain discipline and to prevent pillage, though it endeared him to his subjects, had not the same effect upon his needy and rapicious followers Mokim, after this exercise of authority in his behalf, proceeded on his march, and arrived safe in his own government And thus Baber, in the beginning of October, A D 1504, little more than three months after leaving, as a houseless exile, his little kingdom of Ferghána, saw hunself sovereign of the far more extensive and powerful kingdoms of Kábul and Ghazni †

The kingdom of Kabul which thus fell into the Kingdom power of Baber, which became his favourite residence of Kabul during the greater part of his future hie, and which for two centuries remained annexed to the empire of India, was by no means so extensive as that which, under the recent Afghán dynasty, has passed under that name It was confined to the provinces of Kabúl and Ghazni, and has been described with great minuteness and accuracy of detail by Baber himself in his invaluable commentaries It consisted chiefly of a very elevated table land, rising at an average about six thousand feet above the level of the sea, and was A. p. 1504, bounded, on the north, by the lofty Hindú-kúsh mountains, on the west, by them and by the range which runs between the Hindú-kúsh and Khorásán, on the east, by those mountains which run from the lofty peak of Sefid-koh, to the cast of Guidíz, past Sir-efzú and the sources of the Gomal, towards the plain of Ab-1stådeh, supporting the lofty table-land of Ghazni and Kabul, and, on the south, on which side its limits are indistinctly marked, being probably bounded by the hills that enclose the basin of the Ab-istadeh lake Even over this extent, the inhabitants of the plains and cultivated valleys alone yielded a regular submission The hills were, in general, inhabited by independent and refractory tribes or clans, as were also some parts of the more desert plans, insomuch that even the ligh road between Kabul and Jagdalak, which formed the chief communication between the country of Kábul and the 11ch movince of Lamghán, Pesháwer, and the Indus, was infested by hostile and predatory tribes within a day's journey of the capital *

* End of Rebi II, A II 910, † Baber, pp 135, 136 beginning of October, A D 1501

BOOK IL.

The kingdom appears, at that period, to have commehended, I the long and narrow plains running nearly from south to north from Ghazni to Kábul, II the valleys that run westward into the Parapamisan mountains, especially that of Koli-dáman, III the Kolustán or Highlands of Kábul, which lie to the north and north-west of that city, chiefly beyond the Ghurbend and Kábul rivers, and which are formed of the lugh and low lands of Ghurbend, Penjshír, and Nyrow, that run along the slope of the hills, and deep under the precipitous heights of Hindú-kúsh IV Langhán or Laghmán, divided into two parts by the Kabul nyce The portion on the north contained the valleys of Alishing and Alingár, that also run among the mountains of the Hindú-kúsh range, and uniting, CHAP L form that of Mandraur, which opens on the Kábul A. D 1504 incer The portion on the south of that inver contained the great district of Nang-nihái, which, besides its ample extent to the south, stretches down the deep descent of the mountains that buttiess the table-land of Kábul, and comprehends, in its lower extent, the rich and warm valley of Adma, now Jelálábád Besides these districts which he on the Kábul river, the province of Laughán was considered as comprehending Kunci and Núrgil, with Dera-Núr and Cheghán serái, which lie on the Cheghánserái river But Lamghán Proper was strictly held to be confined to the divisions north of the Kábul uver, and to be bounded by it and the Cheghanserái invers on the south and east V Lohger and some districts to the south of Lamghán

* Babers Mem pp 232-278

Such being the restricted limits of Kábul and Ghazni, all the territory between Cheghánserái and the Sind, such as Bajour, Swad, Peshawer, &c -were excluded These were districts which had not long been occupied by the Afgháns The whole extent of country reaching from the eastern limits assigned to Kábul as far as the Indus, west and east, and from the lower Kábul river below Adína to the countries of Síwi and Sind, north and south,-a tract which seems to have been the original seat of the Afgháns,-was also excluded Both these divisions were, at this period, inhabited by tribes principally Afgháns, though, towards the north, and at the roots of the Hındú-kúsh range, several of the aboriginal tribes still remained nearly independent under their hereditary native chieftains Indeed, though the Sultans of Ghazni and Kábul, when in the height of their power, had claimed them as subjects, and rendered them tributory, yet, beyond the oceasional compulsory payment of tribute, the subjection both of these tribes and of the Afghans of the wilds and the mountains, had been little more than nominal

To the west of Kábul were the Hindú-kúsh and BOOK IL Hazára mountains, of which the latter extended to Khorásán ncar Hcrát They also were principally inhabited by independent tribes, on the south and southeast by the Hazáras, a brave and numerous race, and on the north and north-west by the Aimáks, who, like the Hazáras, were wanderers and shepherds The latter tribc held the tract from Zemín-dáwer up the Helmend to the lofty mountain of Koh-Bába, west of Kábul, with the hills immediately to the south of that line, the Aimáks held the country on the north of the Hazáras, from near Bamián towards Herát It would scem that the Nukderis, who were Aimáks or allied to them, occupied the mountains between Zemín-dáwer and Herát, on the south-west range towards Farra

> Kandahár and the neighbouring provinces, to the south, acknowledged the sovereignty of Sultan Husein Mírza of Hcrát, but were in reality governed, nearly as an independent state, by Zúlnún Beg Arghún and his family, who had also acquired great influence among many of the hill-tribes to the north

The towns and richer plains of the Kábul territory were inhabited and cultivated by Tájíks, who spoke the Persian tongue, and who, if not of Persian extraction, had at least been, in ancient times, for centuries under the Persian monarchy The hills, with which the whole country abounded, were occupied by Hazáras, Afgháns, and other unsettled tribes, who sometimes possessed, and always infested, the plains and high-roads The tribes in whose range lay the long and difficult passes between India and the upper country, considered them as part of their revenue, and when they did not plunder, levied taxes or contributions on caravans and travellers, in the same manner as is done by the Arabs of the desert

The diversity of the inhabitants of these tracts, and " In of their languages, is well described by Báber

A.D 1504

the country of Kábul," says he, "there are many and CHAP L various tribes Its valleys and plains are inhabited by , p. 1504. Tútks, Annáks, and Arabs In the city, and the greater part of the villages, the population consists of Tájíks Many others of the villages and districts are occupied by Pasháis, Peráchis, Tájiks, Berekis, and Afgháns In the hill-country to the west, reside the Hazáras and Nukdens Among the Hazára and Nukderi tribes are some who speak the Moghul language * In the hills to the north-east lies Kaferistán, and such countries as

 That intelligent and successful traveller, Sir Alexander Burnes, takes notice of the peculiar appearance of the Hazaras, whom he met with in his journey from Kabul to Khulm "The Hazaras," says he, " are a simple-hearted people, and differ much from the Afghan tribes. In physiognomy they more resemble the Chinese, with their square faces and small eves They are Tartars by descent, and, one of their tribes is now called Tatar-Hazara There is a current belief that they bestow their wives on their guests, which is certainly erroneous The women have great influence, and go un-Burness Travels, vol. 11 veiled p 153, and m p 224

An account of the origin of the Aimaks, of Moghul race, is given in the Shajrat-ul Atrak During the invasion of Chengiz Klian, Sultan Rukn ed-din, a son of Sultan Muhammed Khwarazm-Shah, gallantly defended the strong fortress of Firuz-Koh, in the hills east of Herat, against a powerful army commanded by Hulaku-Khan, the grandson of Chengiz, for a period of six months "It is related that when Hulaku left his grandfather to proceed by the road of Pasi-koh to Firuz koh, from the rugged and stony nature of the country, and the steepness and difficulty of the hills, many of his horses were so knocked up that they could not more a foot, misomuch that he was obliged of necessity to leave them behind, appointing however a detaeliment composed of men out of each division to take care of them, with orders not to quit the place until he returned. When, six months after, the fort of Firuz-koh was taken, as well as Rukn-ed-dín, its brave defender, Tuli Khan, Hulaku's father, arrived in Khorasan, and Hulaku went by the route of Chisht Saflan and Ubek to meet him, and the men were forgotten These people, not daring to leave their station without a yarligh or mandate, continued to dwell there, and took women and girls from the neighbouring Hazaras, with whom they contracted marriages, so that, in a short time, they had a numerous issue and descendants, and that tract became known as Muri Saturgai, muri, in the Moghul language, signifying a horse, and saturgui, lame, being so called in memory of their settling there" Shajrat-ul-Atrak, MS They were called Armáks from the Moghul and Turki word signifying Tribes It is easy to see how they are sometimes called Aimáks, sometimes Hazaras.

BOOK II Kattór and Gebrek To the south is Afghánistán There are eleven or twelve different languages spoken in Kábul, Arabic, Persian, Túrki, Moghuli, Hindi, Afgháni, Pashái, Paráchi, Geberi, Bereki, and Lamgháni It may be doubled whether so many distinct races, and different languages, can be found in any other country "® -" The various districts of Kabul lie amidst mountains which push out like so many mounds, with the valleys and level plains expanding between them, and the greater part of the villages and of the population is found on these intermediate spaces "†

Though the country of Kábul lies chiefly between the 32° and 35° of north latitude, yet, from the great height even of the valleys above the sea, the climate is temperate, and allowed to be one of the most delightful in the world Kibul abounds in rich pasture and in delicious fruits, and is remarkable for its profusion of flowers Though possessing some fertile arable country, it is still richer in flocks The winter is often severe, and the snow lies deep The height of the mountains, and the sudden descent of the land on the east, makes it easy at all seasons to command a change of climate, and, in some instances, to pass from summer heat to winter snow in the course of a few hours †

When Báber saw himself master of this valuable conquest, he proceeded to reward the chiefs and their followers, who had assisted him in the expedition Τo his brother, Jehángír, he gave Ghazni, to Násir Mírza, Lamghán and Nyrow, to the greater chiefs, he allotted different provinces of the kingdom, while he rewarded the inferior officers by assignments of land, and by other He levied a contribution of thirty thougratifications

* Mem p 140

7 Ibid. p 153

‡ See Bábers Mem pp 136-155, Elphinstone's Account of the Kingdom of Caubool, still the most comprehensive and distinct, and

Burnes's Travels, to which may now be added the works of Mr Masson, who had an opportunity of visiting more of the country than any previous traveller sand loads of grain from Kåbul, Ghazm, and their CHAF I dependencies, to be bestowed on the wives, families, 1504-5 and followers of the wandering tubes, to enable them to accompany him on his expeditions and wars " As I was at that time very imperfectly acquainted with the revenues and resources of Kabul, the amount was excessive, and the country sufficied extremely "*

A D 1501

5

In a short time afterwards, Abdal-Rizák Mírza, the late sovereign of K ibul, submitted to Baber and waited a cucumstance which contributed to the upon him stability of lns government †

Baber had been in Kabul but a short time, (which he had employed in chastising the Masaúdi Hazáras, who refused to pry a contribution of horses and sheep imposed upon them,) when Yau Husein, a son of Derna Khan, came from his father's government of Bhéra, a district lying beyond the Indus, on the south of J'clam, Expedition to invite him into that country The offer was so much Indus in muson with the young Sultan's wishes, that, a few days afterwards, an incursion into India was resolved upon

Although Báber did not, on this oceasion, enter any part of what we now denominate India, this expedition is by historians regarded as his first invasion of that country After having mustcred his forces, and mide the AH 910, Shaban necessary inquiries, he set out from Kabul in Shaban, A p 1505. л п 910, and, having matched by Jagdalak, in six days January reached Adına-púr, now Jelálábád – Ilere he was struck with the total change, both in chimate and in the appearance of the country, that at once took place on his descending from the lofty table-land of Kubul, - from the temperste into the torrid clime "I had never before seen the Germsíl (or countries of warm temperature), nor the country of Hindustán On reaching them, I all at once saw a new world, the vegetables, the plants, the trees, the wild animals, all were different I was struck BOOK II with astonishment, and indeed there was room for А р. 1505 wonder * He proceeded by the Khaiber-pass to Bekrám, There a consultation was held as to now Pesháwer. crossing the Indus, as had been originally intended, when that plan was abandoned, and the army was led on a marauding and exploring expedition to the south-ward, through Kohát, Bangash, Bánu, and Desht Dáman, plundering all the way Below this, they came on a taken by small dependency of Multán, lying on the right bank of the Indus After marching for some days along the banks of that river, Báber, leaving it, turned westward and north, and, proceeding along the borders of Siwistán, by Chotiali and through the Duki country, at length reached known ground at the lake of Ab-1stadeh, whence he went on to Ghazni, and then to Kábul, where he arrived in the month of May, having employed about four months in this very extraordinary and arduous circuit. In the first part of it, through the Afghán country, as far as Desht Dáman, and till they reached л.и 910, Zilhájeh, A D 1505, the Indus, the troops had many severe actions with the brave but barbarous Afgháns, who inhabited the hills and wilds, but they obtained very little booty In the rich countries lying upon the Indus, on the other hand, so abundant were the cattle, that the meanest retainer in the army sometimes got possession of three or four hundred, most of which, from their very number, they were forced to leave behind From the Indus to Ab-istádeh, cultivation nearly ceased, and the country was so barren and waste that the horses, already much exhausted by the length of the foray, began rapidly to It was impossible to find corn, even for Báber's, fail and he was in the end compelled to leave his own tent . behind, for want of carriage Their difficulties in the latter part of their march were much increased by the Circuit

The † Tar Resh f 159 * Baber's Mem p 156 load is 700 lb Avoirdupois

Adína pur

Báber

May

heavy rains, which swelled the watercourses and filled CHAP L the ravines This expedition, undertaken by Báber 50 , p 1505 soon after he had gamed possession of Kabul, whatever other consequences may have attended it, made him intimitely requirinted with the niture of the greater part of the country west of the Indus *

It wis in the course of this expedition that the first Baber symptoms of Baki Cheghamam's ambitious intentions bern to appear In joning Báber, he had probably reckoned upon finding him tractable and carcless in business, he may have hoped to direct everything with absolute power is his brother and the other ministers in the courts of Baber's consins in Mawerannahei and K ibul h id recently, without exception, been accustomed to do On the contrury, he had even already found, in his own sovercign, a brive and active prince, of brilli int talents, inquisitive and intelligent in business, who listened, indeed, to advice, but decided and acted for hunself Before hun, Baki's ambitious views stood checked and he turned his eyes on Jehangir Mirza as a fitter instrument for his purpose. He proposed to Inn, to illow himself to be set up against his brother, whow is to be scized and sent across the Indus Jehängn declined taking the part assigned to hun, and revealed the plot to his brother Baki, however, wis too strong in the number of his own immediate followers, and had too much influence in the army, to be dealt with rashly Báber, therefore, dissembled, but, from this time for ward, watched for the earliest safe opportunity of dismissing from his service so dangerous a minister †

• Bibers Mem pp 156-166 Mirza Ishan says that this expechtion was undertaken by Biber, from finding that Ix ibul was not sufficient to support the numbers who had deserted Ishosrou Shah, which made him think of carrying them into Hindustan, and that the cattle of the army were ruined in the course of it Tar Resh f 159 + Baber, pp 164, 165

VOL I

воок п

A D 1505 Nusir Mírza marches for Badakhshán.

It was not till Báber had reached Kábul that he was informed of the events which had taken place in his absence He found that his brother, Násir Mírza, instead of following him, as he had been ordered, had crossed the Hindú-kúsh range, and was engaged in operations on his own account, in Badakhshán Various circumstances led to this We have seen that Khosrou Shah, when sent towards Khorásán, had contrived to overpower his guard, and to return back to his nephew, Ahmed Kásím, at Kahmerd. Discovering very soon that he could effect nothing in his former dominions, he again set out for Herát Before reaching that capital, he met with his former ally, Badi-ez-zemán Mírza and Zúlnún Beg, and accompanied them to Herát All of them had, not long before, been at open war with the Sultan. Báber truly remarks, that, his success against Khosrou and Mokím, Zúlnún's son, had been the means of bringing all these proud and power-ful men, in a humble condition, into the presence of their sovereign After remaining for some time in the court of Sultan Husein, who gave him a gracious recep-tion, Khosrou became anxious once more to try his fortune in the scene of his former glory, at Kunduz Such an attempt was represented to him as being quite ridiculous, in the present shattered state of his affairs; and he was advised to wait for a more favourable moment, but, being impatient, he persisted and set out

Sheibáni Khan had given the government of Kunduz to Kamber-Bi, of Merv, an Uzbek, who, in obedience to his master's commands, had entered Badakhshán, and taken possession of a great part of the country But the natives of that rugged and mountainous province, who had never been completely reduced by Khosrou, and who detested a foreign yoke, rose upon the Uzbeks in several quarters at once, recovered Kila-Zefcr, the principal fortress, beat back the invaders, whom they defeated several times with great slaughter, and sent to CHAP I invite Násn Mírza to place himself at their head * A. D. 1505

When Báber set out on the Afghán expedition, Násir had remained behind, though ordered to follow him,  $_{A, D}^{A H}$  910, instead of doing which, he had spent the earlier part of the winter in expeditions planned and conducted for objects of his own He had driven a body of the Aimáks and other tribes out of Lamghán, and hid followed them up to the Báián river, where he was lying when he received the invitation to repair to Thinking that something might be Badakhshán achieved, in the agitated state of that country, he resolved to try his fortune in that quarter, and, without consulting Báber, who had not yet ieturned to Kábul, he set out, advanced from the Bárán river, up the passes of Hindú-kúsh, and descended on the northern slope, near Dehána Here he fell in with Khosrou Joined by Shah, who, after quitting Herát, had just arrived in the Khosrou, neighbourhood with a few hundred men Khosrou, with his accustomed art, tried to fasten himself upon Násır Mírza, and to gain him over, hoping to effect something under the cover of his name But the Badakhshán chiefs, though they had invited Násir, were not disposed to receive Khosrou Yet, so perseveringly did he ching to the young prince, accompanying him in all his motions, that it was not till Násir had reached the territory of Isl.semish, and had drawn out his troops in battle array against those of Khosrou, that he was able to get rid of his unwelcome companion whom he Khosrou, thus left to himself, proceeded, with hardly a thousand men, to besiege Kunduz Kamber-bi, hearing of his approach, called in Khamzeh Sultan from Hisár, who despatched troops to his aid under the command of They attacked Khosrou the moment they his sons arrived, slew his nephew and some of his best troops, shakes off,

q 2

Báber, pp 167—169

воок п

A n 1505

Khosrou's death

Násir becomes king of Badakhshán

A 11 912, summer of A 11 1506 and easily defeated his handful of men Khosrou-Shah was himself taken prisoner, his head was soon after struck off in Kunduz, so lately the seat of his power, and sent off to Sheibáni, in Khwárazm Such was the end of this man's guilty ambition, and of all his magnificence and crimes *

Núsir Mírza was less unfortunate By the influence of a party in Badakhshán, headed by Mobárek Shah and Muhamined Kotehi, he was acknowledged as king, and governed that country for two or three years During some part of his short reign, considerable success attended his arms When Sheibani Khan laid siege to Balkh, he sent three or four thousand men to ravage Badakhshán Násir Mírza was then encamped near Kishem, Mobárek Shah, who acted in conjunction with him, lying not fai off One division of the U7-beks came upon Násir by surprise, but the Mír7a bravely charged and totally defeated them, killing some and making others of them prisoners, many were drowned in attempting to recross the Kishem river, which had swollen after they had passed it He then marched against the other division, which, in the mean time, had attacked and defeated Mobárek Shah's army, and, with the assistance of the Amírs who poured down from the neighbouring hills, he totally routed it also In this affair the Uzbeks lost a thousand or fifteen hundred men Násir did not, however, long maintain his ascendency in Badakhshán Muhammed Korchi, Mobárek Shah, and other Amírs who had raised him to the throne, offended with some of his proceedings, and still more with the conduct of his favourites, rose in revolt, and, having collected a large body both of infantry and horse, matched against him, and took up a strong position Násir and his young advisers, who had with them a considerable force of cavalry, impru-

* Báber's Mem pp 168, 169

dently attacked the insurgents in the bloken glounds char i on which their infantity were posted After repeated A D 1505 unsuccessful charges, the insurgents assumed the oftensive, and, charging in their tinn, put then adversaries spring of to flight All who still adhered to the Miiza were but is plundered, and he was finally driven out of the country, finally expelled and compelled to fly to Ishkemish and Nárín, whence, recrossing the hills by the Surkh ab and Abderch route, he deseended by Slubertu on Kábul, where he once more joined his brother, the Sultan *

Biber, after his return from his circuitous expedition in the Afghan country, had planned a more important one against Kandahir But this was delayed, first, by an attack of fever from which he soon accovered, and Earthnext, by a violent on thquake, which did much damage all over the country of Kabul, throwing down many houses, and making breaches in the walls of the eastles Baber inand fortified towns In some places it formed deep vades Kancavities in the earth, and in others levelled considerable commences with the ground † After devoting a month to repairing the fortifications of the towns that had been injured, and to alleviating the sufferings of the inhabitants, with an activity and kindness by which he is said to have gained their affection, he led his army to the south, hesitating between attacking Kandahái, and plundering the hill-tribes His brother Jehángú und Baki Cheghámáni advised an attack on Kilát‡, a stiong fort on the road fiom Ghazni to Kandahár was accordingly attacked and carried by storm, though not without considerable loss But all the blood spilt in the conquest was thrown away, as it was found impossible to retain it, probably in consequence of its being insulated from the rest of Báber's dominions

* Baber, pp 199, 200 219, 220 (5 July, A D 1505) Briggs's Fe-† This was probably the earthrishta, vol 1 p 579 ‡ Now, Kilat-e-Ghilji quake fult at Agra, 3 Sufer, v H 911, quake, 1 11 911, N D 1505

It takes and Abandons Allat

л и 913.

л в 1507

BOOK II Jehángír and Bákı, to whom it was successively offered, both declined to take charge of it *

4 p 1505 Báki's intrigues

For some time past, Báber had been on uncomfortable terms with his minister Báki Much of his success in gaining over Khosrou's troops, by means of which he effected the conquest of Kabul, had been due to that Báber complains that he was mean and nobleman soldid, as an instance of which he adduces the fact, that, in marching together when they first mct, after passing the Amu, near Turmez, though Báki had thirty or forty thousand sheep along with him, and Báber's ragged and weary followers were starving, not a single onc did he offer; and adds, that, even when they had at last reached Kahmerd, his generosity limited itself to a gift of fifty. Báber had also complaints of a different It appears that Baki had made the kind to make. kcttle-drum be beat before his own tent. an unpardon able offence, that being a mark of dignity which, in a royal camp, is confined to the sovereign alone, and though Báber had bestowed on him the transit duties, which are the principal revenue of Kábul, with the property-tax levied from the Hazáras, and had made him governor of Kábul and Penjshír, as well as commander of the guards, with the office of chief-minister, still Bákı was not satisfied We have seen, that, in the course of the late expedition down the Indus, Bábei had too much reason to believe that he had been guilty of direct treason, and that hc had placed himself at the head of a conspiracy, the object of which was to depose his sovereign, and to bestow his throne and dominions on his brother.

Báber had prudently dissembled his knowledge of these intrigues, but the minister, believing that his services were indispensable, in order to add to his own importance and claims, affected discontent, and was constantly aslang leave to retrie. This, Baber as often curra refused which only adding to Bila's confidence, he A 10 1505 renewed his tender of resignation in more urgent terms. To his consternation, he found his petition complied Plerarwith In drive hered his tone, and sent to re- denation trict has offer and to remind Baber, that, when he joined him that prince had engaged never to call him to account till he had been guilty of mue offences But B duer was steady to his purpose and sent him a list of eleven heavy offences, the justice of all of which he was, one after mother, forced to admit Baki soon after. scong that his influence was gone, set out for India with his fundy and property, and proceeded by way of Ishaher After crossing the Indus, he fell into the hands of Y ir Iluscin of Bluri, whose visit to Buber nt k dul has been mentioned. The Husem had accompanied Baber in his late expedition to the Indus, as far is kohit, where on the representations that he made, Riber issued firming to the Dilizaks, the Yusofzus and k grams tribes inhabiting in that quarter, desiring them to act under his orders. Yin Husein on his part pledging himself to extend Baber's dominion beyond the Indus - But that chief, almsing the firmán he had received, enhand in his service a number of Yusefan and Dilaz ik Afglums, us well as men of the Jat and Guer tribes and was now employed, as a freebooter, m plundering the country and robbing on the lighways in the Penjib Into the hands of this merciless marunder, Biki and his whole party fell, when their pro- niedenh, perty was seized and the wretched exile put to death * An 911,

^{*} Báber's Mem pp 170, 171, Briggs's Fenshta, vol n p 25

Lirly in the following spring, Búber's brother, Je- A > 1505 hingin Mirza, either discontented with the extent of Jehángin country assigned to hum, or having taken some other from habit, offence, and instigated by two Moghul chiefs, to whose  $\stackrel{A \ II}{_{p}} \stackrel{911}{_{1506}}$  guidance he had completely surrendered lumself, fled end of Mirza files

Duber's Mem pp 171, 172 44

BOOK II from Kábul for Ghazm, without coming to any explanation with his sovereign After committing some acts of violence and hostility, and taking and plundering Kila Báki^{*}, he passed through the Hazára country, with all his retainers, towards Bámián Those tribes of Aimáks who by this time had withdrawn from Násir Mírza, were now ranging to the north-west of that place; and he flattered himself with hopes that he might induce them to espouse his cause † It was not long before the course of events brought Báber into the same quarter.

* Q Kıla Safi ?

† Báber's Mem p 175

CHAPTER IL

JOURNEY TO AND FROM KHORÁSÁN -- KHAN MÍRZA'S RE-BELLION

1 POGRESS OF SHEID INI - HE DREADS THE MOGHULS IN HIS ARMT -SUBDUES KHWÁRAZH - BESIEGES BALKH - DEATH OF SUITAN HUSEIN MIRZA OF HERAT - BABER'S MARCH TO KHORASAN - DIS-CORD AND WANT OF SPIRIT OF THE MIEZAS -- BALKH SURRENDERS -BABER RETURNS HOME BY THE MOUNTAIN FOAD -HIS DANGER IN THE SNOW -FINDS RABUL BESIEGED BY THE FACTION OF KHAN MÍRZA - TREACHERY OF MUHAMMED HUSEIN MIRZA - BÁBER SUR-PRISES THE REDELS - SEIZES THE RINGLEADERS, WHOM HE PAR-DONS - SHEIBANI INVADES AND CONQUERS KHORASAN - FATE OF THE MIRZIS

The removal of an imperious minister, and the flight of CHAP 11 a restless and ambitious brother, afforded Báber a deл в 1505 gree of security which he could hardly otherwise have Kabul at enjoyed in his new territories Still, however, he was peace. far from being free from causes of anxiety The torrent of Uzbek invasion was not stemmed His mortal enemy Sheibáni Khan, having now subdued Hissár, Kunduz, and the neighbouring provinces, had returned to Samarkand, and was preparing himself for new conquests

Two objects chiefly engaged the attention of Sheibáni Further at this period, the conquest of Khwárazm, which he was resolved to attempt, and the breaking down and amalgamation with his army of the numerous Moghul clans now in his service

He found the Moghuls a race by no means tractable His anxiety or easily subjected to discipline They were accustomed regarding the Moghto submit to none but then own chiefs He had now us about thirty thousand of them in his army The death of his biother, Mahmud Sultan, who understood their projects of Sheibani.

A D 1505

character, and whom they had followed with pleasure, BOOK II. was a severe loss to him He could not venture to raise any one individual to the chief command of them, without raising up a rival to himself Several, who were men of note among the Moghuls, were now at Samarkand Of these the most eminent was Muhammed Husein Korkán, the son of Muhammed Haider, who had for many years been Amír or Ruler of Káshghar Muhammed Husein was the most intimate friend of the elder Khan, whose sister he had married, and who had given him the country of Uratippa When expelled from it, during the short time that he shared the favour of Khosrou Shab, he had married Sultáním Begum, the daughter of the late Sultan Ahmed Mírza, the Sultan of Samarkand By these intermarriages he had become closely connected both with Sheibáni and Báber*, and his reputation among the Moghuls stood very high Sheibáni had granted a large assignment to his wife Sultáním Begum in Shehr-sebz Another Moghul of note was Sultan Said, the younger Khan's third son, who had been left wounded in the field when his father and uncle were defeated and taken. He had afterwards been carried to Akhsi, and had fallen into the hands of Sheibáni, on the death of Támbol and his brothers addition to these, Shah Begum made her appearance at Samarkand She was the mother of the two Khans, the mother-in-law of one and grandmother of another of Sheibáni's wives, and the mother of his son's wife

> * The connection was manifold Baber's mother, Muhammed Husein's wife, and Sheibáni's wife, were three sisters, daughters of Báber and Mu-Yunis Khan hammed Husein had also married sisters, daughters of Sultan Ahmed Mírza of Samarkand, and Sheibani had married a sister of Báber's In addition to this, Sheibáni married a daughter of the elder Khan, the niece of Muhammed Husein, and first cousin of Báber The connection was drawn closer still by the marriage of Sheibáni's son, Taimh ..... Sultan, with the family of the Khans, he having married the youngest daughter of Yunis Khan by Shah Begum, a half-sister of Báber's mother

She was a woman of ability and intrigue, and had al- char if ways despotically managed the weak mind of her son,  $\frac{1}{A + 1505}$ When the Khan retired into the the elder Khan desert, after he was released by Sheibáni, she found herself thwarted by his ministers, which produced a quarrel with her son Unable to bear the contradiction to which she was now subjected, and to which she had never been accustomed, she repaired to Samarkand, under preteuce of soliciting from Sheibam some district as a settlement for the Khan, and she there appears to have passed her time very comfortably, in the society of her daughters, and of numerous female connections *

Sheibáni Khan set out for Khwárazm in the begin- ne sets out ning of winter, with his army composed of Uzbeks and for Khwá-razm, Moghuls All the Moghuls, the common tribesmen as A n 910. well as the Sultans and Amírs, were full of uncasiness Ap 1504 and apprehension Since the death of Mahmúd Sultan, their confidence was gone, and no Uzbek supplied his place Muhammed Husein, who from gratitude had always been strenuously supported by that chief;, felt his loss most severely Before involving himself in this enterprise, Sheibáni resolved to put things on a new footing, and to break up the banded system of Moghuls It was necessary for that purpose to deprive them of then leaders While engaged in preparations for the conquest of Khwárazm, he had one day a conversation with Mir Januka, a friend of Muhammed Husein He told him that he was resolved on no account to leave Khwárazm till he had taken it, that the siege would probably last long, that, while any of the old Moghul chiefs were left, he saw plainly that their adherents would never give up their attachment to them, to transfer it to any other master, but, that, if a convenient opportunity occurred, they would do by him as he had

* Tar Resh f 130

† He had interceded for and saved the life of Mahmud Sultan, when he was taken prisoner in a foray on Seiram

BOOK II

Flight of Muhammed Huseln,

and of Sultan Suid

Muhammed Husein reaches Herat

done by them, that their chief man was Muhammed Husein Korkán, the thoughts of whom disturbed him day and night, for to kill him was like killing one of the Khans, that he would willingly avoid that extremity " Do you, therefore," continued he, " let him know my purpose, and send him a private message to make his escape, without delay, while yet he may; for, when he is gone, I must make other Moghul chiefs drain the blood-stained cup" That same hour, the Mir sent off an express to Shehr-sebz, which reached it about noontide prayers "By afternoon prayers," says Haider Mírza, "my father, choosing me from among his children, and taking not more than sixteen of his followers along with him, fled towards Khorásán I iemember these events as a dream and imagination "* When his flight was known there was considerable alarm in Samarkand Sultan Saíd, a son of the younger Khan, three days afterwards also made his escape, and reached Seiián, whence he went on to Betikend† in Moghulistán, and joined the elder Khan, his uncle The rest of the Moghuls of rank, says the Mirza, he sent to their eternal home, or to hopeless imprisonment He ordered Shah Begum to be sent to Khorásán, and took all her people with him to Khwárazm ‡

Muhammed Husem Doghlat, when he reached Herát, found it the scene of much pomp and splendour All Sultan Mírza Husem's children who had been in rebellion, had now submitted, and surrounded his throne; united by dread of the common enemy The Doghlat was received in the most honourable manner, and a place assigned him next in rank to the Sultan's eldest son The Sultan wished to bind him to his family, and to a residence at Herát, by a connection in marriage 'this the Doghlat did not think advisable for hun, and contrived to avoid The Sultan was now very old, en- CHAP II feebled by palsy and gout, and the talents of his sons A P 1505. were not such as to enable them, when they came to the throne, to cope with Sheibáni, To escape from forming this connection, Muliammed Husein pleaded a vow to make the pilgrimage of Mekka Soon after, Shih Begun urrived in Heiút Along with hei came Mehr-mgan Khomum, who was her step-daughter and the eldest sister of Babei's mother, and of the Doghlat's Inte wife, the same whom Sheibám had divorced to marry her nicee Other relations accompanied them On their ariaal Muhammed Husein altered his plan These ladies were all strangers in Khorásán, where they did not find themselves at home, but they were all near relations of Baber's mother Muhammed, therefore, asked leave to accompany them to Kábul, Goes to which was not refused "Some days before they kabul renched Kabul," says the Mirza, "Kutluk-nigát Khanum, Moharrem, Baber's mother, died Her death was a severe afflic- June, tion to our party Baber received us with the utmost A n 1505 distinction, sent an honorary procession to meet us, and treated us honomably and kindly to the utmost extent of his ability Here we all spent some time in the height of ease and enjoyment"*

Tar Resh f 139

† Heft-deh

‡ Tar Resh ff 131 156

Mennwhile Sheibám Khan, having got quit of the sheibini grand Moghul chiefs by flight, and of the inferior besieges leaders and heads of elans by death or implisonment, ram, had incorporated the mass of Moghuls with his army, which, besides his Uzbeks, was composed of adventurers from every tribe and nation around IIe now laid siege to Khwárazm, which belonged to Khoiásán, and was defended with extraordinary skill and bravery by Husein Súfit, the governoi, foi ten or eleven months, and many of the gallant exploits of the garrison long continued to be remembered by the Uzbeks In spite of his frequent calls for succour, not one man was sent BOOK II. to his aid "When no hope of relief from any quarter A,D 1505--6 appeared," says Báber, " some dastardly wretches among the inhabitants, having lost heart, entered into an understanding with the Uzbeks, and introduced them into the fortress Husein Súfi, on hearing the alarm, repaired to the spot; charged those who had scaled the walls, and, while in the act of driving them out, was struck with an arrow and died. This put an end to takes it. the contest, and the place was taken The blessing of л н 911, end of God rest on Husein Súfi, who never hesitated for a A D 1505 moment, in the midst of danger and distress, gallantly to expose his life at the call of duty." *

* Far Resh f 156, Baber, † Chain Sufi Tar Resh pp 169, 170

237

Sheibáni now returned to Samarkand, and made prcparations for attacking the dominions of Khorásán with his whole force His territories were most extensive He was master of everything between the Amu and the Sirr, besides the tract of cultivated country that lies beyond the Sirr, from the Káshghar mountains to the / Lake Aral In like manner he had conquered the Amu fiom Badakhshán to Balkh, as well as the kingdom of Khwárazm He now laid siege to Balkh Sultan Husein Mírza saw that no time was to be lost in stemming the torrent of invasion, and, old as he was, took the field in the beginning of summer, and summoned the whole force of his dominions to join him * He at the same time invited such of the neighbouring princes as were friendly to him, and among the rest Baber, to join in an undertaking that was equally the concern of all Báber readily consented to lend his aid, both, from a wish to check the overgrown power of Sheibáni, and, from the expectation that, on his route to Khorásán, he might be able either to beat up the quarters of Jehángír and prevent his having time to form new alliances that

[•] Baber's Mem р 176, Таг † End of л и 911, Арпl, л р Resh f 161 1506

Sheibáni besleges

Ballh.

Sultan Husein Mírza invites Báber, might be dingerous to lum, or prevail upon him to CHAP II return to his duty He accordingly set out from Kúbul Ap 1506 in the month of Mohariem * (June) for Khorásán, who sets tiking the rout of Ghúrbend and Shibertu From out. Ushter-Shehr he proceeded to Zohák and Gumbezek, deseending, by Sughán and the Dendán-shiken pass, to Kulunerd Jehangir Mirza, alarmed at lus motions, fled from the vicinity of Bannán, where he then was, and withdrew faither into the recesses of the mountains

Biber halted some time at Kahineid, and sent out his troops to forage and to collect grain and cattle in various directions By his presence he overawed the Annaks, and prevented them from joining Jehángír Sheibáni was then busy with the siege of Balkh, the capital of an important portion of the Khorásán dominions, and his plundering parties extended their ravages over all the low countries lying between the inountains and the Amu It was while Báber was still at Kahmerd, that he learned, by letters from the envoys Death of whom he had sent forward, that Sultan Husem Mírza, Sultan Husen Mírza, Sultan Husen, whom he was marching to join, was no longer alive, having expired in the course of the preceding month †

This news did not stop his advance, he again set out, nater proand proceeding by the passes of Balkh-ab, penetrated the hill-country of Saf Here, learning that the Uzbeks were mundering Sán and Chárek, not far from his line of soute, he sent out a detachment, who cut a body of them to pieces, and brought back a number of their hends as trophies

Here the Aimáks from the neighbouring hills came and unaninously acknowledged Baber The emissaries whom Jehángir had sent among them to draw them over to his interest, had failed of success That prince, cceds,

[†] Zilhajeh, A п 911, which Moharrem, 912, begins 21 May, Legan 25 April, A D 1506 др 1506 count of Herát had for many years been the most char IL refined and magnificent of any in Asia Never had  $\frac{1}{A_{1,B_{1}}, 1506}$ the fine arts been cultivated, in any Musulman country, with more success than at Herát, during the long reign of Sultan Husem Muza Poets, drunes, philosophers, lustomans, arclutects, musical composers, singers, and musicions, punters and elegant penmen, (a class, who, in Persia, are deservedly ranked among the professors of the fine arts,) all abounded, and many of them attained the highest reputation in their various pursuits But the country itself was on the verge of ruin The Sultan, who in his earlier life had been so active and vigilant, in the latter years of his reign gave himself up too easily to sensual and voluptuous enjoyments Ilis sons, unfortunately, had been educated in the case character and the corrupting indulgences of an effeininate court of the Mirras. Baber describes them, as men of elegant manners and winning address, accomplished, and intelligent, but devoted to pleasure, and ignorant of affairs IIc soon saw that the brave barbarian from the north was not to be vanquished by men like these Their tents of state, their rich carpets, their gorgeous attire, and goblets of silver and gold, without adding to their own means of defence, were in incentive to the rapieity of the enemy He found that they had already spent three or four months in merely marching from Heiat, and in assembling their troops on the Murgháb, and had remained all that time without attempting any active operation, while the important city and fortress of Balkh, which had been besieged by the Uzbeks for many months, and defended during all that time most gallantly, was at length compelled to surrender for Balkh sur-want of succour "The Minzas," says Baber, "although renders. very accomplished at the social board, or in the arrangements for a party of pleasure, and although they had a pleasing talent for conversation and society, possessed no knowledge whatever of the conduct of a campaign, VOL I R or of warlike operations, and were perfect strangers to BOOK II whatever related to the arrangements for a battle, or A 1) 1506 the dangers and spirit of a soldier's life While we remained on the Murgháb, news came that Hak Názer Chápa, with four or five hundred men, had advanced, and was plundering the territory of Chiehektú The whole of the Mirzas assembled, and held councils ; but, with all their consultations, they could not contrive to detach a light party to cut up the plunderers Chichektú is ten farsangs (forty miles) from Murgliáb I asked permission to manage the matter, but, being afraid for their own reputation, they would not suffer me to move " * By this time the winter was at hand, and it was agreed that the army should break up, and each Mínza choose suitable winter-quarters for himself, Mírza's army breaks up but that all should be ready to meet and commence operations early in the ensuing spring They urged Báber also to winter in Khorásán But as he had conquered his own kingdom hardly two years before, by the aid of various unconnected bands of mercenary adventurers, over whom his power was but contingent, and who required the immediate pressure of authority to retain them in their allegiance, and as, besides this, the whole neighbouring countries swarmed with wandering tribes and houseless soldiers of fortune prowing about in search of plunder and revolution, he justly deemed it dangerous to be long absent from his capital, espe-cially at the distance of a two or three months' march Several of the royal Mirzas, however, waited upon him, and, by their urgent entreaties, extorted his consent Baber visits To make the most of his time, he visited Herát, its holy Herát. and learned men, its colleges, mosques, sepulchres, and palaces, and was again royally entertained But he 8 Shaban, soon saw the necessity of attending to the affairs of his own kingdom, and, in the last days of December, set л л 912, 24 Dec 1506

ţ

242

OIN Herát, on his return to Kábul, by the moun- CHAP II ¢ heo

e snow had begun to fall, and the road was diffi- Returns by ven in summer, but Báber's ardoui of mind, and d his pludence, urged him to push on without As he advanced, the snow continued to fall santly, and became deeper and deeper It soon hed up to the horses' knees, and, after a few days' ress, even above the stirrups. To add to then ulties, when they were far advanced among the , then guide lost the road, and was never able to in it Kásim Beg, who was now again Báber's ie minister, and who had recommended this hill-* in preference to the low-road by Farrah and Difficulties dahár, which was more circuitous, eager to save of the road credit, dismounted with his sons and their followers. , treading down the snow, made a road by which the y advanced a little Next day, the snow being very o and the road still not to be found, the troops were ed to retrace their steps to a spot which they had sed, where there was plenty of firewood, and parties e detached in all directions to try to discovel, in valleys or more sheltered grounds, any of the cáras, or other inhabitants, who might be wintering But all their efforts were unsuccessful, and, in re , or three days, the whole of their parties found ir way back, without having been able, on these itary wilds, to meet with even a single person to ve as a guide All had abandoned the snow-covered untains, for their winter range in the lower grounds As it was ruin to remain where they were, they were npelled once more to set out through the snow, by

Babers Mem p 208 This route was by Lenger -Ghiás, the borders of Gharin, Chekhcheran, Chiraghdau, ukan, Khaisal-Koti, the Zirin pass, Yeke-Auleng, and Bamián, considerably to the south of that route by which he had marched to Khorasan

л D 1506 the moun tains.

BOOK II A D 1506

٩

the very way along which they had so lately been forced to return For the first week they endured incredible hardships, without being able to advance more than two or three miles Baber himself, Kasım Beg his minister, and some of their nearest relations and servants, to show a bold face and to support the sinking spirits of their men, went on, to the number of about twenty, in front of the rest, tramping down the At every step they sank up to the waist, of sometimes to the breast, but nevertheless went on When the strength of those in front was exhausted, another band advanced and took their place, proceeding snow forward in the same way After this, a horse was brought on, which plunged forward on the space they had trampled down, and, when he was exhausted, another was dragged on in his room In this way they laboured on, the greater part of the army chilled and disputited, having given up all heart, "and it was no season," says Báber, "to talk of exerting authority" Proceeding in their toilsome march for two or three days longer, they at length arrived at the foot of the Zirin pass the snow deep, and the defile so narrow that only one Reaches the Zirir-mass be brought on, and the days were at the shortest person could pass at a time Their situation seemed hopeless, and they only thought of meeting death together, when, those who were in advance, just as the light failed, reached a cave†, which they entered, and found that it would afford shelter to a few persons When the darkness came on there was

 Ва́ber's son, Humáyun, was placed in similar circumstances in a winter march from Kunduz to Kabul. "It was then the depth of winter," says lus biographer, Jouher, "and such a quantity of snow had fallen, that the roads were quite blocked up, we were therefore obliged to ram the snow well down, after which the horses and camels were enabled to move on", Jouher's Mem of Humayun, p 85 + Called Khawal-Loti an end of excition, every man being obliged to halt char n. and pass the night where he happened to be ▲ D 1507

*(

244

The cave, when examined, seemed but small The Danger of Sultan was invited, by those who had found it, to enter the army He enters a and enjoy such comfort as it could yield But Báber, cave with that generous spirit which on all occasions, and most cspecially in the most trying and dangerous, led hun to share the hardships of those whom he led,-a spirit that in all his difficulties ensured to him the affection and fidelity of his followers,-refused to enter, while the great body of his men were suffering without Taking a kind of spade, he dug for himself a hole in the snow, near the mouth of the cave, and, sitting down in the opening thus formed, found some shelter from the fury of the storm Though he had dug breast deep in the snow, still he had not come to the ground The snow and drift, driven by the wind, continued to increase, and, before the hour of bed-time prayers, the snow had settled four inches high over his head and Meanwhile, those who had first entered the cave, ears having found means to explore its extent, reported that it was large enough to hold them all On this, Baber shook off the snow by which he was covered, and entered the cavern, with those who were near him, at the some time sending to call in those who were farther off, and ignorant of what had happened Fifty or sixty men, who were nearest at hand, found their way in, and producing such provisions as they could command, all sat down together, and sheltered from the cold wintry wind and drifting snow, feasted with delight on their simple and scanty faie, defying the angry ele-ments, and forgetting for a moment all their past sufferings

7

Next morning the snow and the tempest ceased severity of With renewed spirit they again began trampling down the snow as before, and continued their weary labour all that day At night, though the snow was over, the R 3

the cold,

cold was most intense, and the distress extreme Many BOOK II lost their hands and feet, from its severity. On the A D 1507 succeeding morning they descended into a glen They knew that this was not the road, but kept on, passing over many deep gulphs and ravines, and, by the time of evening prayers, gained the mouth of the valley Thev now, at last, came on an inhabited country. The natives, in astonishment, saw them descend from the high lands over passes, which, at such a season, none had ever been known even to think of attempting, and they now found that the excessive depth of the snow, which had cost them so much toil, and which they feared would have proved their destruction, was what had in reality saved them, as its drifts had filled up the hollows, and so enabled them to pass over precipices and ravines, which, but for that circumstance, would have opposed an insuperable bar to their progress *

The people of Yeke-Auleng, where they had now de-The people of Teke-Auleng, where they had now de-scended the mountains, received Báber and his army into their houses with the greatest hospitality, brought out and killed their fattest sheep for them, and supplied hay and grain for their horses Large fires were kindled, and the troops halted a whole day, to rest and refresh themselves They still had a long tract of hill-country to pass, but the level was lower and the climate warmer After some days, having passed Bámián, and descended by the Shibertu pass, they found that the Túrkomán Hazáras, a pastoral and predatory tribe, who descend from the mountains in winter, to spend the season in a more temperate atmosphere, were en-camped exactly in their line of march, little expecting an enemy to come upon them from the snow-covered mountains behind They were scattered in huts over the country, for the convenience of pasture Báber plundered the first parties of them upon whom he

He gains the low grounds

Yeke-Auleng

Bámlán ' Id of Ramzán, л п 912, 14 Feb л. в 1507 Plunders the Túrkomán Hazhras,

* Báber's Mem pp 208-212

come when the rest, being almmed, collected together, cuvr in and seized a hall new the route by which he was de- A p 1507 scending liere he attacked and defeated them, after some resistance, put numbers to the sword, and took muy of them prisoners with then wives and children, itter which his troops spreid on all sides, driving away the herds of horses and flocks of sheep of the nufortunate Il 17 was wherever they could be discovered

Baber had now advanced within a few matches of Approaches Kibnl and it length guned some intelligence of the proceedings that had taken place there, while he was employed on his expedition. The found that the apprehensions which he had entertained of the possibility of revolt or rebellion, during his absence, had been but ton well founded

When Baber came to the resolution of marching for Babergives Nuhammed Rhorean he had visited his nucle Muhammed Husem meeting Mirzi Doghlit the husband of his mother - younger charge of sister and hid proposed to hum to undertake the munigement of Kibul, and the rest of the kingdom, during his disence on the expedition The Muza respectfully declined the honom, pleading that, when m khorism, he had made a vow to perform the pilgrimage of Mckka, and that to accept such a trust would be a violation of it, but added that, if his Majesty should appoint any of his great nobles to fulfil that duty, he would advise and assist them to the atmost extent of his ability Biber, desirous to secure the co-operation of a min of so much reputation, and so near a connection, soon after introduced to him Nizam-ed-din Khalifa, Múlla Bibr Bishágheri, Mir Ahmed Kúsun Kolibin, md some other of his confidential servants, and, after complimenting the Muzz in the warmest manner, added, "Relying upon you, I am about to set out, these Amirs will save you the trouble of details, by conducting the different departments, under your general direc-

247

հոնով

воок и t

Reports at Kábul tion," and, after the strongest expressions of good-will on both sides, and of confidence on that of Báber, he commenced his march to Khorásán  $\frac{\pi}{2}$

For several months all went on well at Kábul, but, as the winter advanced and the weather became severe, all direct communication with Khorásán being interrupted by the snow, and by the dangerous state of the roads, which were infested by banditti, and especially by the Hazáras, various reports began to prevail, that Báber had been seized by the Mírzas of Khorásán, and sent to a state prison, from which he never would escape in life These reports were encouraged and propagated by a powerful party in his very court and palace

The Moghul, Yúnis Khan, had left five daughters and two sons, three of the daughters being by one wife, and the two sons and two of the daughters by another.

The daughters of Ais-doulat Begum, the elder wife, were,—Mehr-nigár Khánum, the widow of Sultan Ahmed Mírza of Samarkand, by whom she had no children After his death, as has been mentioned, she married Sheibáni Khan, by whom she was divorced that he might marry her niece Khanzáda Begum, Báber's sister She left Samarkand, along with her step-mother Shih Begum, and had accompanied her to Kabul, where she now was The second daughter was Báber's mother, who died just before the arrival of the party from Khorásán And the third was the wife of Muhammed Husein Mírza, Doghlat, who also died some years before

Yúnis Khan's other wife was Shah Begum, the daughter of the king of Badakhshán By her, Yúnis had two sons, the elder and younger Khans, and two daughters The elder daughter was Sultan-mgár Khánum, who had married Sultan Mahmúd Mirza, successively Sultan of Hissár and of Samarkand, by whom she had

Faction in favour of Khan Mirza,

in only son Sultan Weis, or as he was generally called, cute in Whim Mir. 1, she afterwards manied two Khans of the h uz ik Uzbeks in succession Shah Begum's younger durghter married Tannur Sultin, the son of Sheibam Man

I rom this statement it appears that Shah Begam, while she was the step mother of Baber's mother, was the mother of Khim Mirzas Khim Mirza had been educated at 1 ishkend, after his father's death, and had become the fivomite of lns grandmother and annts, who were at the court of the elder Khan, as well as of his uncle Multimimed Hinsein Shah Beginn, the grandmother, Mehr-nig ir Khammi the aunt, and Muhammed Husem Mirzh, the nucle of Klinn Muzh, were all now it Kilbul as well is klipu Mirza himself, who had remaned behind with his grandmother, justend of recompurying his cousin B iber on his expedition

Shah Begum who was a womm of spirit and of m- Shah Be trigne resolved to ruse her fivonite grandson, Khan the No-Mirzi to the throne She grund over a body of the Moghuls, who had remained behind at Kibul, and who regarded with revenence the widow of their old Khan, ind the mother of the two Khans, his sons She also drew over to her interest Sultan Senjer Bulis, a chief of considerable influence, and her sister's son The real head of the conspiracy, however, seems to have been Muhmmed Husem Mirza, though he was anxious not to appear, and left the ostensible management of the affair to Shah Beguin Even in what we may conduct of suppose to be the pritril statement of his son Haider Mirzy, Multummed Husem is far from being blumeless, "When the emperor was reported to have been seized (in Khoi isán), and Shah Beginn proposed to my father, that Khan Mirza should be acknowledged in his place, he refused to lend his subction to the proceeding altercation that ensued led to tears and heartbuining, and, through Shah Begum, the Khánums, too, were of-

ghul

Muhammed Husein.

fended, a circumstance which my father felt very se-BOOK II verely. At last he told them, that there was no use in A p 1507 being offended at his refusal, as he had ceased to take any share in the management of state affairs This resolution he formed after a month's wrangling When the king's Amírs, who eame daily out of the fort to wait upon him, visited him as usual, my father privately told them, that they need no longer come, upon which they shut themselves up in the castle, and my father went to Ab-báián, a town a day's journey fiom Kábul, and withdrew from all business Shah Begum and the rest of her party, composed chiefly of the Mo ghuls, now made the Khutba be read in Mírza Khan's who joins the rebel* name, and used every exertion to take the fort of Kábul Many combats ensued. The Begum sent a person to call my father, and to remoustrate with him As their remonstrances and entreaties were such as it was impossible to resist, my father came from compulsion fThe fort of K*i*bul was besieged for four and twenty days, when the emperor suddenly arrived "^K On descending the mountains, after his long and toil

Báber learns their proceedings, communi cates with the garrison of Kabul On descending the mountains, after his long and toil some march, Báber, while plundering the Hazáras, was informed of these important events, and that Kábul was still bravely defended by Múlla Baba Bishághen, Khalífa, Mohib Ah Korchi, Ahmed Kásim, and others of his gallant adherents. Without delay, having at once formed his plan, he despatched, from Lenger-Taimur-Khan, a trusty messenger, whom he instructed to spare no exertion to find his way into the town, to inform the officers who held out in it that he was approaching, and that he would lose no time in reheving them, that he was to deseend by the Ghurbend pass, and to march to take the rebels by surprise, that the signal of his approach would be a blazing fire, which he would kindle after he had passed the Minár hill, that they were to answei it by another fire on the top of the old Kiosk CHAP II. within the citadel*, and, on the signal being so answered, the rebels were to be immediately attacked on both sides, by his troops from without, and by theirs from within

Having sent forward his messenger, Báber determined upon leaving the heavy baggage to follow with Jehángír Míıza, while he hunself pushed on without delay Jehángír, while in Khoiásán, had indulged in wine to excess, and was affected with fever and dysentery so violently, that it was generally reported that Khadija Begum, the late Sultan's favourite wife, had, "after her old fashion," administered poison in his wine He was still so feeble as to be compelled to use a litter † Baber, having made this arrangement, hastened forward with all his disposable force He advanced and halted one night at Ushter-Shehr, descended the Ghurbend pass, and halted next night at Su-e-púl, refreshed and bathed his horses, and set out again at noon-tide prayers Till he reached Tutkáwel, there was no snow After passing that place, the farther he went the snow lay the deeper "Between Noh and Minár," says he, " the cold was so intense that, in the whole course of my life, I have seldom experienced the like" Here he sent on new messengers to prepare the gausson for his approach ‡

After passing the hill of Minár, the army, in the Kindles evening, was compelled by the cold to kindle fires to fres, waim themselves, and, in the moining again marched on, with the snow above the saddle girths, their horses sinking and plunging through it Before reaching Kábul, they saw a fire blazing in the citadel, and at which are once comprehended that the garrison were on the alert, mistaken and that the night fires of the army had been mistaken

* The Bala-Hissór

r

1 Buber's Mem p 214

† Tar Resh f 158

A D 1507.

BOOK II

A D 1507 Surprises the rebeis

for the signal They pushed on, however, and in spite of this mischance, still took by surprise the enemy, who fled without attempting to form or oppose them regu-larly, and dispersed and hid themselves in all quarters Báber's first efforts were directed to secure the persons of Khan Mírza, and of Muhammed Husein Doghlat Khan Mírza had just time to mount on horseback and escape; Muhammed Ilusein Mírza also fled from his palace and concealed himself. There was much hard fighting among the palaces and gardens in the suburbs, in the course of which the king, from his habitual ardour, was exposed to imminent danger In a short time, some of the principal leaders of the rebels were seized Sultan Senjer Birlás was taken and dragged before the King, with a rope about his neck He had been particularly distinguished by Báber, who had given him the valuable Tumán of Nangenhár Being in great agitation, he exclaimed, "What crime have I committed?" "And what greater crime can there be," replied Báber, "than for a man of your note to con-spire with rebels?" "But," continues the generous prince, "as Shah Begum, the mother of the Khans, my uncles, was his mother's sister. I ordered them not to drag him in that shameful way along the ground, but spared his life, and did him no harm "*

Checks plunder in Kábul , visits the princesses. The garrison, meanwhile, had salled out to complete the victory, and, to add to the confusion, the townspeople and rabble had risen, and were pursuing the fugitives and plundering whatever came in their way, with very little discrimination Baber's first care was to despatch parties to chastise and drive away the plunderers; and to station guards, to preserve and restore the public peace He then hastened to the palace of Shah Begum, eager to re-assure the minds of the princesses He alighted without ceremony, at the place he was accustomed to do, when paying her an CHAP II ordinary visit*, and went up to the Begum with his , 1507 usual cheerfulness and good humour "She was filled with confusion, and knew not what to do or say," says Haider Muza, her grandson "Báber, kneeling, embraced her in the most affectionate manner, and reading her thoughts, mildly observed, 'You have exerted your motherly affection and patronage in behalf of one of your children, why should that vex or offend another of them The mother's authority over her children is absolute But,' continued he, 'I have been awake all night, I have made a most fatiguing journey, and am very weary' So saying, he lay down at the Begum's feet, placed his head on her lap, and composed himself to sleep " "This he did," observes Haider Mírza, "to restore confidence and ease to her mind He had not yet fallen asleep when Mehr-nigár Khánum, his mother's sister, entered He instantly leaped up, and most tenderly embraced his beloved relation 'Your child. your wives, and family,' said the Khánum, ' are all longing to see you once more' ' Go,' said he, ' and carry into the city the news of my coming' He followed close after her The Amírs and all the population poured out thanks for his preservation and return, and employed the dust under the feet of the beneficent King as collyrium to adorn their eyes "†

* Báber's Mem pp 214-216

From the Begum's residence, Báber went to the Chehár-bagh, which Khan Mírza had occupied as his palace There he wrote and despatched letters to every part of the kingdom, as well as to the Aimáks and wandering tribes, to announce his victory He then entered the citadel

* In visits in the East, whether among princes or people of rank, great stress is laid on the ceremonial part of them, and especially the alighting from horseback in the outer or inner court, or at a particular distance from the gate. The distance at which the person visiting is received by the one visited, is also much attended to, and often the subject of previous negotiation

×.

† Tar Resh f 159

It was not long before Muhammed Husein Mírza, who had been discovered hid in one of the Khánum's BOOK II л в 1507 store-houses among some carpets, was brought before Mohammed Husein Báber The Khánum seems to have accompanied him, Baber The Khanum seems to have accompanied him, and pleaded for his pardon As they approached, the King advanced to meet the Khánum, "O soul of thy mother," said she, "I have brought thee my guilty and unfortunate brother What is thy command?" and she pointed to the Mírza On seeing him, Báber at once went forward with his usual alaciity, and smiling with perfect frankness, took him in his arms, made many attentive inquiries, and showed him every mark sulzed, of kindness and respect * Khan Mirza, too, was overof kindness and respect * Khan Mírza, too, was over-taken not far from Kabul, and was brought before his offended sovereign "I was sitting," says Báber, "in a portico of the Old Hall of Audience, when he was brought in 'Coine,' said I, 'and embrace me' From the agitation in which he was, he twice fell before he could come up and make his obeisance After we had saluted, I seated him at my side, and spoke encouragingly to him They brought in sherbet I myself drank of it first, in order to re-assure him, and then handed it to him As I was still uncertain of the fidelity of a considerable part of the soldiors the fidelity of a considerable part of the soldiers, the country people, the Moghuls and Chaghatáis, who were yet unsettled, I sent Khan Mírza into custody at laige in the palace of his sisters, with orders that he should not leave it. But, as the commotions and seditions of the migratory tribes still continued, and as it did not seem advisable that the Mírza should remain in Kábul, I permitted hun, in the course of a few days, to proceed and parto Khorásán "†

But though the forgiving temper of Báber was 50 annably exerted, in overlooking the offences of the Beguin and Khánum, and in pardoning the more guev-

doned

Baber's reflections on their con duct.

* Tar Resh f 159

† Babers Mem. p 219

and Khan Mirzy,

ous climes of the others, we must not believe that this char if eonduct was the result of mere indifference, of easiness A D 1507 of temper, or of a werk compliance with female soliestation Ilis elemency was, indeed, founded on strong natural affections, and constitutional strength of feeling, which were attended and nurtured by a secret persursion that finds a place only in generous minds, that while he gratified his own heart by yielding to the impulse of emotions connected with the highest moral and intellectual elements of his being, he did not ultimately injure the interests of his people Yet his noble mind felt the injuries that had been done to him most deeply, and the extent of his self-control may be seen by his reflections on the hard usige which he beheved that on this and other occasions he experienced from these ladies, and his other relations of the family of the Moghul Khans "It was not my wish that they should feel unersy, yet the faction which had been guilty of such execsses was composed of persons, who, beyond all doubt, were not disposed to neglect the suggestions of the Beguin and the Khánum Khan Mírzi was the graudson, by birth, of Shah Begum, and night and day with her. If he did not follow the advice of these Indies, it was at least in their power to have hindered his leaving them, and they could have kept him by them, under their own eye Nor was this all On various oceasions, when, from adverse circumstances and misfortune, I was driven from my kingdom and throne, and separated from my servants and dependents, I had fled to them for refuge and succour, my mother too had gone to them, but we experienced no sort of kindness or support Khan Míiza, who was younger than I, and his mother Sultan-nigár Khánum, at that time possessed rich and fertile districts, while I and my mother could not boast the possession of even a single village, or a few fowls Yet my mother, too was a daughter of Yúnis Khan, and I was his grandBOOK II son. In spite of this conduct, however, to every one of that family who came within the sphere of my influ-A.D 1507. ence, I performed my duty, whether they were related to me by blood or connected by marriage. Take for an example Shah Begum herself, on whom I bestowed Pemghán, which is one of the choice districts of Kúbul, and at no time did I fail in my duty to her, in any re-speet, as her son and servant Sultan Said Khan, the Khan of Káshghar^{*}, reached me on foot, with five on six naked followers I received them as if they had been my own brothers, and gave him the Tumán of Mandráur, one of the districts of Lamghán When Shah Ismael overthrew and slew Sheibák Khan m Merv, and I passed over to Kunduz, the men of Ande-Jin began to turn their eyes towards me, and several of them displaced their Daroghas, fortified their towns, declared for me, and sent persons to invite me I despatched Sultan Saud Khan, with my Baberi servants and an additional reinforcement, to hold the govein-ment of my own native country of Andeján, and rused him to the rank of Khan, and down to this moment I have always continued to treat every man of that family, who has sought my protection, with as much kindness as my own paternal relations, as, for example, Chin-Taimur Sultan, Isan-Taimur Sultan, Tokhtehbugha Sultan, and Baba Sultan †, are all at this instant with me, and I have received and treated them with more distinction than my own paternal cousins I have no intention," continues he, "by these remarks to reflect on any one, but only to state the plain truth, nor have I the least design to praise myself, I have spoken of things just as they happened, and, in every

> * Sultan Said was son of the younger Ishan, and so a grandson of Shah Begum

† The three former of these were sons, the latter grandson of the younger Islian, and so all descended of Shah Begum

A p 1507 Famine in Kabul A 11 912

BOOK II

Such was the result of Báber's prudent resolution to leave Khorásán, and return to his own dominions His presence at Kábul had become necessary on many accounts, as well as to quell the recent rebellion The confusion that prevailed, in consequence of successive revolutions, and of the march and plunder of foreign and barbarous troops over the country, joined perhaps to unfavourable seasons, had reduced the inhabitants to the most afflicting state of distress, which it required all his active benevolence and energy to alleviate About the same time died his brother Jehángíi Mírza, from the effects of excessive drinking*, and that prince's government of Ghazni was bestowed on Násir Mírza, the surviving brother, who had just returned from his unsuccessful expedition against Badakhshán †

Bond of fidelity

Death of Jehanger,

Báber, at this period, when all the countries around him were in a state of anarchy or revolution, and the minds of men were unsettled, seems, among other means of confirming his power, to have resorted to the expedient of making the leading men of his kingdom sign a bond of allegiance and fidelity  $\ddagger$  The newness of his own government, the late revolt, the distracted state of the whole of Central Asia, seemed to justify his adopting a measure, which has always had greater importance in appearance than it was ever found to possess in reality §

Shelbani invades Khorasan, A 11 912, A 12 1506 Meanwhile in Khorásán, after he left it, affairs were less ably conducted Sheibáni, having subdued Khwárazm and reduced Balkh, returned to Samarkand, where he spent the winter Early in the spring, he set out with an army of fifty thousand men,

• Jehángír had married the fourth daughter of Sultan Mahmud Mirza of Hissar (the sister of one of Bubers wives) He had no son, but left a daughter, who afterwards accompanied her maternal grandmother, Khanzada Begum, to Badakhehan

† Tar Resludi, f 160, Briggs's Ferishta, 11 p 27

‡ Metamassuk

{ Tar Resh ff 160, 161

BOOK II found nothing prepared to resist him He took possession of the city at once; and in two or three weeks the fort also surrendered, with the whole Harams of the late sovereign, and the families and children, and all the treasures of the Mírzas themselves. These ladies, as well as the citizens of Herát, were plundered without mercy under the authority of Sheibáni

Conquest of Khorásan

ł

The disunion and want of concert among the princes led to the consequences that might be expected. Each retired to his own government Sheibáni sent detachments of his army against them The contest was not prolonged, though several battles were fought in different provinces The victorious Uzbeks marched m every direction over Khorásán, that was soon prostrate All of the Mirzas fell in action, or were before them put to death when prisoners, in the course of the next year or two, except Badı-ez-zemán Mírza, the eldest, who fled to Shah Ismael of Persia. and, after various adventures, died -= constantinople about ten years afterwarde "

Such was the termination of the dynasty of Taimur in the powerful kingdom of Khorásán. The sovereignty passed to Sheibáni Khan and his Uzbeks, who, however, as will soon be mentioned, held it only four years

* Báber's Mem pp 220-224, Tar Resh ff 161, 162

CHAPTER III

CONQUEST AND LOSS OF KANDAHÁR - REBELLION OF THE MOGHULS

AFFAIRS OF KANDAHAR -- ZULNUN'S EARLY LIFE -- HE GETS THE GOVERNMENT OF ZEMIN-DAWER - AND OF KANDAHAR - CONNECTS HIMSELF WITH BADI-EZ-ZEMAN MIRZA -- HOSTILITIES WITH SUL-TAN HUSEIN OF HERAT -- DEATH OF THE SULTAN -- ZULNUN MINISTER, - HIS DEATH -- TRANSACTIONS OF HIS SONS WITH BABER - WHO DEFEATS THEM, AND TAKES KANDAHÁR. - SHEIBÁNI MARCHES TO THEIR RELIEF - ALARM OF BABER. - KANDAHAR RETAKEN - REBELLION OF BABER'S MOGHULS - QUELLED BY HIS 1 LOUR - AFFAIRS OF BADALHSHÁN - KHAN MÍRZA KING - HIS INDIGENT CONDITION - SULTAN SAID AND MIRZA HAIDER AT KABUL - THEIR RECEPTION

THE success of Sheibáni's arms, first at Samarkand, CHAP III Táshkend, and Ferghána, afterwards in Hissár and Kunduz, then in Khwárazm, and now in Khorásán, Affairs of Kandahár was alarming to all his neighbours He was undisputed master of the whole extensive regions, from the Tartar deserts to the Hindú-kúsh, and Parapamisan mountains, and the farthest limits of Khorásán This new invader from the north seemed, like Chengiz Khan and Taimur Beg, to threaten universal conquest After occupying Khorásán, it was naturally expected that he would march into Zemín-Dáwer and Kandahár, provinces which were then dependent on that kingdom In these valuable possessions, Shah Beg had just succeeded his father Zúlnún Beg, Arghún, a man who for many years had acted a conspicuous part at the Court of Herát, and who, as he laid the foundation of the power of a family which afterwards came into frequent collision with Báber and his sons, governed Kandahár

BOOK 11

Mir Zúlnán Beg, his early life

л н 873, л р 1468 for many years, and long swayed the sceptre of Sind, is entitled to some commemoration in this place

Mír Zúlnún Beg, the son of Mír Hassan Basri, was descended of the noble tribe of Arghún, by a family that had long held a high rank under different princes, and which affected to trace back its origin, through Arghún Khan, to the great Chengiz hunself * While yet a youth, he had attached humself to the service of Sultan Abu-saíd Mírza, whose dominions extended from Tartary to Kirmán, and became distinguished above all the young nobles of the Court, for his brilliant courage and especially for his gallant exploits in single combat, several of which were performed under the Khákán's own eye On the calamitous discomfiture and death of that powerful monarch at Ardebil, Zúlnún returned to Herát to his father, and was there for some time, in the service of Sultan Yúdgár Mírza, one of the numerous competitors for the vacant throne From Herát he afterwards repaired to Samarkand, where he was favourably received by Sultan Ahmed Minza, the eldest son of Abusaíd, his formei mastei Here he remained some years, but the Arghún nobles at that Court, having quarrelled with the Terkháns, with whom the Sultan was connected by his mother, who was of their tribe, and the Terkhán lords having gained unlimited influence over that pious, but weak and indolent prince, Zúlnún returned once more to Herát, where the great Sultan Husein Mírza had now fixed himself, as undisputed Khákán or Emperor, by the overthrow of the last of his antagonists †

Repairs to Herat , Under this able sovereign, the Court of Herát was

* The genealogy of Zulnun Beg upwards from Mahmúd Gházán, bin Arghun Khan, bin Abakán, bin Hulaku Khan, bin Tuli Khun, bin Chengíz Khan, as given by historians, 18 distinct enough, but the downward course from Gházán to Mir Hasan Basri, Zulnún's father, though the most necessary for establishing his claim, I have not met with the general resolt of adventurels of talent or ambition, CHAP III. in arms, in letters, or the useful arts, from every part of Asia A soldier, who, like Zúlnún, had distinguished lumself by his personal prowess and his martial ardour in every action in which he had been engaged, was sure to be gladly welcomed In due course of time his peeuliar talents were called into action The Sultan bestowed on hun the government of Ghúr and the A n 1749 Núkden * country, lying east of Heiát, on the southwest limits of the Palapumisun or Hazára range of mountains The inhibitants, like the more numerous Attempts to tribe of Haviras, who hved farther to the east, in the Hazards and hills that he between these districts and Kabul, were a Nukderis, rude and barbaious race of highlanders, who regarded the lowlands around them as their inheritance, and who, in their incursions, not only plundered the cattle and property of the neighbouring cultivators of the soil, but robbed travellers and the caravans of merchants, whom they intercepted while proceeding on their way from one city to another, and especially such as passed between Herát and Kandahár The booty so acquired they cairied off into their mountain recesses, where they defied the arm of regular government Near as their territory lay to the capital they had baffled all former attempts to reduce them to order

* Mem of Báber, pp 20-24, Tarikhe-Sind, MS fols 72, 73, Briggs's Ferishta, vol 11 p 432

No sooner was Zúlnún appointed to the government, than he hastened to his command, attended by a small

s 4

* The Nukderis, called by D'Ohson Negoudariens, are described as having been originally wandering Moghuls, who used to range in Sistán, but who were sent by Gházan to Irak Ajemi, where they had summer and winter statious assigned to them Being, however, accused of continuing their old freebooting practices, and molested in consequence, they moved away without permission, and placed themselves under the protection of Melik Fakred-din of Herát, who employed them against such of his neighbours as he wished to subdue He continued to protect them from the resentment of Gházan D'Ohsson, Hist. des Mongols, tom iv p 193 -6 ed. 1834 The territory assigned them at that time near the Ghuss and the Khilp, they have ever since retained of Ghur, л н 884, repress the band of faithful adherents Followed by a mere hand-BOOK II ful of men, he fearlessly attacked and defcated large bodies of the restless Hazára and Nukderi tribes, wherever they were to be found IIIs personal courage, and extraordinary bodily powers, astonished and daunted the rude mountaineers IIc often had not more than seventy or cighty of his trusty followers along with hun, when he surprised them in their tents, slew their war-When repeated and riors, and diove off their flocks bloody discomfitures, in which they found themselves vanquished at their own warfare, had produced the natural effect on their minds, he followed up his measures of hostility by a steady course of conciliatory kindness The tribes, when thus coulted by the rough and hardy hero whom they dreaded and admired, willingly transferred to him they treaded and admitted, with ingly transferred to him their services He, in the end, not only reduced them to order (and they never were kept in such order as by him), but so completely se-cured their attachment, that those barbarous tribes ever after, and under all changes of fortune, continued the unshaken supporters of Zúlnún and his family.

Gets the government of Zemín-D'awer, A H 888, A D 1483;

and of Farrah His success in these difficult operations, which occupied him three or four years, was so acceptable to the Sultan, that he soon after bestowed on him the government of Zemín-Dáwer This province, which stretches from the roots and valleys of the Hazára mountains, along the right bank of the Helmend till its union with the Arghandab river, which joins it from Kandahár, is one of the richest and most fertile countries in these parts To this was added the district of Farrah, to the west, which lies between the hills and Sistán He also extended his influence over the Germsír (or warm country), a province composed of the deep and narrow tract of low hot lands, lying chiefly along the lower course of the Helmend

By these conquests, and by his influence with the Hazára and Kipchák tribes, who dwelt in the hills and wilds of Kanduhár the power of this able and successful envr in cluct had become very formidable. The fame of his exploits and of his conquests, regularly reached Herát, and were it first so agreeable to the Khákán, that he honoured Zulanin with the Lugh, or horsetial standard.⁹ or bunner, which marked a high rank among the no bunner, which marked a high rank among the no further the bunner of the second progress and growing reputation naturally excited alarm in a geolous court, in an age when every successful leader ained at independence. He was recalled, and, necular his plans not being yet ripe for execution, he at once obvide and appeared in the presence of his sovereign, where his respectful and prodent behaviour went far to g in the Khakán's good opinion, and to remove the doubts that had been entert uned of his fidehty †

At this period, the intrigues in the royal Huram had Parties at Herat given rise to several parties at the court of Herát Bidi (7-20m in Mirza, the eldest son of the Kliakán, was filled with apprelicusions by no means groundless, lest his fither, acting under the influence of Khadija Begun, his favourite wife, might be induced to prefer to the succession, her son Muzuffer Husem Mirza, who wis doo the Sultur's favourite child, though, according to Biber, who knew him personally, he had nothing in las mind or manners to justify this partiality 1 Zulnum who six the misteridy footing on which he was placed at the court of Herat, rather encouraged the discontent of the elder brother, whom he gamed over, and particularly attached to humself By this prince's advice, Zulunn now discharged all his followers, icnounced every appearance of state, and lived in a private and retired manner, still, however, showing hunself from time to time in the presence This quiet and pundent dememour produced its effect. At the end of about one year, his situation was at length taken BOOK II into consideration, in the loyal council; on which occasion Badi-ez-zemán, who was present, but afraid to _ appear directly to favour Zúlnún, proposed that he should forthwith be appointed to the government of Kandahár, which was then vacant, a situation which, he said, hardly any officer of rank would willingly accept of, as the climate had always hitherto, in the course of two or three years, cut off those who held it And he added that, should the same fate attend the new governor, it might only relieve his majesty of a subject whom he could spare *, while, if he survived, means never would be wanting of reducing him to his duty The proposal was approved of , the abilities of Zúlnun appointed Zúlnún, for quieting the province, were undoubted, to Kandaand the Mirza was commissioned to inform him of this hár mark of imperial favour, and to invest him, on the part of the Khákan, his father, with a dress of honour, accompanied by a horse richly caparisoned, a standard, and kettle-drum, marks of high distinction, usually granted on such an occasion Zúlnún, sensibly alive to this active proof of the Mirza's friendship, granted him a writing by which he bound himself to support him with life and soul, and to attend on his call, without hesitation or delay, under any circumstances whatever,-evidently implying, even against the Khákán himself

 Rather constail, it being made of the tail of the kit is or mountain of Buber, p 186 cow
 Tarikhe Sind fol 79,71 Mem of Buber, p 186
 Mcm of Buber, p 170

Leaves Herát privately But Zúlnún had not yet had his audience of leave, and the suspicions of his fidelity, which had been evaded rather than quieted, might still prevent his being allowed to take possession of his government Aware of this, he lost no time in despatching orders to his eldest son, Shah Beg, and several of his most trusty Arghún and Terkhán officers, to join him immediately in Khorásán Their arrival, as they might

* The malady so fatal at Kan- Tarikhe-Sind, fol dahár was the Marze-Vibà See be considered in the light of hostages for his fidelity, CHAP III tended in some degree to remove suspicions of any sinister intention Still, however, delays were interposed by the suspicions of the Khákán, and the dise orders of Kandahán went on increasing, till at length the princes his sons and the chief ministers were compelled to represent to hun, that the troubled state of the province most in gently required the presence of a governor, a representation which was speedily followed by an intimation to Zúlnún that it would be necessary for him instantly to set out by himself, leaving his son and suite behind him at the court Delighted with the pretext which this sudden notice afforded for his departure, he secretly, without taking leave, set out by night, accompanied by his son, his nobles and troops, but leaving all his heavy baggage and servants, and, having had everything previously prepared, hastened with all possible speed towards his government Nothing was known of his deputure foi several days, when an officer sent to Zúlnún's house, to desire him to put off his departure till the festival of the Nuióz or vernal equinox was over, reported, on his return, that Zúlnún had already set out, with his faimly, but that his servants, camels, baggage, and equipage of every de-scription, were still at his house When some of the courthers observed, that such being the case he would speedily return, "No," said the aged monarch, "I have seen Zúlnún for the last time"

The state of affairs in the court of Herát inade it Arrival in Kandahár advisable rather to overlook than to punish this insult A firmán followed Zúlnún, confirming him in the government of Kandahár, but i equining his presence at -. court The messenger overtook him at Fairah He received the mandate with affected devotion and hu mility, declaring that it was the most earnest wish of his heart, after visiting his family, who were only two stages off, to accompany the messenger back to the BOOK II foot of the throne He, however, went on to Kandahár, where he assembled a council of his relations, his tribesmen, and the principal chiefs attached to his interest, and laid before them the imperial requisition, which all of them, of course, insisted on his declining To their instances he affected unwillingly to yield. The messenger, who was present, was soon after honourably dismissed with rich presents and a respectful reply and the Sultan well saw that no hopes were left of his finding an obedient or faithful subject in Zúlnún *

Nature of his territory

The Arghun chief now applied himself, for some time, to the task of consolidating his authority, and of organising his military resources These were ample, but the great diversity both in the physical structure of his dominions, which stretched over savage mountains, rich plains, and sandy desert, and in the manners and habits of the tribes by which they were peopled, which in general were barbarous and unsettled, of various races and speaking different tongues, made the task no easy In this business he was ably assisted by his son one Shah Shujaa Beg, who, when only a boy, had accompanied him in his most perilous forays and expeditions, in which he had displayed an ardent but regulated valour They extended their territory to the south, over the wild tracts of plain and rugged and broken mountains that he in that direction, reducing Pishín, Shál, and Mustung, as far as the very borders of the Balúch country, and of Síwistán Rebellion of Badi ezzemán, A 11 902, A 11 1497, who takes

The intrigues in the Haram of Sultan Husein Mírza terminated at length in the rebellion of Badi-ez-zemán Mírza That prince, who soon after his revolt was defeated by his father, fled, as we have seen, to Kunduz to Khosrou Shah, then in the height of his power, whence, after a short stay, he crossed the mountain to take refuge with Zúlnún, by whom he was received with

* Taril he-Sind fol 75, 76, Briggs's Ferishta, vol iv p 452 every mark of distinction, and, among other offerings, CHAP III. received from him a present of forty thousand sheep at one time He was entertained with royal pomp, and zuhun ere long married the daughter of Ziilnin Beg, a connection which drew closer than ever the bonds of union between the Prince and his supporter In the meanwhile the Prince's son, Muhammed Momín Mírza, who had been driven to revolt in Asterábád, having been defeated on the same day with his father, was taken prisoner, and carried to Herát There he was closely confined in the castle of Ekhtiár-ed-dín, and soon after put to death, by an order said to have been procured by the favourite Begum from her uxorious husband, while in a state of intoxication *

Sultan Husein Mírza, offended at the princely re-sultan ception given to his rebellious son by a subject of his rules own, marched into his territories with a formidable handahar, army, for the purpose of chastising him Zúlnún, ^{n 904} seeing no hope of success from open resistance in the field, ordered the whole gram, cattle, and provisions that lay in the line of march of the advancing army, to be carried into the strong forts of the country, and, making a desert of his own territory, presented only a barren waste to the invader He appointed his eldest son, Shah Beg, to defend Kandahár, and Muhammed Mokím, another of his sons, to guard the Zemín-Dáwer; while he himself retired into the fort of Pesheng[†], and Badı-ez-zemán into another stronghold. As the Sultan advanced, by Farrah to the Germsír and the Zemín-Dáwer, he found no enemy to encounter, but at the same time nothing was procurable by which he could subsist his troops Scarcity began to prevail, and famine was about to follow To retreat, through a bare

* Babers Mem pp 44 46 Tarikhe Sind, fol 78-81

+ Probably Sira Kila, or Kila Abdalla, in Pishin near the junction of the Lora and Surkhab He is said to have rendered it so strong that not even a pismire could crawl into it -Tar Sind · ...

waste with troops exhausted as his were, was impos-sible, and his great army was on the point of dispersing BOOK 1L sible, and his great army was on the point of dispersing to shift every man for himself, when he was saved by the _ timidity of the governor of Bist*, on the Helmend, who surrendered the fort entrusted to his care, on the very first summons Had he held out only for two days, the run of the imperial army was inevitable In this fort the provisions that had been driven in from the Takes Bist surrounding country were found collected, and the stores which it contained enabled the Sultan and his Forced to retreat. army to retrace their steps to the capital, through the wasted plams they had so recently traversed †

In the early part of the ensuing spring the Khákán allowed a number of his soldiers to return for a short л н 903. A D 1498 tune to their homes, to refresh themselves after this Attempt to campaign, and to prepare for another which he had re solved to make, while he himself, in his camp at the Auleng-Nishin near Herát, indulged at his case in all the usual pleasures and amusements of a voluptuous court But he had to do with an active enemy News of the careless way in which he lay having reached the Germsír, Badi-cz-zemán and Shah Beg formed the plan surprise the Khákán of taking him by surprise. Accompanied by three thousand chosen horse, in five or six days, they reached Sebzáwár, where their approach was discovered by Ferídún Husein Mírza, one of the Khákán's sons, who A 11 903, Shaban, л п 1498, sent messenger after messenger to alarm his father The news spread consternation in Auleng-Nishin Orders were despatched to Herát, to put the city in a state of defence, and the charge of it was committed to the celebrated Amír Alı Shír, who combined in his own person the characters of a distinguished soldier, poet, and statesman A ditch was hastily begun to be drawn round the camp, and strong bodies of troops posted in advance Meanwhile, scouts and expresses

> * Or Bost Υ

† Baber's Mem p 62, Tarible Sind, VIS fol 80, 81

April

in rapid succession continued to bring word that the CHAP III inviders were histening on without slackening rem, and it was the general belief, that, had they gone straight Fans, on, while the alarm and confusion still prevailed, mstend of hilting it Isferiun, a whole mght, to rest themsclves they must have succeeded in their attempt In the course of the next morning two considerable bodies of men from different guarters unexpectedly joined the imperial camp, so that the invaders, when they came near it, saw, from the numbers and state of preparation of their chemy that there wis not a hope of success, and hastened without loss of time, to make good their retreat which they effected, by their own speed, or by the confusion into which their unexpected approach had thrown their enemy *

To atone for this disappointment, Zúlnún and the The confe-derates in Prince soon after rused an army, composed of all the vale khor military strength of Kandahar, Zemm-Dawer, and a ⁴m Ghur besides a body of Hazáris, Nukderis, and Kup-chíks, ind entered Khorásan plundering and laying waste the country. The Khakán was prepring to meet them in the field, when a negotiation was opened, by some santly men, the usual mediators of the time A request was made on the part of the Prince to have Sistan granted to hun This the Khákan percuptorily refused, ind hostilities were about to recommence, when Mir Ali Shir, who was a personal friend of the Khakan, hastening from Herat to the curp, prevailed upon him racifica-to agree to the terms, and to grant Sistán and Farrah to Badi-ez-zeman, after which the two armies separated. and the Prince proceeded to his new principality † But the causes of dissension lay too deep to be Theragain Invade

- instantly removed No sooner lad Sultan Husem khorasán, marched from his capital for Asteribid, to quell the

+ Ind of S-fer, v H 904, Begg Tarikhe Sind fol 81-83 Oct A D 1498 Tarikhe Sind, fol Babers Mcm p 62 8 .--- 85

rebellion of another of his sons, than the Prince and BOOK II Zúlnún, availing themselves of his absence, once more issued forth at the head of an army, chiefly composed of Hazáras and other hill-tribes; drove off the cattle, and ruined the property of the Amirs in the interest of the Khákán, and of his favourite son Mozeffer, and approached Herát Mír Alı Shír, who had been left governor of the place, had used every means that skill and activity could employ for fortifying and provisioning the city Zúlnún, leaving Badi-ez-zemán with the bulk of the army at Ubeh, pushed on nearer to the capital, when various persons, who yet remained in the adjoining villages, waited on him with congratulatory offerings, and informed him, that, several armies were on their march from different quarters to protect the capital, and were at that moment near at hand. Zúlnún despatched an express to communicate this information to the Prince, who joined him in Likal-khána The imperial troops issuing from Baghát*, Zúlnún-attacked them in the Auleng-Níshín, and victory de-clared for the confederates They now encamped at the Auleng-Níshín, the usual camp of the Khákán, but soon moved to Púl-Málán, and summoned the Beslege city Mír Alı Shír, however, faithful to his trust, de-clared his determination to hold it out to the last ex-Herát. tremity, and, during a siege of forty days, bravely repelled all attacks of the enemy By this time, news of the emperor's approach was received at Herát Mír Alı Shír, who was attached to Badı-ez-zemán, imme-diately wrote to inform him of the fact, advising him to raise the siege He accordingly moved away to Púl-Sálár, and thence to the Murgháb, where he was soon after joined by the force of Badghis and Chichektú,

> * I know not whether there is a suburb called Baghát, at Herat, or, if the name is merely applied to the collection of suburban houses and

" gardens" of the rich Hirwis

Pul-Malán 18 the name of the river that passes near Herát, and probably of a village on 11

272

ŝ

and by Shah Beg with a select body of men from Kan- cuvr in dahar. The governor of Mery having refused to surrender, Shih Beg, with his mount incers, assaulted the Take place with such fury, that, after an attack maint uned from morning till noon, that important place was carried

Meanwhile the Khakan had returned to Heift, but Perce con the army which he had brought from Asterabid was quite disorganised, from the fatigue of a long continued and hurried murch, and he found has other troops dispirited by their life discomfiture The Prince, too, had prohibly a strong pirty in his fither - council Sultan Ilusem begin to incline to perce, and a trenty was in due time concluded by which the province of Balkh, which Bidi-ez-zem in had formerly enjoyed, was bestowed on hun anew with the title of Humayun Khákám, while Sist in, the province he now held, was inde over to Amr Sult in Ah, a brother of Zulnun

A circumstance soon occurred, however, which showed how unwillingly this sperifice was made by the Khakan The governor of the fort of Lash, a dependency of Sistin,-being discontented with Sultin Ah, his new master, - sent privitely to the Khakan to inform hun, that such was the general feeling in his favour that, if one of the young princes were to appear in Sistan, the whole country would at once declare for him In con-A 11 909 sequence of this invitation, Ibn Husem Mirza, one of A n 1503. the Klick in's sons, was despatched into Sist in with two thousand horse - He advanced and stationed hunself at a town called Uki But he had to do with an active chemy Zulnun had heard of his motions, and instantly pushed on towards him, accompanied by his son, Shah Beg He got near the Mirza's camp in the morning, while he was yet isleep, and his troops dispersed to plunder or forage The Mirza, when roused, advanced Defeated. bravely to meet the enemy, with about three hundred of his cavalry, who happened to be still around him He had hardly moved off his ground, when Zúlnún, with a vor т 1

Merv

cluded

Invision of Sistan

portnice received an ample increase. He became the cuvr m prime munster and chief adviser of Badi-ez-zemán Mirza A P 1507 during his short and divided sovereignty in Khorasan Zuinun be Considerable additions were then made to his govern- comes a prime ment especially on the skirts of the mountains on the ministerat side of the Herit We ne told by Biber, who knew Herat hun, that, though a brave, frunk and hardy soldier, he wanted compass of mind was protonnelly ignorant, very deficient in judgment superstitions, and ridiculously open to flattery llis weakness in this respect was partly the cause of his death - When he was minister at Herit, and the Urbek invision engrossed the thoughts of all, some servile holy men and Mullas assured him that they had had communication with the celestial spheres and that the glorious title of "Lion of God' * had been bestowed on him by the divine decree that he was predestined to defeat the Uzbeks, and to take the whole of them prisoners Zulnún, who was a slave to the superstation of his day returned thinks to the Almighty for having been selected as the instrument of so noble in achievement, the ecrimity of which he unlosit itingly believed, so that when Sheibani, pushing into Khoi isan, cut off the communication of  $_{A,H}$  913 the Mirz is with each other, and defeated the troops  A,p  1507 which fell in his way, Zulnún resolutely kept his ground, with about a hundred and fifty horse, expecting the fulfilment of the prophecy Sheibam's profane barbarrans, however, speedily surrounded, and, by munchse superiority of numbers, disarmed hun and his followers Ilis head was after wards struck off, to be presented to Is stain the Khan Such was the end of Zúlmin's active life This sons succeeded him in his extensive territories, in which he had nearly become independent †

When the Arghún brothers, —his sons Shah Shujaa ilis cons Deg and Mokím, —hy the progress of Sheibáni's success, with Baber,

Hereber Alla

[|] Hiber's Mem pp 186-222

saw the whole family of Sultan Husein Mirza dis-BOOK II persed or slain, and the throne of Herát occupied by a A p 1507 Tartai chief, who had luther to laid prostrate whatever opposed him, they naturally looked around for some one able to protect them in the hour of danger, and Báber presented hunself as at once the nearest and most efficient ally within their reach, recommended perhaps the more from the influence of ancient opinion, being now the only remnant of the house of the great Tannui that preserved even the appearance of power While the Uzbeks were busy overrunning Khorásán, the brothers, he tells us, repeatedly despatched ambassadors to hun, with letters containing humble professions of service and submission, and he adds, that Mokím, m one of these letters, explicitly called upon hum to hasten to his assistance The extent of this hum to hasten to his assistance submission and invitation it is not easy to ascertain In the alarm into which they had been thrown, they may have used terms of humility of which they afterwards repented, while, on the other hand, Báber may not have been unwilling to give to the submissive style of courtesy common in eastern letters and verbal communications, a literal interpretation, as implying a real intention to submit to his authority, which was not intended However that may be, with all the marches for ardour and impatience of youth and ambition, he listened to the call, taking it in the sense that he desired, and instantly obeyed

We have seen that the civil wars, which had changed the government of Kabul and Ghazni so often in the course of a few years, joined to the march and ravages of armies, had made the summer after Báber's return from Khorásán one of great scareity and distiess throughout his kingdom But it was not his dominions alone that at this time suffered from the lavages of war As he advanced on his march towards Kandahái, he was met at Ghazni by numbers of fugitives, the wreck of the army of Khorásán, and by some of the females of the royal house of Herát, cuvr m and among others his own afhanced bride, who were a 1507 flying from that capital At Kilát* he came upon a ciriym of Indian merchants, whom, contrary to the advice of his officers, but following his own mviriable practice and in compliance with sound feelings of instice, which in the end comeide with those of sound policy, is Biber found on this and on other occasions, he did not proceed to plunder as they expected though, impelled by his necessities, he levied a An 913, contribution from them After he had passed Kilat, * 1 1507 Khan Mirza and Abdal Rizak Marza his consins, who had both lately been lus rivals, and sat on the throne of Kibnl, joined lum, with many other persons of importance, who were flying before the Uzbeks - He now despatched envoys to inform the Arghum brothers of his approach calling upon them to concert measures along with him ignist Sheibim Khim T

But the policy of these princes had undergone an The sr-important change Soon after his victory, Sheibám submit to had turned his views to Kindahar, and the other pos- Sheibant sessions of the Khakan in that quarter He had even advanced by Furrah, as fulls the German, to enforce his climis, when in embissy from Shih Beg reached his chup tendering the submission of the Arghnus, and offering on their part to read the public prayer and strike the com m his nune Shcibam, satisfied with this readmess to acknowledge his sovereighty, accepted their submission, and marched in another direction, to reduce the other portions of the wide extended kingdom that had fallen under his power, as the fruit of his victories To Baber's requisition, therefore, they returned such mswers as showed that they had no intention of submitting to hun as their lawful lord On the contrary, they affected to treat him as an equal

- Now Kilite Ghilji - Tar Resh f 160, kerishta, v u † Biber's Mem pp 221, 225, pp 26, 27

BOOK IL

л р 1507

Battle of Kandahár

Shah Beg

Kandahár

the spoil.

i defeated

Báber's proposals for a compromise being thus re-pulsed, he prepared for action, and, as his army was not numerous, he proceeded with much caution He directed his march along the course of the streams that flow towards Kandahár, till he came near Baba Hasan Abdal and Khalishák He next moved to a meadow near Kandahár, but dıd not thınk of engaging there, the ground being broken by villages and trees As his troops, in the march from Khilát, had suffered much from hunger, nearly a half of them had gone out to forage and to collect sheep, cattle, and what else was required At this moment, the Arghúns were found to be advancing on them Baber instantly put his men in order, without waiting for the forageis His whole number of regular troops was only about two thousand, of whom one half were absent The Arghúns, who had at least four or five thousand regularly armed, exceeded them many times in number, and had probably expected to come upon them unprepared as well as scat-tered Báber says, that he never had his men better disciplined and trained than at that time They not only stood their ground against the superior force of the enemy, who were commanded by Shah Beg in person, having under him officers of great experience, but charged them in turn, and in the end broke through and put them to flight, and, such was their success, that they cut off the communication of Shah Beg with the fort,---neither he nor his brother being able to regain the town, which soon surrendered to the victor, with surrender« all its treasures and the families of the vanquished Shah Beg fled to his southern possessions of Shál and Mustung, in the desert, while Mokim retired westward to Zemin-Dáwer The spoil of the city was magnifi-Richness of cently rich The wealth, collected in the course of the long and fortunate life of Zúlnún Beg, was brought out and liberally divided by Bábei among his followers The number of hoises, cainels, and inules, the quantity of rich silk stuffs and fine linen, of tents with awnings cuar in of velvet, and other rich elothes, besides gold and silver A D 1507 com wis minuense. To save the trouble of counting the money and specie, it was divided by weight, and enriched ill the army. Båber bestowed Kandahár upon his brother, N isn Mirza, and then hastened brek with his irmy to Kabul Sheiban Khan was too yigilant an enemy, to render it safe to higer needlessly so near hun *

Accordingly, Biber had not retained more than a shelbant week to Kabul, when he len ucd that Sheib ini wis busily marches to employed in besieging Kindahai When Mokim, after his defeit, retried to Zemin-Dawer, he sent to invite Sheibini to his succour. Thit active prince, without loss of time, historied by forced inarches through the hill country between Herat and Kandahir, in hopes of surprising Baber, whom he trusted to find yet indulgmg hunself in the conquered city, free from eare, in the full empyment of his victory. This plan was in part defeated by the signeity of Kásun Beg, Báber's old and twourste munster, who had advised the speedy march biek to Kibul, but Sheibam Ind siege to Kandahár, which he in which Baber's brother, Nasir Muza, was shut up

This news filled the young Sultan, and his adherents, Marmor with well-founded almin. The power and talents of Baber Sheibim were too well known to them, by long and prinful experience, and their own workness was too visible, to admit of a hope that he could be resisted in the open field, in the present state of Baber's affairs The conquest of Khorasan had added immensely to the previous power and reputation of the terrible Uzbek At a council,-held for the purpose of deciding what course ought to be pursued in this difficult emergency, -such was the alarm diffused by Sheibáni's prowess and power, that it was considered as hopeless even to at-

279

selze«

^{*} Biber's Mem pp 220-230, Lankhe-Sind fl 91-94

BOOK_II

who marches for India.

лн 913, Jemádl I ло 1507, September tempt the defence of the country of Kábul, and it was, therefore, judged to be most advisable to escape the coming tempest, by trying the fate of an inroad either into Badakhshán or India Opinions weie divided between the two, but Báber's wishes, which turned towards India, decided the question Leaving, in Kábul, his cousin Abdal Rizák, the late king, he marched down the Kábul river for the Indus To leave his rival master of the capital, may look like the dictate of listless despair But he probably thought, that the long connection of that prince's ancestors with the kingdom afforded the best chance, when the great body of his own troops were withdrawn, of uniting in his favour the force of the country, and Baber may have trusted to his own talents, and to the ascendency which he had gained over his rival by success, for recovering the throne, at a future time, in case of the retreat of the Uzbeks Yet the influence regained at this period by Abdal Rızák may reasonably be supposed to have had some connection with the revolution which soon after followed in his favour

by Khurd-Kábul,

When Báber began his march towards the low countries on the side of Lamghán, the robber tribes, who possess the intervening passes, seeing him apparently abandon his lately acquired kingdom, and in full march for the Indus, following their usual policy, attempted to obstruct his progress, in the very line of march which has since become so memorable by the disasters of a British army "We proceeded on our route by way of Khurd-Kabul," says Baber, " on reaching Súrkh Rebát, we passed Kurúk Sái by the hill-pass The Afgháns who inhabit between Kábul and Lamghán are robbers and plunderers even in peaceable times Fervently do they pray to God for such times of confusion as now prevailed, but rarely do they get them When they understood that I had abandoned Kábul and was curr m marching for Hindustán, their usual insolence was in-  $\frac{1}{4}$  p 1507 - ere ised tentold Even the best disposed innong them were -9then bent on muschief, and things came to such lengths that the morning we muched from Jagdáhk, the Afghans, through whose country we were to pass,-such as the Khizer-Khul, the Shimn khail*, the Khulu, and the Khugiam, -determined to obstruct our march through the Kot il (or hill-pass) of Jagdálik, and drew up and Jag dalfk on the hill that hes on the north, beiting their drums, brandishing their swords, and rusing terrific shouts As soon as we had monited. I ordered the troops to ascend the hill and ittack the enemy, each in the direction nemest to him They accordingly advanced, and making then will by any valley, ravine, or other approach they could discover, got near them, upon which the Afghuns, ifter stunding an instant, took to flight, withont even shooting in arrow. After driving off the Afghins, we reached the top of the ascent " + Descending to the district of Nangenhar, he halted before the fort of Admipur, now Jelulabid, a nime which has become memorable in the annals of British India Here Baber separated his army into four divisions, which he sent in different directions, to plunder and lay waste the country of the Afghans, who at that period seem not to have acknowledged even a nominal subjection to the erown of K ibul In these operations he passed the time, waiting for news from the west As the alarm gradually subsided, he sent back some troops to Kábul, while he proceeded, hinself, to survey the country upon the Cheghánserái iiver, and to plunder the inhabitants 1

* Little Kabul

He was not long of receiving news which determined shelbani his return to Kábul Sheibáni Khan had no sooner takes Kandahar, > appeared before Kaudahár, than the city was given up,

* Or, Himu-khail † Babers Mem p 232 ‡ Bibers Mem pp 232, 233, Tarikhe Sind f 95

BOOK II л в 1507 -9 besieges the citadel, which capitulates,

Shag Beg

recovers Kandabar

Báber returns to

Kábul

Badakh-

shán

Násir Mírza and the garrison retiring into the citadel This fortiess was vigorously assailed, inines were run under the defences, and sprung, and the place must . infallibly have fallen, in the course of a few days more, when Sheibáni learned that the fort of Nirehtu *, east of Herát, in which he had left the females of his family, had been surprised by a sudden rising in that neigh-bourhood Without delay he made Násir Mírza proposals for an accommodation, which were readily agreed to, when he hurned back towards Heiát Násir, who had found his situation in Kandahár too full of difficulty to give him any prospect of successfully maintaining himself there, was glad to yield up the citadel, and retreated to Ghazni By Sheibáni's orders, and perhaps as a consequence of the capitulation, the Arghuns were immediately restored to the possession of both the town and citadel, and all the rest of the province submitted to them once more †

Though it was now the middle of winter, Báber, on receiving the news of these occurrences, returned to Kábul, and abandoned the idea of advancing into Hindustán He gave Ghaznı to Násır Mírza, and Nangenhár Khan Mírza sets out for and other districts of Kábul to Abdal Rizák Mírza. Khan Mírza, when Báber marched from Kábul for Hindustán, had, with his permission, set out for Badakhshán, in hopes of gaining for himself a settlement in that country He was accompanied by a number of his friends and followers, and in particular by his grandmother, Shah Begum, who was a puncess of the ancient royal family of that little kingdom

Báber takes the title of Padshah

It was at this time that Báber assumed the title of Padshah, or Emperor ‡ Till then, as he himself in-

* Nurehtu or Kaliún was a strong fortress, not far from Herat, in the Bádghis district It was situated on the top of a rock, and, in order to reach it, it is said to have been necessary to march along a path a league and a half in length, and so  $\sim$ narrow that two men could not walk abreast. Hist des Mongols, vol 1 p 242

+ Baber's Mem p 233

‡ Many descendants of Taimur

forms us, none of the family of Tamur Beg, even when CHAP III. on the throne, had assumed any other title than that of Mírza His reasons for this assumption he does not explain But, as Sultan Husein Mírza, who had long been regarded as the head of the family of Tamur, was dead, and his children slain or dispersed, and, as he himself was the only individual of that great House who now filled a throne, it is probable that he imagined it might be advantageous to his interest, as it was flattering to his vanity, to assume some title that might mark the high eminence on which he stood as the head of so illustrious a dynasty *

But fate was not yet tired of persecuting Báber Discontent Not long after his return to his capital, he was involved of Bábers Moghuls. in new dangers He had owed his success in Kabul chiefly to the troops who had revolted from Khosrou Shah, and joined him, as he travelled with a handful of lagged and wayworn followers, from Kalatigin to the Hindú-kúsh mountains The most powerful body that had come over to him consisted of some tribes of Moghuls, who, under their native chiefs, had for some time possessed a great ascendency near Hissár and Kunduz He had besides been joined by some unsettled Turkomans, and others, from the same quarter All these, under Khosrou Shah, had lived nearly at free quarters, and had been unlimited loids of the country and its wealth Báber, who during the whole course of his life observed a mild but steady discipline, and was scrupulous in defending his subjects from oppression, after taking these bands into his service, had upon many occasions been compelled to check their marauding habits, and to punish their licentiousness had assumed the name of Sultan, but, that title being often used by secondary Tartar chiefs, and their sons, Baber probably considered it as inferior or common Khahan c Mansur, which was the title employed by Sultan Husein Mírza, nearly corresponds with that of Emperor

* Baber s Mem p 233

with considerable severity Whatever was the cause, however, they became tired of their new service and new master, — no extraordinary event at a period in which the common ties even of regular allegiance seem BOOK 11 to have been loosened in a singulai degree, in all the A. D 1508 countries between the Sirr, the Caspian, and the Indus It appears that these Moghul chiefs, with the leaders of the Kundúzis and Hissáris, had not only resolved to renounce their allegiance to Baber, but had joined in a plot for his destruction Then plan was to restore Abdal-Rízák Mírza, the late king of Kábul, to his throne They conand dominions, and, besides this, to put him in possesagainst sion of Kunduz and Khutlán, on the other side of the mountains They looked back with regret to those iich countries from which most of them had lately fled, and which they had ruled so long, under the authority of Khosrou Shah, so much to their own comfort, so little to that of the wretched inhabitants The conspirators and their followers amounted at first to two or three thousand excellent soldiers, who were lying in the suburbs of Kábul, and in the neighbourhood Báber's army was encamped not far from Kabul, after a successful expedition against the Mehmend Afgháns IIe had been repeatedly put upon his guard, and hints of what was going on had been given him But, with that frankness and freedom froin suspicion which were a part of his character, he had refused to credit the reports He was therefore taken by surprise A purty of the conspirators had been placed in ambush to seize him, while he was on his way, by night, from the Chai Bagh palace, without the city, to another within the walls • He made his escape with difficulty, and reached the camp When the revolt of the Moghul chiefs was known there, the effect produced by the news was most unfavourable * Probably about Sefer or Rebi 1508) (A II 914, June or July, A D

284

spire

him.

.= ---

were panic-struck, not knowing the extent of the defection, others were probably connected with the disaffected In the course of the night following that on which the revolt of the Moghuls became known, so many both of the officers and men disappeared, that, in the morning, he could not muster more than five hundred horse It was not personal fear or disaffection alone that led to this general defection Many, even of his bravest and most attached troops, deserted and repaired to Kábul, to be near their families, anxious to save them from the outrages to which the wives and children of such as remained with the Emperor were likely to be exposed from the unbridled licence of the rebellious Moghuls The camp bazár was plundered *

The details of Báber's contest with the revolted Bábers valour chieftains have not been preserved His own commentailes are interrupted at the moment of the breaking out of the conspinacy, and an hiatus of eleven years follows, which we can but imperfectly supply from any other quarter. It appears that, in spite of the reduced state of his force, he lost no time, but, with his accustomed spirit, marched straight against the insurgents This was one of his most desperate rencounters, and much of the final success that crowned his arms was due to his singular skill in the use of his sword, to his bodily strength, and to his personal gallantry After a long and desperate combat, which was fought hand to hand, he broke and routed the foe Bábei, in that action, is said to have engaged, in single combat, five different champions of the enemy most emment for their prowess, and to have slain or _ put them all to flight in succession † His heroism and

* Baber s Mem pp 233-235 † The names of the five champions are given, with some variation, by different authors They were Alı Beg Shebgur, Muhammed Alı Sheibani (or Sıstánı), Názer Beháder Uzbek, Yakub Beg Baber-Jeng, and Abdalla Sef-sheken (FeA D 1508 The revolt quelled

Affairs of Badakh-

shan

BOOK II

desperation appalled his enemies, and reanimated his followers Success crowned his arms The Moghuls were defeated, after a long and severe struggle, and _ fled from Kábul Abdal Rizák, his rival, fell into his hands in the battle, and was pardoned But, having soon after entered into new eabals, and again risen in arms, he was seized and put to death, and Báber once more reigned the undisputed sovereign of Kábul and Ghazni *

While he thus established himself more firmly than ever in his new dominions, his cousin, Khan Mírza, had succeeded in mounting the throne of Badakhshán It has been mentioned, that he set out from Kábul for that country, when Sheibáni Khan was besieging Kandahár, and Báber, doubtful to which side to tuin, had finally resolved on marching for the Indus Badakhshán had long been in a state of confusion, and various competitors had aimed at the sovereignty After the expulsion of Khosrou Shah, the Uzbeks had attempted to 7 conquer it, and failed Násir Mírza, Báber's youngest brother, had been more fortunate, having been joined by several chiefs, he was acknowledged as king, and for a short period governed the country, but, as we have seen, was finally expelled by the Amírs, for alleged misgovernment, not many months before this time The troubles still continued, and Shah Begum, who was the daughter of Shah Sultan Muhammed, King of Badakhshán, incited her grandson, Khan Mírza, the son of her own daughter by the late Sultan Mahmud Mírza of Samaikand and Hissár, to try his foitune in her father's hereditary dominions Shah Begum was a woman of ambition Her father's family boasted of their descent from Alexander the Great She con-rishta and Kháfi Khan) Most authors speak of them as having been all slam, Mirza Haider says, slain or put to flight * Far Resh f 161, Brigga B Ferishta, vol 11 p 29, Kháfi Khan, f 20

tended that they had swaved the sceptre of Badakh- char in shin for three thousand years, that, though heiself a An 1508 female and so merpable of filling the throne, the same memority did not extend to her grandson, Khan Mirzi, and that beyond doubt, her countrymen, who were devotedly attached to their ancient a ree of princes, would gladly welcome him - Baber had given his consent, and Mun Muzi set out, - recomprised by his Khin grandmother, as well as by Mehr-mgar Khamm, his unit, who in spite of her nephew Biber's advice and remonstrances also misisted on accompanying him

They found the country nearly partitioned into three its divided parts Muza Abibekei, the ruler and tyiant of Káshghar had seized all the Upper Hazár is of Badakhshan", the low grounds and the plun towards Kunduz, the richest part of the country, were in the occupation of the Uzbeks, while, one Razi-ed-din, a Musulman hereticit, who had been called in from Sist in, possessed a large portion of the intermediate country, especially towards Khuthan The portion that still remained in

• Hez irajattalådest. The upper districts in Badal lish in were called Hazdrer

+ Rizi-cd-din was a Chirigh-1 ush (or lamp-extinguisher) a seet of the Maldudy, or heretics, which is described as the very worst of all heathenisin According to the imputations of their enemies, they held the world to be eternal, and did not believe in the resurrection, or in a future life, they said, that, in the proplicts time it was incumbent on all to follow the ordinances of the law, but that, at the present time, the only duty incumbent on man is > - to study the dietates of sound and honest reason, and to act in conformity to them, that all other commands are futile, that sexual intercourse is not dependent on marriage, nor is kindred a bar to it, whatever by the degree, travellers they put to death to ensure their final sal vation lar Redi f 171 178, 179 There is evidently some inconsistency in this account of their tenets Their name, of Chirighku h, was given from the practice said to exist at their religious meetings, where men and women met, by mgbt, and where, on the lamp being extinguished, indiscriminate indulgence followed This is a calumny with which many different sects have been assailed,---from the time of the ancient Christians, whose love-feasts were so inisrepresented, down to that of the Manielieans and Anabublists. The doctrines of these Malaluda bear a resemblance to those of the Ismailia sect, of which they were probably a division

Mirza sets out to con quer it Ă JE 913. A b 1507

state

BOOF II

A D 1508

the power of the old inhibitants was held by a number of petty chieftains and highlanders, proud of their independence. These chieftains, on the failure of the direct male line of the ancient dynasty, had started up in that rugged and mountainous region, and acted each as an absolute prince, in his own domain of spreading strath or narrow glen, with its adjoining hills Of these the most powerful and the ablest, at this time, was Zobeir of Rágh, a man of no family, but who, by his conduct and valour, soon gained the ascendency over most of the others

Khan Mírza be comes king

Khan Míiza's first entrance into the country was not He had pushed forward to meet with Zopiosperous ben, and to announce the coming of the Beguin, when he fell in with a detachment of the army of Ababeker, which attacked and dispersed his few followers He himself fled, and escaped to Zobeir Shah Begum, his aunt, and the other ladies who followed behind, were surprised and carried off to Ababeker, in whose prisonsthey died, after much civel suffering Zobeir, at first, treated the Mirza with some honour and respect, but soon, finding probably that his presence, deprived of his mother's influence, did not add so much to the means of resisting the invaders as had been expected, ceased to show him even the most ordinary attention, reduced his establishment to two or three servants, and seems to have kept him as a prisoner at large After some tune, however, Yusef Alı Gokuldásh, an old and attached servant of Khan Mírza, formed a conspiracy against Zobeir, whom he assassinated by night, and succeeded in raising his master to the thione of Badakhshán, which he continued to hold for about twelve years, down to the period of his death *

Báber's Mem pp 23,1 12, have died
 Tar Resh f 160, 161 172 178 Briggs's
 197, 198, Ferishta, vol 11, p 3 Tar Resl Kháfi Khan, f 20 He seems to have died A II 926, (A D 1520) Briggs's Ferislita, vol 11 p 37, Tar Resh f 284

Though Khan Mirza thus attained his immediate ob- chap in ject his situation in Badakhshán was far from being envible Most of the inhabitants, even in the districts khan held by Ab ibeker and the Uzbeks, as they detested the Mirza. government of strangers, were indeed seciely attached to him but dried not declare themselves He manit uned hunself in Kila-Zefer*, a strong eastle which had been built by Molvirek Shuh, one of the elucitants of Bad ikhshim, on whose death it fell to Zoben, by whom he was slam, and it had now come to Khan Muzi, who made it his capital. Here, about a year after his conquest, he was visited by two men who afterwards became remarkable in Asiatic history

The one was Sultan Said Khan, a son of the younger Ichin, who, when defeated by his brother, Sultan Mansin, in the descrt, had fled to Andepin, and afterwards, An 914 csciping from Jam Beg Sultan, then the ruler of that A D 1508 kingdom, who had orders from Sheibim to put him to death had made his way to kula-Zefer liere he was received with kindness by his cousin Khin Mirza, who treated him as well as his very straitened encounstances permitted IIc remained with him two or three weeks, and during that short period, a party who were about the Mirzh, and considered him to be a weak man, and ill fitted for governing such a country, offered the sovereignty of Kili-Zefer to the Khin, "not half a loaf,' sixs the historian, "presented on the charger of solution" He declined it, snying, that, to accept their offer would be unjust and unkind to his cousin, who had already endured so many troubles, and continued his journey to Kabul †

Lighteen days after Sultan Said's departure, arrived And by the other fugitive, Mirza II uder When Sheibáni Mirza

* While Mobarek was building it, he was attached by the Uzbeks, whom he defeated , hence the name, Inda-zefer, Castle of vulory IIc was of a family called Mozefferi, which formed another coincidence Tar Reshidi f 172 † far Resh ff 175-176

Visited by

BOOK H Khan made that prince's father be put to death in Khorásán, he despatched orders to his nephew, Obeid-A 10 1608 ulla Sultan of Bokhára, to drown Mírza Harder, then ouly a boy, in the Amu, while on his way to Khorásán Though Obeid-ulla had married Mirza Haider's sister, 'he duist not disobey the dicaded command Intelligence of the father's death had, however, reached one of the great spiritual guides of that city; and, under his direction, Monlána Muhammed Kázi, his disciple, and the tutor of Mirza Haider, exposed himself to all the usk of carrying off the young orphan " He succeeded, and, after many difficulties and dangers, reached Kila-Zefer, where they were received by Khan Mirza, who was Haider's cousin, with as much hospitality and kindness as his poor means allowed. They found him with the name of sovereign, indeed, but surrounded by factious and turbulent men, and with a very narrow territory He passed his time in little comfort, and л в 1509 was sole tried and distressed IIe got over that winter in the best way he could, and, in the beginning of next spring, Shah Rázi-ed-dín having quarrelled with his

> The secret information had reached Hazret Moulana, a spiritual guide of great fame Mirza Haider s tutor, Moulana Muhammed, having called on him, was asked,-when he incant to set out for Ichorasan,-and answered, " In the eourse of a fcw days" The samtly man bid him return in an hour, as he had sometling to say to him In about an hour, when Hazret Moulanas levee had left hun, and only his confidential attendants were present, he asked Muhammed, --- how he had suffered Muhammed Husem Mirza to go to Ishorasán ? " And now the Mirza's son, too, was going the same road' Moulina Muhammed rephed,-that he let him go, trusting to the protection of God The answer of Hazret Moulana was full of true piety and sound sense Citing the example of the prophet Muhammed, who, trusting in God, fied from the heathen of Mekka, he added, " My advice is this Trusting in God take the Mirza's son, and flee with him, and if any alarm or danger follows, I am answerable for your security But there must be no delay Moulana Muliammed, struck with his words, instantly set about concerting means for the escape, which he so successfully effected The circumstances of it, as well as those of Sultan Said's, as related at great length by Mirza Haider, are possessed of a very deep in terest .- Tar Resh ff 165-175 to Power- they out off his head, and brought it to lyban cusp in  $M_{H-1}$

-9

-1)

This r volution mere sed his territory, and somewhat Khan Is tared his circumstances, yet we may judge of the dirm dr difficulties of this petty ling by the first, that when in constances the cours of the cusuing summer a firm in came front Biller desiring Mir'n Haider to be cut to Kabul, there view long and troublescane search before a single rege of the cost could be projured for him . In the end an or of rutuma, however, when he had to ut, bout a verr ut toth I of Flish in the was despitched with seventeen fol- Other A 2 (140) "We hid two hore among us' sixs the lawers Mirra 4 but no furnishings for the journey monuch that I had nothing on which to rest at night Monlaua Multimmed who was a sort of father among us, had cul a common course showl such as is worn by the loves, class in Baddhishan, whence some notion may b for yed of the condition of the others

Mrs a Hader arrived in Kabal when Baber, having stars na detected the relation of the Moghula enjoyed for about the cilnly to year more report that it must other periods of the his rectangent to a solidory that an such distant transactions we have so full in opportunity of cutering into the private life and character of an eastern prince, as, in this in time, the nurstive of Mula Huder affords us Some illow meetings be mide for the ornite, and, ometimes perhaps influed style of oriental writing "When yo reached Kabul, "says he "Shiram Tughan, y how is my maternal unde, as well as the Padshah's, cane out in 1stilled (honorius procession) to receive me and conveyed me to his house where I was honomably entertained. The Pidshah also sent to aunonace, that in three days, the fortunate hom for my being presented would arrive, when he would send for me

"The full moon of my fortune was now freed from

* 1 × Relicit (G) - 179 × 2 eclipse, and began to rise on the ascendant to full pros-penty An order airived for my waiting on the Em-peror When I came into the presence, his Majesty's BOOK II A D 1509 happiness-diffusing eye, which fell on me, began, from excess of kindness and extreme affection, to shed its pearls and rubies of price and felicity upon me He extended to me the hand of favour and of good-fortune After I had bent the knee, I went forward, and he took me to the breast of affection, and clasped me to the bosom of fatherly love, and there held me for some time, not suffering me to fall back, and to show the accustomed marks of respect, but made me sit down by his side, and, with a strong feeling of tender-hearted emotion, still continued regarding me with the same benevolent look, while tears flowed as before 'How much,' said he, ' have you endured, from the martyrdom of the distinguished Beg, and of the Khan your uncle, and from the slaughter of your other relations Praise be to God! that you have at length reached me in safety Do not allow yourself to be too much dejected by their loss, for, believe me, I stand in their place, and whatever favour or affection you could have looked for from them, that and more will I show you' By expressions such as these he soothed me, so that the sense of loneliness, of ruin, and banishment was driven from my mind 'And who,' said he, 'took and carried you away ?' I answered, ' My tutor, Moulána Muhammed Sadr' 'Send for him,' he said The Moulána was brought As soon as his eye fell upon him, 'And this,' he said, 'is Moulána Muhammed Sadr?' He called him forward, and loaded him with praises He inquired the particulars of our adventures, which the Moulána detailed He bestowed suitable favours upon him, and sent him away delighted He then said to me, 'You have not yet waited on Sultan Said Khan,' and ordered one of his principal officers to show me the way to his residence I accompanied him, and had the pleasure of waiting on the Khan also whole time of my stay with him, he always conducted himself towards me in this manner, with parental observance and affection "*

ì

BOOK II A D 1509 -10

The same honourable testimony to Báber's amiable disposition, was borne by Sultan Said Khan, who at this time was a young man in the full vigour of life "When the Khan reached Kábul," says his historian, "he was received by the Padshah in the most friendly and respeetful manner Often in future life did he say, 'During my residence at Kabul, I passed my days in such entire absence of care, as I never did at any other time, or do now'" He proceeds to explain the uninterrupted delight in which, for upwards of two years †, he spent his days, occupied with a continued series of enjoyment, love, and wine, gardens, flowers, and banquets, no care but what was to be the next pleasing engagement, never a head-ache, but from the wine-cup of the preceding night, that all the cares of government were the Emperor's, his was the pleasure, that every person and circumstance was favourable, so that he let loose and unrestrained the reins of pleasure, forming such intimacies as he liked, while the Emperor befriended him and supplied the means, that, with Báber, he lived in the most perfect confidence, and even intimacy, as his comrade and friend ‡

These two portraits, different as they are, need no comment They present the character of the young Emperor, still only twenty-six years of age, in the most amiable light, and prove how free he, and some at least of the fugitive princes who filled his court, were, from the jealousies and fears that infest Asiatic palaces Nor should it be forgotten, that the youth and the boy whom he thus patronised and cherished, became two of the ablest and most accomplished men and princes of their age

* Far Reshidi, ff 180, 181

916 (Nov 1508, to Dec 1510) - Tar Resh f 178 ‡ Tar Resh. ff 176—178

† He was with Báber from Shaban, л и 914, to Ramzán, л. и

Sultan Saíd s

- '

CHAPTER IV

295

SHAH ISMALL AND SHI IB (NI -B (BER IN MAWERANNAHLR

SHI IBANI'S UNSUCCESSFUL CAMPAIGNS AGAINST THE KAIZAKS AND THE HAZARAS --- HIS QUALITE WITH SHALL SHAEL -- THEIR COR-LISPONDENCE - THE SHALL INVADES KHOP (SIN - MARCHES TO MERY, WHICH SHEID (NI DEFENDS - DATTLE OF MEN - DEATH OF SHFIRANT - DESERTION OF THIS MOCHULS - D (DER CROSSES THE NOUNTAINS - HIS VIEWS ON MEMERANNAHER. - STATE OF THE LERING - HERCHANA PLONTELD - OPPRATIONS IN HISS (R - BABFI DEFFATS THE UZBERS - TAKES BORHARA AND SAMAR-KAND - UZBENS INFELLED HOM WINLEANNAHER - STATE OF THAT COUNTRY - PELIGIOUS IFUDS - NEW INVASION OF THE LZBERS - B (HTT DIFEATED AT KUL-W (LLK - ABANDONS SAMAR-KAND AND BONII (I.A - JOINED BY TITSIAN AUNILIARIES - AD-VINCES AN W TOWARDS BOKH (RA - SACK OF MARSHI - BATTLE OF GHAJHDEW (S - DIBER DRIVEN BACK TO HISS (R - CON-SURACI AND REVOLT OF THE MOGHULS - THEIR TYRANNY IN HISSAL - I MINE AND PLETILENCE - MOGHULS EXPELLED BY OBEID AHAN - B (BER DRIVEN FFOM M (WERANN HER, RETURNS TO LIUL

But great events were now preparing in the West Sheibini Khan, after retiring from Kandahár, had matched to destroy such members of the family of completes Sultan Husein Mirza as were still left He himself and the conthe other Uzbek Sultans, in the course of the summer, spread their troops over Khorásán, and at Meshíd, AD 1507 Nishábúr, Asterábád, and Turshiz, had actions, in which the Chaghatái princes and their armies were uniformly defeated Numbers were slain, and the survivors so dispersed as never to be able to assemble again in any Of all Sultan Husein's sons, Badi-ez-zemán force alone survived, and he was driven into exile In the course of the winter, Sheibáni repaired to Máweran-quest of Khorásán, A п 913, BOOK 11 A D 1510 A II 914, A D 1508 naher, to check the Kaizáks, the old foes of his family, who, from the Desht-Kipchak, had invaded his dominions, but he returned in the spring to Khorásán It was during this summer that the death of the elder Khan and his family, and that of Muhamined Huscin Doghlat, took place, as well as the flight of Sultan Saíd and of Mírza Haider Sheibáni, on his return to the south, employed himself in the reduction of the strong fort of Kelát, in Khorásán, and in settling the country

CHAP IV

Next year, the good fortune of Sheibáni, hitherto almost uninterrupted, seemed to be on the wane He marched against the Kaizáks Although at that time Berendúk was the Khan, the whole business of the government was conducted by Kásim Khan, who was Khan in effect Sheibáni, in spite of the extent of his power, was not able to cope with him At that time, Kásım's army amounted to above two hundled thousand men When it was winter, the rival chiefs withdrew from the field, and each took up his quarters in some situation that afforded food for his cattle Sheibáni, whose horses and men were quite exhausted by their many and long marches, took his station at Kuruk-Kabái But he did not there enjoy the repose he looked for Having on one occasion detached a party of the best mounted of his troops to proceed to a distance on a plundering expedition, they were at first successful, and took a considerable booty and some One day, however, when the detachment prisoners had halted to rest and feed their cattle, a false report was somehow spread among them, that Kásım Khan was in sight In a moment, deserting not only the booty they had got, but their own baggage also, they galloped back in the utmost disorder to communicate the information to Sheibáni He, being unprepared to meet a foe so formidable as Kásim Khan, commanded an instant retreat, and the army, hurrying back, reached

Campaign against the Knizáks, A H 915, A D 1509

лн 915, лд 1510

Sunarkand in the end of the winter, in a state of CHAP IV complete disorganisation Early in the spring, he went A 10 1510 on to Khorasán *

In the beginning of sninmer, Sheibáin led an aimy Campaign against the Hazaras in the mountains east from Heiát, Hazaras, but not a trace of them was to be found They had An 916 disappened, ind withdriwn themselves within the recesses of then hills Unable to discover their retreats, he begin to much brek. His jonte lay where the river Ilelmed flows deep, through the precipitous fissures of the mountains. It was difficult to descend to its streum at all, and, even where a descent could be effected, the piths were so extremely narrow that it was altogether impossible, by them, to bring up water in sufficient quantities to supply an army like his For several days, the troops were compelled to march on, thus tantalised, and subject to intense suffering from thurst Numbers of the cattle perished, and the army returned to Khorasán m a shattered condition As the winter was at hand, and two of his armies had been thus severely treated, he granted a general leave of absence to his troops, allowing every man to return for the winter to his own country and home, however distant †

Hardly were his troops dispersed, when he received shah the unexpected and unwelcome news that Shah Ismael Seivi, of Sefvi, the potent ruler of Persia, was in full march Persia, towards Khorásan, with his well-disciplined and veteran army

When Sheibáni, after the total discomfiture of the sons of Sultan Husein Mírza, took possession of all that prince's dominions, his troops, in the wantonness - of success, had plundered some parts of Shah Ismael's frontier, and, in particular, had passed the desert and ravaged the province of Keimán Shah Ismael had

* Γar Resh ff 162-181

A p 1510

in consequence sent an envoy, whom he instructed to BOOK II ask redress, or, at all events, to take measures to pre-A p 1510 vent a repetition of the injury to what he happened to eall his "hereditary dominions" The sovereign of Persia was descended of a family that had originally become known by their ascetic piety, as holy and sends an envoy to Sheibani Ilis ancesinspired men, who despised this world and its goods Their contempt of wealth made them rich, and their eminence as saints enabled them to connect themselves in marriage with the great potentates of the age Hence, not only was Shah Ismael descended from the seventh Imám, -a descent which shed the halo of sanctity around him,-but he was related to some of the most powerful princes of his time, his mother being the daughter, his grandmother the sister, of the celebrated Uzan Hasan, the chief of the Túrkománs of the White Sheep, -a prince whose sway extended over all Persia and many neighbouring provinces Yet, though Shah Ismael's father, Hauder Mírza, had placed himself at the head of a considerable army, composed in part of devotees attached to him, and had fought and fallen in battle, Shah Ismael was himself the first of the family who had attained to great temporal power In early life, he had shared the misfortunes of his father and brothers, and had fallen into captivity After his father's death, he was kept four years in prison On the death of his elder brothers, being again free, he was placed at the head of their adherents, and in less than four years made himself master of all When he first came into contact with the Persia Uzbek chief, he was still only twenty-four years of age, had latterly been prosperous in all his enterprises, and was full of the ardour and confidence of youth *

Sheibáni's answer

Sheibáni Khan, rendered arrogant by long success, and having his rivalry embittered by religious zeal, -as

Tar Reshudi, ff 182, 183, Fe-* The Alem-arai Abási, f 17 which contains the Persian account rishta, vol. 11. p. 31

tors

Shih Ismael, by his victories, had given the ascendency CHAP IV m Persin to the tenets of the Shia sect, over what we 1510 Sheibim considered to be the orthodox Summ doctimes, -returned for answer to the remonstrances made to hun, that he did not understand on what Shah Ismael founded his claim to hereditary dominions, that sovereignty descended through the father, not the mother, -through males, not females, and, that the unequal match between his family and the females of Uzan Hasan's could confer no right He reminded him of the saying, the son should follow his fither's trade, the dughter her mother's, and insultingly sent him, as a present, a lady's veil and a beggar's dish, adding, "If thou hast forgot thy father's trade, this may serve to recal it to thy memory, but, if thou wouldst place thy foot on the steps of the throne, remember,

"" He that would clasp to his breast, Royalty as his bride, Must noo her in the battle-fray, athwart sharp seymetars '"

In conclusion, he remarked, that, as he intended soon, like a good Musulman, to perform the pilgrimage of Mekk 1, he would make a point of seeing him in his way through Irak Having dismissed the Persian envoy, Sheibini set out to join the army, which was at that moment marching against the Hazaras

The youthful warrior, who professed to feel a pride Shah 1in his descent from a family of holy dervishes, that maels reply gloued in their voluntary poverty, received the Uzbeks' taunts with affected humility He returned for answer, That if every man was bound to follow his father's trade, all being sons of Adam, must adhere to that of prophets, that if hereditary descent conferred the only right to sovereignty, he did not see how it had descended from the Peshdadi to the Kyánı dynasties of Persia, or how it had come to Chengiz, or to him whom he addressed

BOOK II

"Boast not thyself, O, vain youth, of thy father, who is dead,

A p 1510

Pride not thyself on bones, as if thou wert a dog "

That he, on his part, proposed making a pilgrimage to the shrine of the holy Imám Reza, at Meshíd*, where he would have an opportunity of waiting on the Khan In return for his present, he sent him a spindle and distaff, and, alluding to his quotation, that Royalty must be wooed in the battle-field, he concluded, "And so say I also Lo, I have tightened my girdle for a deadly contest, and have placed the foot of determination in the stiriup of victory If thou wilt meet me face to face in fight, like a man, our quarrel will at once be decided But if thou wouldst rather slink into a corner, then thou mayst find what I have sent thee of some use

- "We have sparred quite long enough, let us now exchange hard blows in the field
  - He who falls, borne down in the combat, let him fall'"

Having despatched this answer, without loss of time or waiting for a reply, Shah Ismael put his army in motion, and entered the territories of his enemy, sweeping before hun the small detachments of the Uzbek aimy, which had been scattered over the country for the purpose of keeping it in subjection They, at first, fell back and retreated on Herát But Sheibáni, who had recently dismissed his army, at once perceived that he was not then in a condition to meet his adversary in the field. When he heard, therefore, of Shah Ismael's march upon Meshíd, to which he at once bent his course, he left Jan Vafa Mírza in Herát, and, with such of his troops as were at hand, set off for Merv, a city in the northern part of Khorásán, not far from the Amu, where he could easily receive reinforcements

 The shrine of Imám Reza at Meshíd 18 well known as a place of pilgrimage for all pious Shias See a description of it in Mr J Bailhe Fraser's amusing and instructive " Travels in Khorasan "

from his northern dominions, or from which, if neces- char iv sary, he could retire across the great river Jan Vafá - wis not able to defend himself in Herát, but found hunself compelled very speedily to follow Sheibám

Shih Isund overrin Khorásán, as far as Meshíd, Andto with little interruption IIe visited the tomb of Imám Reza, and the holy places, with profound reverence and humility, bestowed uch presents on the guardians and servants of the shrine, and distributed alms profusely to the poor after which he hastened towinds Merv, in pursuit of Sheibam, hiving sent on before him a strong force to clear the way. When they reached the pasture-grounds of Mery, Jan Vafa encountered them near Inkenabad, not far from that city A well-contested action ensued, in which the Persian general fell, but Jun Vufá and hus Uzbeks were defeated, and pursued with great slughter up to the walls of Merv Sheibáni, sheibáni rewhose nimy had not yet been sufficiently reinforced Ures Into to enable hun to keep the field, retued into the fort and city Ile despatched expresses to hasten the return of his generals and chieftanis from beyond the Amu, most of them having already reached home with their troops and then plunder Shih Ismeel, on his arrival, advincing up to the very gates of the town, pitched his tents and pavilions within sight of it at a short distance As both armies were composed of brave and veteran troops, many sharp skirmishes took place under the walls, in which numbers fell on both sides Shah Isurel, seeing that operations were likely to be drawn out to a great length, in a descrit country, where it was difficult to find provisions and provender for his army, and where he would soon be exposed to an attack from the whole united force of Mawerannaher and Túrkistán. resolved if possible to draw Sheibáni out into the open field He pretended, therefore, to be under the neces- shah sity of retreating He wrote to reinind Sheibáni, that Ismael he had been rather more punctual to his engagements

A D 1510

Merv

Merv

BOOK Π. than the Khan had been, since he had visited Khorásán, and performed the pilgrimage of Meshíd, though Sheibáni had shunned meeting him, and had also failed in . his promise to visit Irák, he added, that he was now returning home, but would still be delighted to meet him whenever he went to Mekka He then drew off all his forces from Merv, and marched towards the south, through the broken ground near the city

Sheibáni follows,

The feint succeeded The pickets of the Uzbek army reported that the Kezelbashes*, the name by which the Persian soldiers were known, were in full retreat Sheibáni, stung with the taunts he had received, and eager to wipe off the disgrace of the campaign, marched out of Merv, and followed Shah Ismael, with twentyfive thousand horse t, and a number of the chiefs and grandees who had already joined him Mir Kamber-Bi, and some others of his most experienced officers, represented to him, that, as the troops of Samarkand and Bokhára, to the number of twenty thousand men, had arrived and encamped within a distance of little more than four miles, it would be advisable, before engaging in battle, to form a junction with them, that the enemy, who were now undoubtedly returng, could not escape, and might, even without a pitched battle, be destroyed in detail, before they could reach Irák But Sheibáni, whose passions were excited, and who was ardent for action, replied that theirs was a holy war, and that there was no use in sharing the glory and the plunder with the other Sultans, and the army marched on

Bittle of Merv A small body of a few hundred horse, who were artfully presented to the advancing enemy by Shah Ismael, were soon broken, and, flying in disorder, led the Uzbeks_ forward in pursuit, till they had eleated the broken ground and pushed on to a river ten or twelve miles thirty thousand

* Red-heads

t The Farikh Alem a-ru says

from Merv. Encouraged by the slightness of the oppo- CHAP IV sition presented to them, the Uzbeks passed the river, A p. 1510 and hid advanced into the open plain, when they suddenly saw the enemy's army drawn up ready for action * Shah Ismael, who had thrown a division of his army into their rear, to seize the bridge by which they had pissed, now attacked them in front with a column of seventeen thousand cavalry Sheibani Khan, who had probably pushed forward in the behef that he could always fall brek at pleasure, now felt himself compelled to engage The battle was fought at Mahnnúdábád of Merv The Uzbeks, though surrounded, combated for some time with their usual bravery, but, in the end, the regulated valour of the well-trained Kezelbashes prevailed The Uzbeks were driven back, and the rout was complete Sheihan Khan found his retreat cut off Attended by about five hundred men, chiefly the sous of Sultans, the heads of tubes, and men of distinction, he was forced to take shelter in an melosure, which had been creeted for accommodating the cattle of travellers and of the neighbourning peasants. There they were elosely pursued, attacked, and hard pressed. The mclosure had no gate on the farther side When they saw no hope left of retrieving the day, the Khan and the other fugitives attempted to escape, by leaping over the wall of the melosure towards the bink of the river, but fell in herps on each other, and the Khan was over- Deuth of Ind and smothered by the numbers who erowded after Sheilani, hun

When the contest was over, the body of Sheibám was his body sought for, and was disentangled from the heap of slain dismemberby which it was covered. This head was cut off and presented to Shah Ismael, who ordered the lifeless trunk to be dismembered, and the limbs to be sent to different puts of his empire, to be exposed to the popular gaze

* A 11 916, Shaban 29 (A 12 wirth makes the date Shaban 20 1510 Dec 2) The Leb-ul-to- Friday

- BOOK IL
- The skin of his head was stuffed with hay, and sent to Sultan Bajazet*, the Turkish Emperor of Constanti-AD 1510 nople The skull, set in gold, was made into a drinking cup, which the Shah was proud of displaying at his great entertainments An anecdote, illustrative of the barbarous manners of the Persians, is recorded on this occasion Agha Rustam Roz-efzun, who had made himself master of the province of Mazenderán, and who still held out in his mountain fastnesses against Shah Ismael, had been in the constant habit of saying, that his hand was on the skirts of Sheibáni Khan's garment, an idiomatic expression, to signify, that he clung to him for assistance and protection One day, when that chief was sitting in state at a grand festival, surrounded by the nobles of Taberistán, a special messenger ; sent by Shah Ismael, advanced fearlessly into his presence, and, with a loud voice, delivered a message from the Shah, concluding, "Though thy hand was never onthe hem of Sheibáni Khan's robe, yet his is now on thine," and, with these words, flung the rigid hand of Sheibáni on the skirt of the Prince's robe, and withdrew through the midst of the assembly Not a word was spoken by any one, nor an effort made to detain him, all remained fixed in astonishment, and he escaped uninjured The incident is said to have made a deep impression on the health of the Prince of Mazenderán, who, soon after, was brought to yield one half of his territories to the Shah

Such was the fate of Muhammed Sheibáni Khan, the man who had brought so many calamities on Báber, who had stripped him of his paternal kingdom, and sent him out an exile and an adventurer, into foreign lands When the fugitives brought news to Merv of the event_ of the battle, the greatest consternation prevailed, every man, who was able, fled with his family and chil-

Consternation of the Uzbeks

Bayezíd

† Yesáwal

dren, while numbers, who had no means of transport, left char is them to their fite Obeidulla Sultan, of Bokhúra, and Taimir Sultan, of Siminkind, the nephew and son of A. p. 1510 Sheibun, who had arrived near Mery, entered the fort, curried away the Harum of Sheibáni and of some other cluets of note, as well as whatever of value they could it the moment collect, and hurried off the same night Numbers, however were left behind All the Uzbeks that were found in the place were put to the sword by the Kezelbishes, the women were chiried into bondage The inhabitants of Merv were included in the general massacre

Sheihum Khan, ever jealons of the Moghuls in his Desertion of service had sent a great number of them to Khorásán, the Mothat they might be farther removed from the Khans of Moghnhistin These unwilling alles, who had now reached the banks of the Amu, gladly seized the opportunity of recovering their independence, and, to the number of twenty thousand men, separated from the Uzbeks, and set out for Kunduz, plundering on all sides as they went along

Immediately after this decisive battle, the Uzbeks shah retired in every direction from Khorásán Shah Ismael Ismael to Herat. soon after repured to Herit, where he spent the winter His first care was to introduce the observances of the Pirecu-Shía sect into his new dominious, and, as he was met by a bigotry and a firmness equal to his own, he did not recomplish that object without a severe and cruel persecution, in the course of which the blood of innity men eminent for their piety and their virtues flowed, and many distinguished names were added to the list of martyrs for the pure Sunm faith *

۲.

The ehicf authorities for the quarrel with Shah Ismael, and the defeat and death of Sheibam, are the Farikli Alcm-arai Abies, ft 17-19, and Tar Rehidi, ff 181-183

Besides these, Ferishta and Khafi Khan, the Genealogical History of Abulghazi p ix e 1, and the Tarikhe Sind have been consulted

tion.

BOOK II  $\wedge$  D 1510 Baber gets news of the battle of Merv,  $\wedge$  H 916, 29 Shaban,  $\wedge$  D 1510, 2 Dec

The battle of Merv was fought on the 2nd of December, and, in the course of the same month, a messenger arrived at the palace in Kabul, bringing by express a letter for the Emperor from Khan Mirza His feet were frost-bitten and his strength exhausted, as he had crossed the passes of the Hindú-kúsh, though deep covered with snow The letter communicated intelligence of the battle of Merv, and the defeat of Sheibáni, whose fate, when the letter was written, was still un-It added, that the Uzbek Amírs, on receiving known the news, had abandoned Kunduz, and that nearly twenty thousand Moghuls had separated from the Uzbeks, after their defeat, and were arrived in Kunduz, to which place Khan Mírza had himself repaired added, that he was ready to join the Emperor with all his forces, to aid him in recovering the kingdom of his forefathers

Crosses to Kunduz

∧ н 916, 1 Shawal, ∧ D 1511, 2 Jan

ł

Nothing could be more in accordance with the wishes of Báber "All winter as it was," he set out, without besitation, by the Ab-dera pass, which he supposed to be at that season the most practicable * He spent the Id, or Festival for the conclusion of the fast of Ramzán, near Bámián, it being still only a month since the defeat and death of his grand enemy He

 A circumstance that preceded the Emperor s departure from Kabul is worthy of notice, as marking his character "Meanwhile," says Mírza Halder, " the Emperor resolved to march to Kunduz It was now about the winter solstice, and the season had all the violence of December, so, speaking tenderly to me, he said, ' The difficulty of the roads and the intensity of the cold You will therefore are excessive stay this winter in Kábul, and, when spring comes, and the severity of winter is over, you can come and rejoin me' On hearing this, I remonstrated with him, 'Torn from my relations and country,' said I, 'I have supported the misenes of my lot by the help of your majesty's kindness If separated from yon, how shall I ever be able to exist, in my orphan loneliness?' When he perceived that grief at the prospect of being left behind in Kábul was preying upon my mind and breaking my heart, he ordered such arrangements to be made for my going as the time allowed, and carried me along with him to Kunduz" —Tar Reshidi, ff 204, 205

BOOK II

A D 1511 I mbussy from Shah Ism (cl

1 and each, in a few days, heard of the flight of the  $\frac{1}{1}$  other  $\stackrel{*}{=}$

While Báber lay at Kunduz, an embassy arrived from Shah Ismael, bringing the Emperor's sister, Khán-yada Begum, with rich presents and tenders of amity It will be recollected that when Báber was compelled to abandon Samarkand, after defending it bravely for five months, she had been left behind, and became the wife of Sheibáni, who had divorced her aunt that he might marry her By the Uzbek Khan she had a son, Khurram-shah, a promising youth, to whom he gave the government of Balkh, but who died young, a year or two after his father Sheibáni, who was jealous of the attachment the Begum was known to entertain for her brother, fearing she might join in intrigues to his injury, divorced her, and married her to Syed Háde, a member of a religious family The Syed had fallen in the battle of Merv, and the Begum became a prisoner in the hands of the Persians Being soon recognised as the sister of Báber, she was treated with the greatest re-spect by Shah Ismael, who was disposed to cultivate that prince's friendship He now sent her, with all her property and servants, under a proper escort, to her hroft Baber informs us, that, on hearing of her ap. proach, he rode out to meet her, accompanied by a favourite servant well-known to the princess But so great a change had ten eventful years produced on the appearance of them both, though the Emperor was yet only twenty-eight years old, that, even after he had addressed his sister, neither she nor her attendants recognised either of them Khánzada Begum passed the rest of her life at Kábul, beloved and honoured by her brother, whom she survived many years †

Báber, who at this very time was meditating to send an embassy to Shah Ismael, did not neglect the occa-

Báber's cmbassy to the Shah

* Tar Resh ff 185, 186

† Bábers Mem p 10, Tar Resh f 186

sion, which that prince's generous proceedings now af- CHAP IV forded hun, to despatch Khan Mirza, with presents, as , v 1511 his ambassador, to thank the Shah for his courtesy to the Begum, to eonvey Báber's congratulations on his splendid vietory over their common enemy, and to dispose hun to lend assistance in the attempt, which he now meditated, to recover the kingdom of Maweiannaher *

The Emperor had already discovered, that, though state of the the Uzbeks had suffered a severe defeat, their power Uzbeks. was yet unbroken On the death of Sheibám, the Uzbek chiefs assembled to elect a Supreme Khan in his place Their choice, according to the usages of the Uzbeks, was decided by a mixed consideration of age and family They did not ruse to the dignity of Khan, Taimur, the son of Sheibáni, but Kuehum, a son of Abulkhair Khan, and who was the eldest Sultan of the family Tamur Sultan, the son of Sheibáni, ruled in Samarkand, Obeidulla Sultan, the son of Mahmúd Sultan, and nephew of Sheibáni, possessed Bokhára, Juni Beg Sultan, a son of Sheibam's uncle, held Andeján,-while Kuchum probably occupied Túrkistan, and Ins son Sningek, Tashkend Khamzeh Sultan and Mehdi Sultan were still in full force in Hissar and Cheghaman The master-mind of Sheibáni was gone, but the veteran eaptains, and the physical force of the Uzbeks, still presented a formidable barrier to the progress of Báber Though each chief was nearly independent in his own territories, all were ready to act in union when any assault was made from without, against any one member of the confederacy

Early in the spring, Shah Ismael set out to invade They make Mawerannaher, and had advanced along the roots of peace with the Parapamisan range as far as Meimúna and Kara- A p 1511 -

^{*} Mirza Haider says, that Khan quest for assistance and aid .- Tar Mirza was sent with tenders of Resh f 187 obedience and observance, and a rerobat, when he was met by a mission sent by Tannur BOOK II Sultan and other Uzbek chiefs, who had advanced to A D 1511 the banks of the Amu, to oppose his progress They brought rich presents, and made proposals for a peace Shah Ismael had important concerns which called him back to Azerbáiján and the frontiers of Turkey. Terms were soon concluded, by which it was agreed, that the Amu should be the line of separation between them dominions, and that all to the south of that river should belong to the Shah * By this arrangement, the kingdom of Khwárazm, which had long been subject to Khorásán, fell to Shah Ismael, but being sepirated from that country by a wide desert, and the communication with it being difficult, it was, at no distant period, again overrun by the northern invaders After making peace with the Uzbeks, Ismael Shah returned to Herát

Ferghánn recovered While Báber was waiting to learn the result of his application to Shah Ismael for aid, a messenger arrived, from Syed Muhammed Mirza (brother of the late Muhammed Husein Mírza of Uratippa, and uncle of Mírza Haider) with the pleasing information that he had expelled the Uzbeks from the country of Ferghána

When Sheibáni Khan defeated the two Khans and took Táshkend, Syed Muhammed was in Kashan, so that he escaped being made prisoner He afterwards joined the elder Khan in the desert, and remained some time, first with him, and afterwards with his son Having again rejoined the Khan, whom he offended by the honest freedom of his advice, he was banished from his court, and forced to seek refuge with Jani Beg Sul tan, the chief of Andeján On the defeat of Sheibáni, when Báber entered the country of Hissár, a general council of the Uzbek Sultans was held in the spring at Samaikand Jani Beg, who attended it, curied the

* Far Alem-anit, f. 18

by Stel Muhammed

л н 917,

A r 1511

³¹⁰

Syed along with him - The Sultins, in the course of cuvray their consultations came to a resolution that not a Mo-A n 1.11 ghul should be left abve in Mawerannaher. To this Jun Beg would not consent, and allowed the Syed and ill the Moghuls in his service to go to Andeian, to join their families The Syed, who was apprchensive that J nu Beg might alter his mind, proceeded with all haste to Anderon, and, soon after what he dreaded did hap pen as Jun Beg sent after the Moghuls, who were still on the road and killed every man that was overtaken The Syed however, effected his escape and reached Anderm, where being joined by the remnant of the Moghuls and by the inhibit ints of the town, he succeeded in driving out the Uzbeks

Just before the news of this revolution reached Treachers Biber, he had been exposed to a new danger. The Meshule leiders of the Moglinis who had escaped from the Uzbek voke, had waited upon Sultan Sud Khan, a son of the younger lyhan, who was now in the Linperors camp, and told hum, that, if he was willing, they were ready to make away with Baber, and to hay the reads of government at his feet that their followers amounted to nearly twenty thon-and good and effective men, while the Chagh it us did not mount to five thousand The Khun, who declined their offer, made answer, that while the hurric me of Sheib in's invasion lasted, Baber Pid-linh had pre-ented Kabul to linn as an island, under shelter of which he had escaped the fury of the tempest, and that, now that the shore of prosperity was in sight, he could not be guilty of the ingratitude and perfidy of turning on his benefactor. The Khan, however, represented to the Emperor, through Mir Kasım Kochin,-who was his prime adviser, and who, though he could neither read not write, was a man of talent and had an ingenious and elegant vein of wit,-that, as sultan suid the Emperor's aflairs were now prosperous and new khan sent lo Andejan tribes were joining him every day, the Khan might be sent where he could have a separate command, and where his operations might be advantageous to both As the news of the success in Ferghána arrived at this crisis, the Khan was nominated to the command in that country, and soon set out attended by all who chose to join him *

x 4

BOOK II A D 1011

Convention between the Shah and Baler

After Sultan Saíd Khan had marched for Andeján, Khan Mírza airived, with a part of the auxiliary force which had been sent by Shah Ismael The Shah al-icady complained that the Uzbeks had broken the treaty, by predatory mroads into his territory, and he had entcred into an understanding with Báber, that that prince should retain whatever he conquered in Máwerannaher Thus strengthened, the Emperor re-newed active operations, and entered the country of Hissár. The Uzbeks on their side were not inactive As they had ascertained that Shah Ismael had conceded the possession of Máwerannaher to Báber, they no longer apprehended an attack from him in person, and, their whole force being now disposable, they took their measures accordingly It was resolved that Kuchum Khan and Siúnjek Khan should, in concert with Jani Beg, recover possesion of Ferghána, that Obeidulla Sultan should remain at Karshi, while Taimur Sultan, and other chiefs, should assist Khamzeh and Mehdi Sultans in driving the Emperor out of Hissár Nor were they slow in carrying the concerted measures into effect When the Emperor reached Pul-Sangín† on the Surkhab, he found that Khamzeh Sultan from Hissar had occupied it He discovered also that the Uzbek army was far more numerous than he had supposed, and commanded by chiefs of the first distinction, and that to meet them in the field would be extremely dangerous The enemy on their part, when informed of the inferiority of Báber's force, passed the river

* Tar Resh ff 187, 188

† Stone-Bridge

Uzbek plan of campaign

Báber forced to retreat .

lower down than (Pul-Sangín) the stone-bildge, by CHAP IV swimming Intelligence of this movement having  $_{A = 1511}$ reached him about afternoon prayers, he instantly put his army in motion, and marched for Abdera, where the passes in the hills are extremely narrow and steep All that night, and the succeeding day till noon, he continued marching with the utmost celerity, when he at length arrived at a position which the most experienced takes up a leaders considered to be very strong, and there took his ground

Towards midnight, news was brought that the Uzbeks Báber's arwere advancing in full force The troops were instantly range-nents, ordered to their posts, and remained under arms till day-break, ready for action About sunrise, the advanced pickets reported that the enemy were in motion, and preparing to attack Baber rode to an eminence to reconnoitre He saw that there was only one, and that a narrow road by which the enemy could attack the hillock on which he was posted Close by this was his posi-another hillock, divided from the first by a broad and tion attack-ed deep ravine, and to this hillock also there was only one road After the enemy had drawn out then ranks on the level ground below, they perceived that it was no easy task to mount the hill Taimur Sultan (Sheibáni's son) and several other Sultans, with about ten thousand men, separated from the main-body, and began to ascend the farther hill The Emperor instantly despatched Khan Mírza, with a body of the best troops, to oppose them At the same moment, his eye happened to light on a band of men who were standing hard by, and he inquired who they were He was informed that they were Mírza Haider's followers, being a party, -_ chiefly Moghuls, who had been attached to his father, and who, on escaping from Khorásán, had now joined the son Turning to the Mirza, he observed, "You are still rather young for such rough rencounters Stay beside me, with Moulána Muhammed and a few more, and send the rest of your men to succour Khan BOOK II Mírza " А в 1511

position

They arrived at a fortunate moment. Khan Mírza's men, after coming to their ground, had been charged by the Uzbeks, who bore down all before them, and had nearly reached Khan Mírza himself Haider's men, under Jan Muhammed Atkeh, as soon as they arrived, attacked them in fiont, and the fugitives rallying, ieturned to the fight, and succeeded in driving back the Haider's men took an Uzbek chief, who was Uzbeks immediately carried before the Emperor He received the offering with joy as a favourable omen, and on the spot ordered the first prize of valour to be inscribed in Mírza Haider's name Still, however, the contest continued to be maintained on both sides with desperate valour, till the light began to fail The violence of the battle had not reached the Emperor's position, the direct road to which was difficult, while it was not easy to go up or down from one place to another Late in the afternoon, the men of note who were about the Emperor dismounted At nightfall, the enemy found it impossible to remain in their advanced position, for want of water, which was three or four miles off. they The Uzbeks therefore were obliged to retreat during the night, in order to encamp near water As soon as they began to make a retrograde movement, the foot soldiers and such as had dismounted, raised a shout and rushed after them The portion of their army that was opposed to Khan Mírza, having observed Khamzeh Khan and the main body in retreat, were also eager to retire As long as the two divisions remained facing each other, neither could gain any advantage over the other, but no sooner did the enemy commence their retreat, than Khan Mírza's men made a general charge, and the Uzbeks at once took to flight When the main body saw that division discomfited, they too lost then firmness, fell into confusion, and were soon scattered in retreat.

are totally routed

complete rout "It was now night prayers, when CHAP IV Khamzeh Sultan and Mehdi Sultan were taken, and A p 1511 brought before the Emperor What they had done to the Khákáns of the Moghuls, and the Sultans of the Chaghat's, that did he to them From night till morn were the fugitives pursued, and from morn till night, to the entiance of the Derbend-Ahmein, (the Iron Gate)" The immediate consequence of this vietory, was the fall of Hissár *

Báber now collected the whole of his tioops, near Baber col Hissár He was soon after joined by an additional army, body of auxiliaries, sent by Shah Ismael, under the command of Mustafa Alı and Shahrukh Sultan Moherdar, and numbers of men joined from the tilbes around, so that the army, horse and foot, amounted to sixty thousand men The Kezelbash force was under the command of Ahmed Sultan Sefi (who was related to the 1 10yal House of Persia), Ah Khan Istylu, and Shakrukh Khan Afshán, of whom the two former had served with great reputation against the Ottoman Turks The Emperor, with this powerful army, advanced towards Kárshi The pineipal Uzbek chiefs had met at Samar- marches to kand Obeidulla Khan, the chief of Bokhára, had fortified lumself in Kárshi Báber's ablest officers were against besieging Kárshi, time, they said, was valuable, and, if he pushed on and took possession of Bokhára, Karshi must fall of eourse In this opinion the Emperor concurred, and he marched past it, and encamped, when his scouts reported that Obeidulla Khan had quitted Kárshi and was in full route for Bokhára Báber hastened on by forced marches, and reached it takes it, and

* Tar Resh. ff 189, 190 Mírza Schander, the author of the Tarikh Alem-arai Abási, f 18, says, that Khan Mirza was now put in possession of Badakhshan and Hissar, in conformity with the agreement with the Shah, or, as he expresses it, in obedience to the royal grant. This is not improbable, as it is in unison with the practice of the time. Baber looked forward to the sovereignty of Samarkand and Bokhara

Bokhára ,

Samarkand,

book 11 before the Uzbeks, who, finding themselves anticipated, went on to Túrkistán, plundering the country by the way The Uzbek Sultans who were in Samarkand, being also filled with alarm in like manner, took refuge in Túrkistán, and thus the country of Transoxiana was for a time cleared of the Uzbeks, after they had held it about nine years * After the Emperor had been a short time in Bokhára, he proceeded to Samarkand His route resembled a triumphal procession, wherever he moved, he was received with universal joy, high and low, citizens and peasantry, all testified their delight At Samarkand, he was welcomed by processions of the chiefs of the law, and of the merchants, and the grandees and men of every class came out to receive him The roads and streets were thronged with the population, the houses, bazárs, and public entries were hung with drapery of brocade, and of the richest stuffs, paintings, and wroughtwork. All was done that could testify their joy at the happy change, the expulsion of the detested Uzbeks, and the restoration of a sovereign of the ancient race of their princes He was proclaimed King, at Samarkand, in the beginning of October, A D 1511, amid the blessings and prayers of the inhabitants, who looked forward to years of happiness, under the mild sway of an enlightened and beneficent sovereign Having amply rewarded his Persian auxiliaries, he dismissed them, and where he is joyfully received, and prociaimed king.

15th Rejeb, A H 917, Sth Oct. A D 1511

}

Sultan Saíd in Andeján

The Uzbeks besiege Káshán then marched back to Khorásán † While these events were passing in Bokhára and Samarkand, Sultan Saíd Khan had proceeded, accompanied by his Moghuls, from Kunduz to Andeján, where he was received by Syed Muhammed Mírza Soon after his arrival, the grand council of Uzbek chiefs, ...

* Tar Reshidi, as above.

† Kháfi Khan, following Mirza Sekander, makes Báber dismiss the Persian auxiliaries after the march to Samarkand, Mírza Haider makes them be sent away from Bokhára, which seems preinature already mentioned, was held at Samarkand, when dif-CHAP 1V ferent scenes of action were assigned to the different A p 1511 Kuehum Khan and Subnek Khan were Sultans nuned to assist Jani Beg Khan in driving the Moghuls out of Ferghana They entered the country, on the west towards Akhsı, and land siege to Káshán, which was not in a perfect state of defence The garrison was soon i educed to straits Sultan Saíd Khan, on learning this, sent the chief part of his army towards the hills neur Káshán, to harass, if they could not face, the The Uzbeks were not the only enemy who enemy now infested Andeján Ababeker Mírza had availed lumself of the confusion produced by the death of Sheiban, to aim at the conquest of the whole country was already possessed of Urkend, Madu, and Ush, some of the best provinces of Ferghana, and, hearing of the detaelments sent to the relief of Káshán, pushed on to · besiege the capital itself, carrying with him a number Ababeker of engines for attacking towns - such as manjanils, swing-eranes*, and sealing ladders The garrison in defin the town, which amounted to only two or three thousand men, was not sufficient for defending the walls, which were very extensive, so that both the Khan and the inlubitants were filled with alarm

Meanwhile, the Uzbeks had made a breach in the Káshán walls of Káshán, and, applying scaling ladders, had made so desperate an assault, that the garrison, driven to extremity, made their escape, and rode off by the gate on the land side As the Uzbeks had dismounted when they came on to the assault, and had not reckoned on the garrison attempting to flee, they were unable to follow, and much time was lost before they could go back to mount and pursue them Such as remained behind, with the stragglers and the inhabitants, were put to the sword The garrison, joining the troops in taken

cularly the Persian cap This is distinguished by twelve points, emblematic of the twelve Imáms, and by a long strip of red cloth, issuing from the centre and hanging down behind, whence the Persian soldier has the name of Kezel-bash, or red-head It was therefore A.U 1511-2 in reality a religious, as well as a military badge, and marked an attachment to the Shía sect, in opposition to the Sunni or old orthodox faith The inhabitants of Máwerannaher, accustomed to a change of masters, might perhaps have borne the yoke of the Persians as patiently as they had done that of the Moghuls and Uzbeks, but now their religious feelings were touched, and nobles, soldiers, and above all the divines and Imáms, so important a class in every Musulman country, but especially in Samarkand and Bokhára, were deeply offended and scandalised at this distinction granted to Religious zcal of the inhabitants.

foreign and hostile sect, who daily, in the public mosque and in their private prayers, vent curses against th three holy companions and successors of the Prophet The religious zeal of the inhabitants was inflamed Máwerannaher, from the earliest ages of Islám, hac always been distinguished for the untainted orthodoxy of its doctors and their followers, and the meanest o. the populace felt a pride in the honourable distinction Nor was there much in the character or conduct of Shah Ismael, to concluste whom these innovations were introduced, that could soothe their apprehensions Descended of one of the holy Imáms, and of a family that had risen to distinction by their attachment to the Shía doctrines, he was hinself a strenuous and bigoted apostle of the tenets of the sect, which he had in-troduced by force as the established religion of all his dominions The detestation which the orthodox Sunnis of Máwerannaher bore to the heretical Shías of Persia, and their alarm at having the doctrines of a sect which they regarded as impious forced upon them, were naturally increased by the violent and cruel persecution which Shah Ismael had commenced in Khorisán, from cuar iv the moment of his victory. He had commanded divine Anish 2 service to be celebrated in the mosques of Herit, and had as embled all the heads of the religion, and the most cumment teachers to be present in the grand mosque while the lyhutha or prover for the sovereign was rold in the new form the chief preacher of the more chiving honestly refused to repeat the curses on the three companions of the prophet, and Aisha the prophets safe was drugged down from the pulpit, and cut in proces on the spot - Next day, the Shah sent for the Sheikh ul Islan, who was the chief Musulman do tor and judge at Herit and attempted to bring him over to the new opinions - Having fuled, the venerable man was condemned to a cruel death, in inflicting which the Shih hunself is reported to have taken an active part This par- ention riged against recus ints of every rink as long is Shih Ismael remained in Khorásm We cannot therefore wonder that the inhabitants of Transoxian) and especially the divines and teachers of relevon should feel much alarm at such manifest mdicitions as were now made, of a desire, not merely to tolerate, but to favour the Sha doctance and forms Besides polemical reasoning they had recourse to the verpois of radicule, which often are hardly less power-The new garb of the lying, and his soldiers, were ful the subjects of unspiring spreasm and derision. The popularity of the Linperor, which a few months before had been so high now randly declined. He knew that he was unable to cope with the muted force of the Lzbeks, without the aid of the Shith, and the compliances which this persuision led him to make to that prince's religious opinions, deprived him of the confidence of his subjects beyond the Oxus, in spite of the 1 nown humanity and beneficence of his character *

BOOK II

There is a difference among whose name the coin was struck, he torians, an to the rovereign in and the Khutha read, in Micweran-VOL 1

BOOK IL

▲ n 1512 Invasion of the Uzbeks, ▲ H 918, ▲ p 1512

Báber defeated at Kúl-malek

nbandons Samarkand,

But a storm was already gathering beyond the Sirr, which soon poured down all its fury on the plains of Bokhára On the arrival of spring, the Uzbeks, encouraged by hearing that Shah Ismael had returned to Irák. resolved to attempt the recovery of Transoxiana They accordingly left Túrkistán; one body marching to attack Táshkend, while another, under Obeidulla Sultan, advanced towards Bokhára Báber, having detached a body of troops to the relief of Táshkend, hastened, with such as he could collect, to check the Sultan's progress Obeidulla, hearing of his approach when near Bokhára, thought it prudent to retreat, but was followed by Báber, who overtook hun at Kúl-malek* A fierce action ensued, in which the Emperor, being defeated, was forced to fly back to Samarkand The enemy now turned upon him, pursued him into his capital, began to occupy the country on every side, and threatened to encompass the city, which, with its granaries empty, at the end of winter, was in no condition to stand a siege Seeing no chance of a successful resistance, he once more unwillingly abandoned the imperial city, and made his way to Hissár † naher at this period According to Abulfazl, Ferishta, Kháti Khan, and the Indian historians, it was in Báber s name Mírza Sekander, the author of the Tarikh-Alem-arái Abasi, f 18, followed by the Persian writers, says, it was in that of Shah Ismael Thus, Sheikh Muhammed Alı Hazın, ın hıs Lıfe, p 277, observes, that Báber, in the whole course of his life, courted the support of Shah Ismael and his descendants, "sometimes," says he, " by giving currency to their Khutba and com, as in Samarkand," sometimes by petitions and supplications The ambition of Shah Ismael might have led him to aim at the conquest of Transoxiana, had not the Turks, his powerful antagonists on the west, compelled him to be constantly on the watch against their progress. Báber was probably acknowledged as the sovereign of Samarkand, which had been held by his forefathers, because it would have been nearly impossible for the Shah to have conquered and held it directly by his Persian troops When Mirza Sekander talks of the peshkeshes sent by Báber to the Shah, on dismissing the troops, and uses other terms of humiliation, he probably only adopts the insolent style used by Persian writers in speaking of --the kings of foreign countries

* Sefer, л н 918, which begins 18 April, л D 1512

† Mírza Sekander, who is followed by Kháfi Khan and the

He had not been long there, when he was attacked CHAP IV by a body of Uzbeks, led by some of their khans and sultans, who assembled at the Derbend pass, and defends matched to overwhelm him Báber threw such of his Hissár Moghuls and soldiers as were at hand, with their property and families, into the town and suburbs of Hissár, and barncaded the streets The Uzbeks, who advanced and reconnoitred the place, seeing that he was resolved to make a desperate defence, gave up their design, and fell back on Cheghánián *

Báber, meanwhile, had applied for assistance to Biram Khan Karamanlu, who commanded for the Shah, at Balkh, and who sent a detachment to support him, on the arrival of which, the Uzbeks withdrew from the country of Hissár

But Bábei, after the signal defeat which he had Amír Nijm suffered at Kúl-malek, had sent directly to Shah Ismael joins Baber, himself, to solicit an effective force, by which he might be enabled to expel the Uzbeks finally from Máwerannaher The Shah, accordingly, gave instructions to Amír Nijm Sáni, his munister of finance, whom he had entrusted with the settlement of Khorásán, to render assistance to Báber in recovering the dominions he had lately possessed On reaching Balkh, Amír Nijm & # 918, A D 1512 resolved to march in person into Mawerannaher, and, taking with him the governor of Herat, the Amirs of Khorásán, and Buam Khan, of Balkh, he passed the Amu, and was soon joined by Bábei, when the combined army is said to have amounted to sixty thousand men †

Indian historians, makes the Emperors army small, and that of Oberdulla very numerous Abulfazl, going beyond this, gives Baber the victory, but adds, that from untoward circumstances he was ohliged to retreat Mirza Haider, on the contrary, (Tar Resh f 199) who was Obeid's brother-in-law, makes him, with three thousand men, defeat the Emperor with forty thousand His account of Babers transactions, at this time, is strongly tinged with an adverse religious feeling

* Babers Mem p S05

+ According to the Taríkhe Be-

AD 1512

воок п

A D 1512 Karshi sacked,

Early in the autumin, the army advanced to Khozar, which was taken It next proceeded on to Karshi, which had been strongly fortified and garrisoned by Obeidulla Sultan, the chief of Bokhára, who was in reality at the head of the Uzbeks, though Kuchum was the nominal khan It was proposed to leave it behind, as had been done with success in the preceding campaign. but Mir Nıjm, sayıng that it was Obeidulla's lair, declared that it must be taken It was accordingly besieged and carried by storm, when Sheikhem Mírza, the governor, with all in the place, whether Uzbeks or inhabitants, to the number of fifteen thousand, were put to the sword, without respect to age, or sex, or sanctity The circumstances of this massacre disgusted Báber, who found that he was condemned to play a subordinate part, in an army professedly acting under his authority He had ardently desired to save the inhabitants, who were Chaghatái Túrks of his own race and sect; and he had earnestly besought Num Sani to comply with his wishes But the unrelenting Persian, deaf to his entreaties, had let loose all the fury of war on the devoted city Moulána Binái, the poet, one of the most eminent wits of his time, who happened to be in the town, fell in the indiscriminate slaughter, with many Syeds and holy men, "and from that time for-ward," says Mírza Sekander, "Amír Nijm prospered in none of his undertakings "*

The Uzbek chiefs, after the massacre at Karshi, appear for some time to have retired and fortified themselves in dáuni, f 182, he was accompanied by an army of seventeen thousand Kezelbashes. Mírza Sekander says, that he held the Vikálat Diván-Ah, f 18 Kháfi Khan calls him the Amír-ul-Omra. The total amount of the army is taken from the Indian writers. The Persian writers say, that Mír Nijm entered Transovinna without orders from Shah Ismael. This may only be to save the Shah's credit

* Tar Alem-arán, f 19, Tar 5 Reshídi, f 199, Tar Kháfi Khan, f 23 Kháfi Khan makes Mír Nym defeat Obeidulla Khan, and shut up his army, of fifteen thousand horse, in Karshi their strongholds Mir Nijm seems to have passed on to CHAP IV attack Ghazhdewán, on the border of the desert, without , 1512 having taken Bokhára The Uzbek sultans had now An 918, had time to assemble, and under the command of ^ D 1512, Obeidulla Khan, who was joined by Taimur Sultan from Battle of Ghazhde-Samarkand, they threw themselves into the fort the wan very night that Báber and Mír Num had taken their ground before it, and were preparing their engines and ladders for an assault The Uzbeks, in the morning *, drew out their army, which took up a position among the houses and gardens in the suburbs of the town The confederates advanced to meet them The Uzbeks. who were protected by the broken ground, and by the walls of the inclosures and houses, had posted in every corner archeis on foot, who poured a shower of ariows on the Kezelbashes as they approached Biram Khan, who had the chief military command of their troops, being wounded, and having fallen from his horse, the main body of the army fell into disorder "In the course of an hour," says Mírza Haider, "the influence of Islám began to prevail over heresy and infidelity Victory declared for the true faith The invaders were Baber torouted, and most of them fell in the field, and the feated. arrows of Ghazhdewán revenged the sabre of Karshi Mír Num, and all the chief officers of the Túrkománs," continues the pious Musulman, "were sent to hell-fire The Emperor, routed and discomfited, fled back to Hissár " It is said that the Kezelbash chiefs, disgusted with the haughtiness and insolence of Min Nijm, did not use their utmost endeavours to assist him, so that he was taken prisoner, and put to death Many of the Persian chiefs, who fled from the battle, crossed the Amu at Kirki, and regained Khoiásán †

r 3

* Mirza Sekander says that the battle was fought on Sunday, 3 Ramzan, A H 918 The day of the week 15 probably a mustake, the Sd Ramzon, 918, falling on Friday The Leb-al-Towarikh makes the day of the battle, 17 Ramzan, 918  $\dagger$   $\Gamma$  ur Reshuli, f 199, 200 The 325

BOOK II A p 1512-3 The Uzbeks recover Transoxiana. A p 1513 Shah Ismael returns to kbor'sán

The Uzbeks now not only recovered the country which they had lost in Transoxiana, but made incursions into Khorásán, ravaging the northern part of the province Shah Ismael, on hearing of this disaster, resolved to return On his approach, the Uzbeks retreated in alarm He caused several of the officers, who had escaped from the battle, to be seized, and some of them to be capitally punished, for deserting them commander Certain inhabitants of the province, being accused of having shown attachment to the Uzbeks and account given by Mírza Sekander, (Far Alem-arái Abasi, f 19) is somewhat different. He says, that Tamur Sultan, and Abusaid Sultan, threw themselves into the town, which they defended bravely for four months, that, at the end of that time, provisions began to fail in the Persian camp, and the horses suffered for want of provender, that Oberd-ulla Khan and Jan Beg Ishan, who were in Bokliára, marehed out with their troops in the highest order, and being joined by Taimur Sultan and the garrison of Ghazhdewan, engaged the besiegers on Sunday the 3d of Ramzan, within sight of the town, that Biram Khan, who commanded the troops, having been wounded, the army fell into disorder, and the rout became complete, that Muhammed Baber Mirza retired from the flight, separated from the army, and fled to Hissar The two accounts are not irrecon-Though Mirza Haider eileable speal s of the Uzbek chiefs as arriving on the same day with the Persians, and while they were preparing their engines for attack, yet their arrival may have been after the place had been besieged four months, and when an assault was preparing The scarcity in the eamp is probable, though adduced to lesson the disgrace of the discomfiture To the same feeling may perhaps be aseribed the alleged slackness of the Persian chiefs in supporting Mfr Nijm, and the reflection cast on Baber The defeat of Ghazhdewán seems to have hurt the pride of the Persians in a They openly ascribed high degree it to the treachery of Baber, Humayun, when a refugee in Persia, was often taunted with this treachery of his father, as having destroyed Mir Nıjm's whole army In the Tarikhe Bedáum, f 182, a couplet is given, which Baber is reported to have written, and shot into the town, tied to an arrow, to intimate his hatred of his alles It is not improbable that Baber could not conccal his disgust at the massaere of Karshi, and at the slights shown to lumself, that a misunderstanding ensued between him and the leaders of the Persians, and, that they were willing to shift the bad sneecss of the campaign, off themselves, by The hnus laying it upon him were,

Serfe ráhe Uzbekán kerdem Shahm Ger gunahi Ferdem, pák kerdem rahra,

and, it is added, that on the following day when the armes engaged, Baber, by drawing off his troops, caused the destruction of the Kezellin her then creed, and of having vexed the Shias, were con- cusp in sumed in the fire of his wrath In truth, he was a stern A P 1513 bigot and a merciless persecutor, a consequence of the religious found ition on which he established his government *

The futal bittle of Ghazhdewán, the destruction of Complexity ins Persian allies, and the numbers and power of the ghuls Uzbeks, seemed to leave Baber no hopes of again against Baascending the throne of Sunarkand and Bokhára - But. much as he had suffered, his misfortunes were not yet over When Sultan Said Khan was sent with the Moglinls to recover Andelan, a considerable number, both of those who had escaped from the Uzbek yoke and of those who had previously been in the country, cutered into Báber's service – He repeatedly complains, in his Memoirs, that on all occasions he had found the Moghuls a turbulent and treacherous race, ever ready for rebelhon, or to turn upon their friends when defeated, and to strip and plunder them Whether at this time they had any special ground for complaint, or whether they merely considered Báber's as a falling cruse, is not very clear Feishta says, that he gave them offence by reproveding them with their mis-conduct during the late expedition. At any rate a serious conspiracy was formed, at the head of which were the most enument Moghul chiefs, such as Mir Ayub Begeluk, Mír Muhammed, Yádgár Mírza, and Nazer Mirza, who formed a plan for cutting him off In execution of this purpose, they fell upon Báber's quarters by night, killing or wounding all who came in their way So sudden was the attack, that Báber, who, on the alarm, started from his bed, and rushed out, had difficulty in escaping, in the undress in which he slept, into the fort of Hissár The Moghuls, on at Hissar finding that they had missed their prey, plundered

* Tar Alem-arai, f 19

¥ 4

BOOK II. whatever was without the walls, and then, marching away, took up a position on the hills of Karatigin The Emperor, finding it impossible to keep the field with his remaining force, having left some trusty Amins to defend the fort, retured to Kunduz, and the whole country of Hissár, with the exception of the fort itself, fell into the hands of the Moghuls

Their procerdings in the country

No sooner were they masters of the country than they began to exercise every kind of violence and excess, on the persons and property of the wretched inhabitants. Assignments were granted, without the least regard to the ability of those who were to dis-charge them Whatever cattle, grain, or other procharge them Whatever cattle, grain, or other pro-perty the peasantry possessed, was torn from the owners, and squandered in wasteful prodigality A horrible famine ensued in the city of Hissár, and the few who survived supported life by the most loath-some and unnatural means These disgusting scenes were succeeded by a pestilence, and thousands of women and childien were sold into captivity among the Uzbeks The country presented a scene of misery and desolation, and, to add to the general distress, the winter being uncommonly severe, the ground was covered deep with snow Nor did the Moghuls them-selves escape They not only suffered from want of grain, but the snow, which buried the fields, speedily produced a want of forage for their horses produced a want of forage for their horses Obeidulla Khan, of Bokhára, hearing of their diffi-

Obeid Khan Invades Hissar,

Obeidulla Khan, of Bokhára, hearing of their difficulties, resolved to expel the Moghuls from Hissár, and entered the country towards the end of winter They were at a loss how to act They dared not apply to the Emperor after their late treachery; nor duist they join Sultan Saíd Khan, in Andeján, sensible that he would not sanction their lawless proceedings, and besides, the state of the roads did not admit of their crossing the mountains They, therefore, took up a strong position, having on one side the Surkháb 11ver, on the other two sides the Wakhsh hills, the remaining CHAP IV side, being covered by deep snow, they regarded as _ 1513-4 inaccessible The Uzbeks, when they arrived, reconnoitred the ground on every side In a few days, the increasing heat of the weather began to melt the snow. and Obeid Khan, effecting a passage by the narrow and broken ground, which had been considered as impassable, one day at early dawn reached their position, and fell upon the Moghuls Thus surprised, they did not and defeats attempt to make a stand, but threw themselves into them, the uver, which they tried to cross Numbers perished in the stream, or fell by the sword, or were made prisoners Such as escaped fled to the mountains, and a few, after enduring incredible hardships, reached Sultan Said Khan, in Fergána "In a word," says the historian, "Hissár, by the villany of these Moghuls, was lost to the Emperor, and fell under the power of - the Uzbeks "*

:

As long as there was any chance of a change of Báber refortune, Báber lingered at Kunduz, though, even there, Kabul exposed to much want and suffering At length, finding that all hope had vanished on every side, leaving Khan Mírza in Badakhshán, he once more reciossed the Hındú kúsh mountains, and returned to Kábul +

While these events were passing in Hissár, Sultan The Uz-Said Khan had retained possession of Baber's paternal beks recover Tashkingdom of Ferghána We have seen, that when the kend, Emperor's success had enabled hum to return to Samarkand, and the Uzbeks had fled into Túrkistán, he had given Táshkend to Mír Ahmed Kásim, and Sirám to Kitteh Beg, his brother, and, that when Obeidulla spring, Khan again crossed the Sir to invade Bokhára, Siúnjek A 19 18 A 19 1512 ~ Sultan had marched with his Uzbeks to recover Tásh-

Tar Resh ff 200-201

† Baber appears to have returned to Kabul, A H 919, or A H 920, in the end of A D 1513, or early in 1514, probably the latter See Tar Resh f 201 and 213, Akbernáma, Ferishta, &c

BOOK IL kend. After the unfortunate battle of Kúl-malek, Siúnjek besieged Táshkend with all his forces, and reduced it to great distress Mír Ahmed, seeing that every hope of retaining the town had vanished, made a bold sally by night, burst through the lines of the besiegers, and effected his escape *

Sultan Saíd invades Táshkend, defcated. A.H 918, Rejeb, A D 1512 Sept.

Defends Fergbána, In the course of the summer, Sultan Saíd, understanding that Báber was about to enter the territory of Bokhára, assisted by Persian auxiliaries, resolved to make a demonstration in his favour, by affording occupation to the Uzbeks in their own dominions He, accordingly, entered the Táshkend territory with five thousand men, and ravaged the country He was soon met by Siúnjek Sultan at the head of seven thousand Uzbeks, when a battle was fought, in which Sultan Saíd was defeated and wounded He returned to Andeján; but the Uzbeks, alarmed at the advance of the Emperor and Mír Nijm, turned all their attention $\gamma$ to Bokhára and Samarkand, and did not follow Saíd into Ferghána

When the issue of the battle of Ghazhdewán left the arms of Siúnjek once more at hberty, he advanced towards Andeján The winter was severe, the famine great, and the misery of the country extreme Sultan Saíd, seeing that it was impossible to meet him in the field, placed different Amírs with strong garrisons in Andeján, Akhsi, and Marghinán, while he himself retired to the hill-country on the south, so as to be prepared to harass and assail him, should he lay siege to any place Siúnjek, on finding that he was to be so vigorously opposed, retired and made no new attempt during the winter

Kasim Khan of the Kaizáks, called in. During all this winter, however, Kitteh Beg remainedshut up and besieged in Seirám As the revolt of the Moghuls in Hissár had taken place, and the Emperor's affairs were in such a desperate condition that he could CHAP IV render them no aid, both he and Sultan Said began to look around for some one who could assist them in their present danger, and none seemed so fit for that purpose as Kásun Khan, the chief of the Kaizáks

We have seen, that, in the time of the great Abulkhair Khan, the powerful ruler of the Uzbeks, Gerai Khan and Jani Beg Khan had separated from him, and formed a new confederacy in the desert, which, on the defeat and death of Abulkhair, when his followers were dispersed and his territories partitioned, had risen to great power under the name of Kaizáks, a denomination originally bestowed on them from their predatory life, and which they retained when more powerful * On the death of Gerai Khan, his son Beiendúk Khan succeeded, Jani Beg Khan had also several sons, and, among others, Uzbek Sultan and Kásım Khan Kásım Khan not only gained the superiority over his brother, but, in the course of time, became the chief leader of the Kaizáks, leaving Berendúk nothing but the name of Khan Such was the condition of the Kaizák tribes at this crisis In a short time afterwards, Kásim Khan expelled Berenduk, who fled to Samarkand, where he died in exile Kásim Khan, before his death, which happened five or six years after this time, overran the whole Desht-Kipchák, was said to be able to bring a million of men into the field, and to have been the most powerful prince who had been in that country since Jún Khan

When Kitteh Beg solicited the assistance of Kásim Plunders' Khan, the army of that potentate consisted of three the country, hundred thousand men The Beg sent to present him 1513, - -with the keys of Seirám, and to ask him to take pos-session of the country The Kaizák chief consented, marched with a large army by Tashkend, plundering

HISTORY OF INDIA

the country This attack delanged the plans of Siún-Sultan Saíd entered Táshkend, that he might form a junction with the Khan's army, but had not advanced far before he heard of Kásım's leturn to the deseit BOOKU On this the Sultan retreated, and soon after visited jek A D 1513 4 Kásım Khan, at a remote statıon ın hıs natıve wilds

Siúnjek did not attack Andeján all that summer, apprehensive of another invasion of the Kaizáks* In the following summer, however, Kásım Khan being occupied with his conquests in a distant part of the desert, Sıúnjek Sultan maiched, with a laige force of the confederate Uzbeks, towards Andeján Said Khan convened a council of his chiefs They were unanimously of opinion that, unsupported as they were, it would be absurd singly to contend with the mighty power of the Uzbeks, and that they had a much fairer chance of success by marching into Káshghai, and at tacking Ababeker Mírza, whom they had once before This resolution was accordingly adopted, and, before Siúnjek had time to enter the country, the Khan, with all his Amírs, their families and baggage, defeated set out from Andeján and advanced towards Káshghai, by the route of Moghulistán Their enterprise was successful Sultan Said expelled the tyrant Ababeker, and ruled Káshghar many years with honour and m

In this manner was Baber driven from his old dominions, as he had previously been from Hissin From prospenity

this period, except for a moment near the close of his life, he seems to have lost all hope of regaining either the country of Máwerannaher, or his native Feighána, and he was "led by divine inspiration," says the courtly and he was the up up in the reign of his grandson), "to-Abulfazl (writing in the reign of his grandson), "toturn his mind to the conquest of Hindustán" But though he never revisited those countries, we find, from * Tar Resh ff 209 211 93 and retreats.

Sultan Saíd abandons Ferghana. ▲ н 920 AD 1514

> Rebi 1 л н 920, May, A D 1514

J.

1

his Commentaries, that they never lost their influence CHAP IV over his imagination and affections He often speaks  $A^{p} 1514$ of them, and of the companions of his early life, and always with a warmth which proves how deep was the impression that both had made on his youthful heart

CHAPTER V

ARGHÚNS IN KANDAHÁR

BÁBER'S RETURN TO KÁBUL — REBELLION OF HIS MOGHULS QUELLED — HE CHASTISES THE HILL-TRIBES — TAKES BAJOUR. — SWÁD SUBMITS — AFFAIRS OF BADAKHSHÁN — AND OF KANDAHÁR. — SHAH BEG SUBMITS TO SHAH ISMAEL — IS THROWN INTO PRISON — PLOT TO DELIVER HIM — SUCCEEDS — HE TURNS HIS ARMS AGAINST SIND — MÁH-CHUCHAR — HER STORY, CAPTIVITY, AND ESCAPE — BÁBER'S SUCCESSIVE CAMPAIGNS AGAINST KANDAHÁR — WHICH IS SURRENDERED BY CONVENTION

BOOK II A 70 1514 -15 Báber returns to Kábul A 11 920, A 10 1514

- - -

Death of Násir Mirza, A 11 921, A D 1515 Rebellion of Moghuls and others

WHEN Báber, driven from Máwerannaher by the overwhelming force of the Uzbeks, returned to Kábul, his youngest brother Násir Mírza, to whom he had assignedthat kingdom when he conquered Samarkand, came out to receive him with every mark of honour and of welcome, and at once resigned to him the government He asked to be allowed to retain Ghazni, which he had held previously to the expedition against Máwerannaher, to which the Emperor willingly consented He soon after set out for that city, loaded with many marks of the imperial favour, but, in the course of the following year, he fell a victim to the excess of his habitual indulgence in wine *

His death was the signal for a mutiny and revolt among the great Moghul chiefs, in which several Chaghatái nobles also took a part The cause is not explained, but seems to have related to the succession to Ghazni and its dependent districts Shiram Taghái, the uncle of his mother, and who had all his life been in the service, Mír Mazíd Wajkeh his brother, Kúl

* He left a son Yádgár Násir of the following history Mírza, often mentioned in the course

Nazer, and in general all the Moghuls, rose in rebellion CHAP V They were joined by Moulána Bába Beshágheri, who A.D 1515 had been in such favour with the Emperor that he had only three years before been made governor of Samarkand, Uratippa, and the hill-country, by Mír Ahmed Kohbur, who so recently had been governor of Táshkend, by his brother, Kitteh Beg, the gallant defender of Seirám, and by many of the most distinguished nobles of the Emperor's court As to the causes and the details of the rebellion, we are left much in the dark The Emperor himself, in giving the character of Dost Beg, who died some years afterwards, incidentally remarks, that the Beg, having, in the course of this rebellion, been detached from Ghazni on a plundering expedition with two or three hundred men, was attacked by three or four hundred chosen Moghul horse, who were sent to chastise him They encountered him near "Shırúkán, when he completely beat them, dismounted and took a number of them prisoners, and brought back with him a quantity of heads * We are informed, in general, by Mirza Haider, that, after several skirmishes, encounters, and intrigues, the two armies were drawn out, when a battle ensued, that, at this crisis, Amír Kamber Ah, the son of Amír Kásım Kochın, Báber's favourite minister, arriving from Kunduz with a considerable force, fell upon and routed the right of the rebels, many of whom were taken and met with the Quelled reward of their treason, while others fled and escaped to Káshghar Shiram Taghái was, for some time, in the service of Sultan Saíd Khan, "but, unable to support himself," says Mírza Haider, "he returned back to the Emperor, who, with his usual benevolence, re-ceived him kindly, shutting his eyes upon his unworthy acts, and regarding only his past services He soon after left this transitory world "+

* Babers Mem p 266

BOOK II

A D 1515 -19 Báber subdues the hill-tribes

The quelling of this rebellion, and perhaps the banishment of the turbulent Moghuls, left Báber some years of comparative peace. This period he employed in arrangements for the government of his kingdom, and in checking or reducing to subjection the various mountain tribes on every side, which had hitherto yielded an imperfect obedience, or none, to the throne of Kábul To follow Báber in all his expeditions against the Hazáras, Aımáks, Afgháns, and other tribes in the hills and wilds, would lead into needless detail The history of them all is nearly the same He sets out secretly with a strong light force, marches without halting, comes upon the encampment of the tribe unawares, disperses or slays the men, and carries off the women, cattle, and valuables Sometimes, however, the clans are on their guard, and he meets with a brave resistance, when, after considerable loss to both parties, victory in the end inclines to the side of disciplined valour It 15hardly possible for governments constituted like those of the East, and possessed of no regular standing army, to subdue, and still less thoroughly to settle, the erratic tribes of the mountains and deserts, who always govern themselves most easily and effectually Báber, in some instances, forced them to acknowledge his supremacy, and to a certain degree restrained their inroads and subjected them to tribute, but, in general, down to the time when he conquered Delhi, the Afgháns maintained their independence, only sending tribute, with more or less punctuality, according as the means of enforcing it were nearer or more remote The Hazáras he often plundered and discomfited, but, as the greater portion of them were safe in their broken and inaccessible mountains and glens, though often defeated and pillaged they never could be said to be subdued, yet, like the Afghans, they were restrained for a time from plundering, as they had for ages been accustomed to do, on the lower grounds and passes of his territories

LIFE OF BABER

One portion of territory, which is at present compre-CHAP V hended in the Afghán country, though down to the A. D. 1519 period in question it had not belonged to the kingdom Baber takes of Kábul, he did however subdue The country be-Bajour tween the Cheghánseral river and the Indus was overrun by Báber, about fifteen years after his conquest of Kábul Thirty years before that last event, the Yusef- A H. 925 zai Afgháns, said to come from Khorásán*, had settled * D 1519 in the lower parts of that tract, expelling the Dilázáks, the former inhabitants This territory, which lies at the southern roots of the Hindú-kúsh range, and was highly cultivated, had, in older times, been held by the Sultans of Swad and Bajour, a race of princes whose authority appears, at one time, to have been very extensive, especially among the rich cultivated valleys of that hill-country The dominions of the Sultan of Swád, at one period, had even extended to both sides - of the Sind The Yusef-zais had succeeded in expelling the Dilázáks from part of the Swád territory, and had also encroached upon the Sultan, so that he had been compelled to retire into Upper Swád The Sultan of Bajour was still independent † Báber, when he entered the country, was attended by several Dılázák chiefs, who served him as guides, and directed his vengeance against their deadly enemies the Yusef-zais He first marched against the strong fort of Bajour, and the Sultan refusing to submit, he attacked it with engines of war, and with matchlocks, which were quite new to the garrison The alarm which these produced, as soon as their effects were experienced, was employed to cover an escalade that proved successful The whole male inhabitants, three thousand in number, including their sultans or chiefs, were cruelly put to the sword as infidels, and a pillai erected of their heads The women

* It must be observed, that the of Ghazni term Khorásan is very indefinite, term Khorásan is very indefinite, † Baber's Mem p 14 often including all the country west phinstone's Caubul, p 246

Z

† Baber's Mem p 140, El-

VOL Ι 337

BOOK II

A D 1519

Swad submits.

Convention with the

Yusef-zals

and children were led into bondage Báber, seated in state in the palace of the Sultan, bestowed the government of the country on Khwája Kilán *

Immediately on hearing of these transactions, Sultan Wais of Swad sent to offer his submission, which was accepted † The Emperor then proceeded to plunder Penjkora, and some neighbouring districts The Yusef-zais sent ambassadors to soothe his resentment, and as, from experience, he had found the difficulty of subduing them by open force in the rugged country which they occupied, he sought to conciliate men whom it was not always easy to chastise or to reach, by asking in marriage the daughter of Malek-shah Mansúr, one of their chiefs ‡ This union, which in the opinion of barbarians deeply imbued with all the feelings of clanship, gave him a strong and intimate connection with the tribe, assisted in checking the customary raids and outrages of several of its branches, for, with others, hostilities seem to have continued The final agree-ment with the friendly Yusef-zais was, that they should make no inroads into Swad above Anúha, the amount of contribution (or black-mail), which they had been accustomed to levy higher up, being allowed as a deduction in the rolls of their revenue collections, and that the Afghans, who cultivated lands in Bajour and Swad, should pay six thousand loads (about thirty-eight thousand cwts.) of grain, to the government  $\delta$

Báber's in ronds on the Afgháns It may be imagined that it was no easy task to restrain tribes which, like those around Kábul, had for ages been accustomed freely to indulge in robbery and insubordination of every kind, and it should seem that hardly a year passed in which Báber did not make inroads into the country of some one or other of them, to chastise their licentiousness, to protect his more peaceable subjects, and sometimes, perhaps, for the less

- * Báber's Mem p 246-249 ‡ Ibid p 250
- † Ibid p 249

§ Ibid p 268

hudable object of plundering them of then wealth, or CHAP V of reducing them to subjection *

During this period the subordinate kingdom of Affairs of Bidaklishán continued to be governed by Khan Mírza, Badakhwhose cucumstances had been considerably improved, by the freedom from Uzbek invasion afforded by Báber's invasions of Transoniana Some years afterwards, the Mirzy lind the misfortune to have a difference with" Sultan Sud Khan, of Káshghar

The ground of it originated long before Khan Mírza had taken possession of Badakhshán, and while Báber was still in Ferghana In the latter part of Khosrou Shih's reign, over Kunduz and Badakhshán, Mírza Ababeker of hishghar had seized some of the high mountain districts, or Huzáras, of the latter country, such as Sárigh-Julán, Perwáz and others Before Khosrou could Perhaps obtain redress, he fell before the superior fortunes of An 909 Sheibáni Khun, and Báber When Sheibáni took possession of Khosrou's other dominions, the Mírza refused to yield these Hazáras to hun, and many battles were

 Baber humself records several of his forays and inroads into the countries of the tribes around Kabul, such as that against the Sultan-Masaudi Hazaras, south-cast of Kabul, (A 11 910, V p 1504) Mem p 156 The most remarkable was the grand circuit already mentioned, which he made just after mounting the throne of Kabul, when he went, first against the Afghans of Kohat, thence through Banu, Bangash, and Daman, down the Indus to the Multan territory, and the borders of Sind, in the course of which, he plundered the Isa-khail and other tribes, and returned through a desolate country by Chottali and Abistadeh to Ghazni, (A 11 910, A p 1505) Mem p 157-166 He next year (A H 911, A D 1506) plundered the Turkomán

Hazaris, near Bamian, seized numbers of sheep and horses, and slew many of the tribesmen-Ibid p 178, and again, (A H 912, A D 1507), p 212, 213 He beat the Khizer-khail, Shimu khail, Khirilji, and Khugiani Afghans, when attempting to obstruct his march in the pass below Jagdalik, and plun-* dered the Alishing Afghans and the Kafirs (A H 913, A D 1507) p 232, 233 He plundered the Yuzef zais and Muliammed-zais of the plains, (A II 925, A D 1519) p 251 and 274 He plundered the Abdal-rahman Afgháns in Gurdiz, making a tower of the heads of the slain, p 270, and the Khizerkhail, p 277, imposed a tribute of four thousand sheep on the Khirilehi, and Shamu-khail - Ibid. Other instances occur nook II in consequence fought with the Uzbeks Mírza Ababeker continued, however, to retain in his power all above the upper passes of Badakhshán

At a future time, when Khan Mírza came into possession of a part of the country, we have seen that he was much straitened and kept down by the vicinity and power of the Uzbeks, and that he was unable to •recover any of the usurpations of Mírza Ababeker, who continued to hold Sárigh Junán and all the highlands above the narrows, which, for the space of twelve years, remained separated from Badakhshán and united to Káshghar

Quarrel of Sultan Said and Khan Mirza,

A II 921

When Sultan Said, driven from Ferghána by the Uzbeks, attacked and defeated Mírza Ababeker, and took possession of the territories of Káshghar, he divided these upper districts of Badakhshán among his Amírs, in the same way as he did the country of Káshghar Mír Beg Muhammed, who was sent as governor, claimed the districts of Wakhan and Derwáz, as belonging to the Káshghar Hazáras, as well as Sárigh-Juián, while the inhabitants of the two former asserted their right to belong to Badakhshán, and claimed protection from Khan Mírza

The Mírza readily acceded to their request He had long had an eye on these districts, which he considered as part of Badakhshán, or rather as being in reality Badakhshán itself, since from them the rest of the country took its name Sultan Saíd, on the other hand, claimed them under a twelve years' possession, which, he contended, had broken the old right, and transferred them to Káshghai, adding, that Khan Mírza, in seizing them by force, had rendered it impossible for the Khan to yield them up to him as a friend and relation, even had he, from other considerations, been disposed so to do

Said invades The Khan followed up his remonstrances by leading Badakh an ai my into Badakhshán. Khan Míiza, totally inable A H 924 to meet him in the field, shut himself up in Kila- CHAP V Zefei, while Said ravaged the country The Mirza, now heartily repenting his ill-judged enterprise, made the humblest submissions, and Sultan Said Khan. seeing his weakness, and unwilling that his dominions should be totally runed, took pity on him and retired but retires No farther attempt was made, during Khan Mirza's life. to recover these Hazáras *

Khan Mírza died about A H 926, leaving a son, A H 926, Suleiman Mírza, a child, whom Báber sent for and A > 1520kept near himself, at the same time giving Badakhshán, as a dependent principality, to his eldest son, Humáyun Mírza That prince went, took possession of it, and governed it nearly ten years During that period, he seems to have resided much in the country He left it IN A H 932, when he attended his father, with the troops of Badakhshán, on his last invasion of India, from AH 933, which, after the defeat of Rána Sanga, he led them back to their own country †

From the period of Báber's return from Transoxiana the two great objects that engaged his mind were, the conquest of Kandahár, and that of Hindústan

We have already seen, that he was hardly settled in Babers the possession of Kábul and Ghazni when he attempted transactions with Kand-to add Kandahár to his other dominions, that he had abár very early succeeded in overrunning its territory, and  $\frac{A n}{A \cdot D} \frac{1913}{1507}$ had even besieged and taken the capital, but that Sheibáni had wrested from him his new acquisitions, and restored them to Shah Beg, the eldest son of Zúlnún

The conquest of Kandahán was not an easy task Shah Shujaa Beg, who now governed that country and jan Beg several other dependent provinces, was a prince of great talent, a brave soldier, a piudent politician, popular both with the army and with his subjects, and an en-

Shah Shu-

^{*} Tar Resh f 272, 278 Ferishta, u p 37

⁺ Baber's Mem p 373, Briggs's lightened patron of letters and of learned men. It would BOOK II appear, that, on his father's death, finding himself placed in Kandahár, between the force and activity of Báber on the one side, and the overwhelming power of Sheibáni on the other, he early saw that the physical resources of the provinces which he possessed were quite inadequate to resist either of these princes, the different parts of his kingdom being, from their local situation, unable to afford each other that ready help which is necessary, either for attack or defence, in time of need. He had therefore thrown himself on the protection of Sheibáni, and is said to have struck the coin and read the public prayers in his name Sheibáni not only enabled him to recover Kandahár from Báber, but showed him other marks of favour, during his own transient possession of Khorásán*

л II 881, л D 1479

takes Siwi A 11 890, A D 1486 It has already been observed, that soon after acquiring Kandahár, Zúlnún Beg had added to his possessions Shál and Mustung, which lie at some distance in the southern wilds † About four years later, his son, Shah Beg, besieged and took the fort of Síwí, which Beháder Khan then held for the Jám; and, having left there his younger brother, Muhammed Beg, returned to Kandahár Muhammed seems to have pushed his plundering parties as far as Ikerí and Chandúka, in the territory of Sind Jám Nanda, who was then the sovereign of that country, sent a large force, under Mobárek Khan, to protect his subjects Mobárek encountered the Arghúns in a hot action, in which Muhammed fell, his army was defeated, and Síwí retaken ‡ hut loses it

* Tar Sind f 94

† Abont a hundred and fifty miles — Tar Sind f 73

‡ Far Sind, f 68 Chandula Sitharja 18 Chand-koh, Ikeri or Ukeri, I do not know It may be Lhari Jam Nanda's force 18 said to have engaged Muhammed at Dera-Feríb, better known as Jılougır, both names with which I am unacquainted Abulfazl calls Shah – Beg's brother, Sultan Muhammed, Ayeen Akbery, vol 11 p 120, as does the Tabakáte Akberi, Ferishia, vol 11 p 427, calls Shah Beg's conquest, the fort of Sewly, which Resolves to submit.

Repairs to Herát,

Thrown Into prison.

When Shah Ismael defeated the Uzbeks and took possession of Khorásán, the Arghún ehief, the principal part of whose dominions were dependent on that country, was once more filled with appreliension Soon after the battle of Merv, the victorious Persian sent a detachment, which advanced as far as Sistán, on its route to Kandahár, for the purpose of enforcing the claims which he had over it, in right of his recent conquest. This brought matters to a crisis, and we soon after find Shah Beg holding a council of his nobles To them he represented the difficult position in which, by the defeat of Sheibáni, his protector, he was placed, between the Persian and Chaghatái princes, and pointed out the impossibility of successfully resisting a monarch like Shah İsmael, then in the height of his power. therefore deelared that he had come to the resolution, as on the whole the best he could adopt, to accompany to the royal presence the general of the Persian troops _ that had been sent against him, on the guarantee of that officer for his safety, and to make his submission to the Shah, in person At the same time he sent a mission to Kábul, to conciliate Báber *

On his arrival at Herát, he met with a gracious reception, was excused the eeremony of prostrating himself before the sovereign, according to what was now become the received etiquette of that court, and was only required to bend the knee, in conformity with the Chaghatái usage After he had remained there some time, and seemed to have gained all that he had desired, it was settled that he was to take leave on his return home, at the approaching festival of the Noroz  $\dagger$ But before that day arrived, things took another turn The Persian general was sent to the castle of Ekhtiáreddín, and Shah Beg himself was thrown into prison

Beg was certainly in possession of Kahan when Båber conquered Ixabul * Tar Sind ff 98, 99

† The Persian new-year, at the vernal equinox

BOOK II

In dread

from Shah Ismael,

л и 917.

A D 1511

sweetineats and pastry for the occasion, in which he had mixed a strong narcotic, disposed of them as usual among the guards, who were thus in a short time ren-dered quite insensible. He then passed the sleeping guard, accompanied by two of his associates, made his way good to Shah Beg's room, and, by means of some ropes which they brought for the purpose, assisted him to descend on that part of the tower which opened on the outside of the fact of Zefer. The rore herearch BOOK IL the outside of the foit of Zefer The rope, however, having broken, he fell from some height, and, in the fall, his manacles, from which they had not been able to disengage him, knocked out one of his teeth In spite of this accident, his friends, who were waiting below, got him mounted, and they all set out on horses, shod, it is said, backwards, to mislead the pursuers Thev rode incessantly for two nights and a day, when, getting a change of horses, they resumed their route, and went on without halting, till they arrived on safe ground As soon as the keepers of the tower recovered their senses, and found the prisoner gone, a hot pursuit com-menced, but in vain The fugitives were already too much ahead to be overtaken *

Turns his views towards Sind

AD 1511 -1514.

It was now more evident than ever to Shah Beg, how little he could depend upon the favourable disposition of either of his neighbours Fortunately, the occupation afforded to Shah Ismael by his wars against the Ottomans in the west, and the attempts of Báber, im-mediately after the overthrow of Sheibáni, to conquer from the Uzbeks the ancient possessions of his family beyond the Amu, withdrew the attention of both for some years from the kingdom of Kandahái, and afforded leisure to Shah Beg, who was sensible that this respite was but temporary, deliberately to consider his situation, and to mature his plans

Consults

When affairs were somewhat settled in Kandahár, he

* Tar Sind f 100

assembled his Arghúns and Terkháns, who had always CHAP V preserved much of the original spirit and equality of with his then tribes, and addressed them on the danger of their chiefs, position, between the kingdoms of Khoiásán and Kábul, and pointed out the expediency, while there was yet time, of securing some place of refuge, which might ieceive them in case of necessity His views were shared by them all, and the entire possession of Siwi was naturilly pitched upon for their first attempt. It lay on the side most icmote from their powerful neighbours, it possessed a natural barrier of sugged mountains, and of long and difficult passes, while, at the same time, the possession of it would be a step towards the ultimate conquest of the rich and extensive kingdom of Sind

Siwi or Siwistán, a name which seems then to have Takes Siwi been applied to a larger portion of the territory between the Afghan and Baluch country than now goes under that denomination, was held partly, as we have seen, by Shah Beg, and partly by the family of Sultan Perowli Birlás*, of the old Túrki race, who, on hearing of Shah Beg's intentions, sent him a friendly mission, with such presents as he could command They were accepted, but did not prevent Shah Beg from entering his territories, and coming by surprise on his town, also called Siwi, which he took, some of the inhabitants submitting, while others fled to Fatehpúr †, the most populous distriet of the province After this success, Shah Beg, having sent back part of his troops to guard Kandahár, himself pushed on to Fatehpúr, which was fifty kos from Siwi, on the load to the Sind, but which, says the historian, is now desolate, though its walls and houses are standing t Here Sultan Perowli attacked him, with two or three thousand horse of the neigh-

* Also written Berawli and Herawali I am by no means satisfied as to the date of these transactions

+ I know not where to look for

Fatchpur, unless it he the present Shikarpur

‡ He wrote A и 1009 (A и 1600)

BOOK IL bouring tribes * that he had collected, but victory favoured the invaders, and such of the vanquished as escaped fied towards the Sind Shah Beg now returned to Síwí, where he remained for some time, and, with a view to his future residence, gave directions for building some palaces, and for laying out gardens for himself and his nobles He also erected a castle, after which, leaving proper officers to settle and govern the province, he hastened back to Kandahár †

Mahchuchak Her story

It was on his return from one of the expeditions which he undertook at this time, for the pulpose of extending his dominions towards the south, that an incident occurred which may deserve notice, both as connected with the history of Shah Beg and his successors, and as illustrative of the manners of the age When Báber took Kandahár, the whole families of the Arghún chiefs fell into his hands, and among others Mahchuchak Begum, the daughter of Muhammed Mokim, Shah Beg's brother This lady, as Baber himself informs us, was married, a few months after, to Kásim Gokultásh ‡, an officer of distinguished ment, to whom Báber was much attached, and to whom, at a subsequent period, he owed his life. But this alhance, formed in captivity, seems to have been painful to her relations, and was probably considered as not suitable to her rank By Kásun she had only one daughter, Nahíd Be gum, who afterwards became celebrated in the history of Sind §

Pinn for her escape, The disgrace of having a princess of their illustrious house in a secondary situation, in a foreign land, rankled in the minds of the ladies of the haram On Shah Beg's leturn from Siwi, in the midst of the re-

• These are specified to have been the Doulat-shahas, Barghdius, Korhais, Lorgihis, Buluches, and other tribes — Far Sind f 96 † Tar Sind f 96 ‡ Mem p 233 The instructor appears to have taken place A II 913, in the winter of A D 1507-8 § Tar Sind f 95

- 3

joicings which took place on the occasion, Mokim's curry widow presented herself, in the garb of a mourner, standing upright, in the doorway of the palace, with a coarse black woollen cloth thrown over her head, in sign of her deep distress She laid hold of the skirt of his garment as he entered, and with loud lamentation and tears besought him to have pity on her daughter, all that was now left of his beloved biother, and to release her from her shameful bondage Shah Beg, moved by her miscry, and by the remembrance of his brother who had died not long before, thus forcibly brought to his mind, expressed his willingness to attempt whatever could be done to effect the object of her wishes Success was not easy, and the consultations which he held with his nobles produced nothing satisfactory Α plan was, however, devised by the ladies in the haram, and met with his acquiescence It was airanged that , some one should be sent to open an intercourse with the puncess, and, when she was fully prepared, that means should be taken to carry her off from Kábul into the hills of the Hazina country that were nearest that city, secure that, when once among the friendly mountameers, she would soon find her way in safety to Kandahar

In pursuance of this plan, Doulat Kitta, a female who had been a servant in Mokim's haram, was despatched to Kábul, but before setting out, in compliance with the demands of eastern decorum, she was married to one Doulat Khan. On arriving at Kibul, she contrived to introduce herself to the Beguin, as a helpless stranger and when a safe opportunity offered discovered herself and revealed the plan. The princess, surprised and alarmed, refused- to enter into the plot, and expressed her tears that should she reach Kandah in her proud relations would consign her to the grave, to bury deep the stigma brought on them by her captivity Doulat Kitta relieved her apprehensions by taking the BOOK II. most solemn oath that no such intention was entertained, and that, on the contrary, the warmest welcome awaited her from her mother and her uncle Máh Begum wasat last prevailed upon to consent, the news was conveyed to Kandahár, and a select body of the first warriors and chief nobles of the kingdom was secietly despatched on the service They took their way through the country of the Hazáras, and pushed on for the capital, having arranged with the chiefs of that tribe that they should take post on the point of their mountains nearest to Kábul, with a body of their followers, to be ready to support the party on its return. On getting near Kábul, they rested for two or three days, at a short distance from the town, to refresh their horses, and, it is said, to have them shod backwards which succeeds,

When everything was in readiness, Máh Begum, on the day fixed for the attempt, left her house about the time of afternoon prayers, to repair to the bath, the great place of recreation and freedom for Musulman women Having waited till the moment when the streets were covered with the crowds leaving the mosques, she mingled with them, and, protected by the impenetrable disguise worn by Musulman ladies, which covers the whole body, leaving only an opening for the eyes, made her way, unnoticed, among the throngs eyes, made her way, unnoticed, among the throngs that were passing to and fro She reached in safety a convenient spot that had been fixed upon, where she was mounted on horseback, and conducted by Doulat Kitta to the party which waited her coming Her daughter, Nahid, then a child of only eighteen months old, and unable to bear the fatigue of the flight, was of necessity left behind The instant she appeared, the whole party, delighted, leaped on horseback and setout along with her All that night, and the next day, and the night following, they held on their way In the course of the succeeding day, they arrived at their halting-place Here, having rested awhile to recruit

then exhausted strength, they went on for a day and CHAR'S night more, by which time they had escaped from the dangerous ground, and found themselves in sufc quarters among the friendly Hazáras

They now halted for a few days, that the princess Mah Be-might rest from her futigues, and then went on to Kandabár Kunduhár As she approvehed that place, the grand scene of her hopes and fears, Shah Beg eame forth to receive and welcome her, with every demonstration of joy, saluted and embraced her affectionately as his brother's daughter, tiented her with every mark of honour, conducted her to the palace, and there, taking her by the hand, placed her in the arms of her mother and her nurse It was a day of general rejoicing, as for a great victory All who had been engaged in the enterprise were rewarded with presents of horses, aims, or dresses of honour In adventures and rescues such is these the Arghins delighted, and their predatory habits taught them, like our horderers, to manage them with the utmost address and sagacity

For some time preceding these events, Mah Begum's Anecdote or husband, Kásim Gokultásh, had attended Báber in har hus-hand his wars beyond the Oxus against the Uzbeks It happened, on one occasion, that the Emperor, while alone, was surrounded and taken by a party of the enemy His troops were not near enough to assist him The gallant Kásim, with admirable presence of mind, going up, and personating the Emperor, exclaimed, "How dare you touch a servant of mine? Do you not know your prince ?" Deceived by his words, they let go Báber, to turn to what they supposed a richer prize, and, in the scuffle that ensued, the Emperor escaped ~ The Uzbeks put Kásun to death, but Baber ever after cherished and protected his family, and all his dependents, with the most affectionate care After Kásim's death, - which, according to one authority, occurred about a year after her reseue, - his widow married her

351

HISTORY OF INDIA.

BOOK II cousin, Shah Hussein, the eldest son and heir of Shah Beg, and, on his death, she married Mírza Isa Terkhán, who succeeded him in the kingdom of Tatta Her daughter, Nahíd, Báber gave in marriage to Mahib Ah, the son of his prime minister, Nízám-ed-din Ah Khalífa, and her name often appears, at a later period, in the history of Sind *

Báber plans the conquest of Kandahár A H 920, A D 1514

Marches against it,

probably n 923

The repose, which Báber's expedition against Bokhára and Samarkand had afforded to Shah Beg and the Arghúns, was at an end when the Emperor returned to Kábul, disappointed and discomfited He had no sooner arranged the affairs of his kingdom, which he found in a state of disorder, than he directed his views, with more determination than he had ever yet done, towards the conquest of Kandahár The time was favourable, as the attention of Shah Ismael was entirely and painfully occupied by his war in the west with the Ottoman Sultan, Selím, in which he had recently suffered a greatdefeat We have seen, however, that Shah Beg was not taken by surprise He had long anticipated such an attack, and had not only extended his dominions to the south, but had collected, within the strong town and citadel of Kandahár, all the warlike stores and pro-visions that he could command, and had also strengthened the defences, and manned them with his bravest and most experienced adherents To avoid being attacked by surprise, on hearing that Báber had assembled a large army, he sent spies into the imperial camp, to bring him regular information of its numbers, and of the direction in which it moved From them he at last learned, that a formidable army, under Báber himself, was on its march for Kandahár As it approached that place, Báber was attacked with a dangerous illness,which so much alarmed his army, whose confidence was placed chiefly in him individually, that great trepidation

* Akbernáma, Abulfazl, f 206, Taríkhe-Sind, as above prevailed in the camp Shah Beg, with much address, CHAP V seizing the favourable moment for negotiation, sent a mission to the Emperor, composed of the chief men of Kaudahár, who carried uch offerings, at the same time soliciting for a perce Báber, as Shah Beg had foreseen, glad of a pretext for retreating with honour, accepted the presents, and, as if satisfied by his representations, sending him a dress of honour, took his way back to Kibul *

The Emperor's retreat gave some further breathing shah Begs time to Shih Beg, as the direct attempts on Kandahár do not seem to have been renewed for some years But he is said to have declared that he clearly saw, that, independent of Baber's ambition, two circumstances would impel that prince never to desist till he had conquered Kaudahn The first was the mistaken policy of his brother Mokim, in seizing Kábul, a royal seat, held by a member of the family of Taimur, an insult which nevel would be forgiven, the second was the very great number of princes connected with the royal family, and of nobles of distinction, who filled the court of Baber, and for whom no provision could now be made, either in Máweiannaher or Khorásán †

But while affairs bore this unfavourable aspect on Deuthor the side of Kábul, the factions and civil wars which, in Sind, had followed the death of Jám Nanda, in consequence of the minority of his son Jám Firóz, and the consequent misciv of the inhabitants, rekindled in Shah Beg the hopes which he had long cherished of effecting something considerable in that quarter In the beginning shah Beg of the winter of the following year, he dispatched, into Blunders Kahan and the territory of Sind, a small detachment of a thousand Baghban ~-horse, who plundered Kahan and Baghbán, two thriving 18 Zikad and populous townships belonging to that country gives some idea of the extent of their cultivation to

Jám Nanda

It A D 1518, 21 Nov

* Tar Sind, ff 100, 101 VOL I

AA

† Tar Sind, ut supra

Accommo dation

alarms

BOOK II A D 1519 --20

His son flees to Báber

Baber invades Kandahár A H 925, A D 1519, A H 926, A D 1520 learn, that, from the last of these towns, the invaders, among other plunder, carried off no fewer than a thousand camels, which were employed in turning wheels to supply water for irrigation *

It was about this time that Shah Hasan Arghún, Shah Beg's son, in consequence of some dispute with his father, fled to the court of Báber He was courteously received and honourably entertained by that prince, with whom he became a favourite Báber is said to have taken pleasure in initiating him into the arts of government, and to have predicted that he would one day become an eminent prince He remained nearly two years with the Emperor, when, a reconciliation with his father having been effected, he returned home †

The next year, Báber was employed in quelling the refractory Afgháns, and in invading the Penjáb, and the year following, he again entered the Penjáb, and had advanced as far as Siálkót on the Chenáb, when he -was recalled by an invasion of his territory from Kandahár, of the particulars of which we are not informed ‡ As he had now made up his mind to his long-cherished and favourite design of invading India, an enterprise for which the circumstances of that country had become peculiarly favourable, he resolved, setting every other object aside, to exert the whole force of his dominions in the conquest of Kandahár, a measure which he considered to be an indispensable preliminary to the success of his Indian enterprise, since he could not, with safety, leave behind him an enemy so powerful and so able as Shah Beg He therefore marched back from the Penjáb, and having expelled the invaders from his territory, at once advanced into theirs He first of all ravaged the country of the Hazára and Nukderi tribes, who-A famine had probably been the immediate aggressors

Famine —

at that time desolated the country of Kandahán Ne- CHAP y vertheless, he sat down before the capital, which he began to attack regularly by mining and by battering its walls At the same time, he subjected it to a close Siege of Kandahar blockade, and, the town being probably worse provisioned than usual, in consequence of the prevuling scarcity, the townspeople were soon reduced to the greatest distress for want of food To famine succeeded pestilence, which, having spread into Baber's camp, early in the summer, compelled him to ruse the siege, turned into perhaps without altogether relinquishing the blockade

But Biber was fixed in his purpose, and, though Baber lays Mehter Sambal, now became a fivourite general of country, Shuh Begs, contrived to throw a supply of provisions  $A = \frac{927}{4 p}$  1521 into the town, yet Bábei, next season, after maieling over the country while the crops were yet on the ground, and earrying off and destroying the harvest, renewed the netwe siege of the town, and made the blockade closer than ever Shah Beg, who meanwhile had been pushing on his operations in Sind with great success, and who, in the course of the year, took possession of Tatta itself and completed the subjugation of the country, finding his aft urs in Kundahár ieduced to the Inst extremity, sent an cinbassy to the Emperor with proposals for peace Negotiators from both sides Convention having inet, a treaty was soon concluded and signed, eventual by which it was stipulated, that Shah Beg should hold surrender of handabar. Kandahár till the following year, when the city and all the dependent provinces were to be delivered up to the Emperor The interval thus allowed, Shah Beg employed in removing his own family and effects, and those of his followers and adherents, in the first instance, to Shál and Síwi, and next year, when Báber which is again advanced to Kandahár, the keys of that capital, up to and of the citidel were presented to him by Mir Ghiás- Baber An 929, ed-din^{*}, the nephew of the historian Khondemir, the A p 1522

A D 1620 -22

Kandahár,

* The Tarikhe-Sind calls him the father of Mir Abul-Mokarem, f 109

HISTORY OF INDIA.

BOOK 1L celebrated author of the Habib-es-Seir The Emperor, at the same time, took possession of the whole country of Kandahár and its dependencies, including parts of the Germsír along the course of the Helmend, which formed the utmost limit that his empire ever reached in that direction *

> * In this account of the reduction of Kandahár we are not assisted by Abulfazl, and but hitle by Ferishta or Kháfi Khan The Taríkhe-Sind is the principal authority, and its chronology is very perplexing Ferishta says, (vol 11 p 37) that the siege lasted three years, Kháfi Khan

(f 25) says, four, and Mírza Haider (Taríkh Reshidi, f 275) says, five Operations were carried on for several years, probably rather by wasting the country and blockading the town, than by a regular siege 357

CHAPTER VI

ARGHUN CONQUEST OF SIND AND MULTÁN

SECTION I

CONQUEST O1 SIND

TRANSACTIONS IN SIND — SUCCESSIVE DYNASTIES — REIGN OF  $J \{M\}$ FIRÓZ - MISRULE AND REBFLLION - SHAR BFG CAILED IN - HE TAKES TATTA - UPPER SIND CEDED TO HIM - REVOLT AGAINST THE ARGHUNS -- USURPATION OF SILAH-ED-DIN, WHOM SHAH BFG DEFEATS AND SLAYS IN BATTLE - SHAH BEG'S MEASURES TO SETTLE THE COUNTRY - HE WAKES BHERFR HIS CAPITAL -DEATH OF SHAH BEG -HIS CHARACTER.

HAVING accompanied the Arghúns so long in then progress, during their rise and fall in Kandahár, it may Tringebe convenient, while their history is yet familiar to the reader, to follow the dynasty into the territory of Sind, to which they turned their arms, and thus prevent the necessity of interrupting the course of the narrative at a future period

During part of the last years of his possession of Kandabar Kandahár, Shah Beg had been employed in removing the families and property of his retainers to Shál and Siwi, beyond the limits of that kingdom These became his place of arms in the invasion of Lower Sind, an undertaking which he had long meditated and now resolved upon Indeed, the undisturbed and quiet way in which he iemoved from Kandahár, so unlike the ordinary transactions of the age, and the good terms A A 3

CHAP VL SECT I

tions in Sind.

Shah Beg

BOOK II on which he and his successor appear to have subsequently lived with Báber, make it not improbable that his giving up Kandahár was attended with an understanding, that he was to be allowed unmolested to attack Sind, and provide for his numerous tribesmen and retainers, whom that event had thrown destitute, by estates which their sword could conquer on the Successive fertile banks of the Indus

Successive Dynasties of Sind

дн 740, др 1340

Extent of territory

Sind, the country in which Shah Beg, thus expelled from Kandahár, resolved to establish the seat of his government, though conquered by the Muhammedan Khalifs in the end of the first century of the Hejra, was not long retained by them It was afterwards, for some time, governed by a race, who, as they are said to have been descended from the Ansaris, or companions of Muhammed, must have been Musulmans To them succeeded the Sumras, a native tribe, who, with some intervals, reigned till about A H 740, when, they were expelled by the Sammas, a tribe distinguished by the name of Jám This dynasty, which sometimes was subject to Delhi, and sometimes shook off its yoke, still continued to reign when Shah Beg tuined his eyes towards their dominions

Jám Nanda^{*}, who was the reigning prince in the time of Shah Beg's father, and for some time after his own accession, appears to have possessed an extensive territory, which originally reached from the ocean to the Multán territory, above Bheker, on the one side, and from the Rájpút desert and Kach, to the Bolán Pass and Balúchistán, on the other, comprehending, the Delta of the Indus and the country on both sides of the river to some distance from its banks, especially Sehwán, with Shíkárpore, Kach-Gandava, and part of Síwistán Some portion of these dominions, we have

* They pretended that they were descended from the Persian Jamshid, whence they called their Makádam or Kilanter, Jám Tabakáte Akberi, f 506 however seen, had been wrested by the Arghúns from curr vr Jam Nanda, in his lifetime *

* There is much confusion in the latter years of the Sind dynasty, and especially as to the date of the close of Jam Nanda's reign

The dates on the margin of Briggs's Ferishta, vol. iv pp 423— 430, are, I presume, those of the translator, carrying forward the reigns of the successive princes, according to the number of years allotted to them in the text Jam Nanda's death is placed A II 894

The Tarikhe-Sind makes Jam Radhan assume the masnad, A II 858, Jemadi, 1 6 According to it, he reigned eight years and a half, when he was poisoned by Jám Sanjer, who succeeded, and reigned eight years To him Nanda succeeded, A II

, Rebi 1 25 The year is confusedly written, but seems 8-4

Now, eight years and six months from A H S58, Jemadi 1 6 would bring the commencement of Sanjer's reign to A H. 866, Zikada 6, and the eight years of Sanjer's reign to A H -874, Zikada 6, within less than two months of A H 875, but, both the Tabakat and Ayin Akberi allow him a few months beyond the eight years, which would bring him into A H 875, and the fortyeight years assigned to Jam Nanda's reign, in the Tarikh, would bring his death to A 11 823, the date assigned to 1t 111 the Farikhe Sind, f 103 I his is too late to agree with known facts But if Jam Rudhan's reign of eight years and a halfbe deducted, it brings us back to A 11 914

Abulfazl in his list, Ayin Akberi, vol 11 p 122 makes Jam Radman (Radhan) and Jam Saujer the same person, and assigns only eight years and some months to both None of the lists, except that of the Tar Sind, gives a separate place to Jam Radhan, though the details presented in that work hardly admit of the supposition that they are the same person If we strike out Jain Radhan's reign, preserving the date of his accession as that of Jam Sanjer's, Jam Nanda's accession would be A H S66, and his death л п 914

The kbolaset-ul-Towarikh, f 344, following the Far Behader-Shahi, makes Jam Silah-ed-din lead an army into Sind, A II 918 His last invasion, when he expelled Jam Firoz was in A ii 926, immediately before the conquest of Sind, A H 927(Ferishta, vol 1v pp 429, 430) And Abulfazl in the Ayin Akberi, vol. 11 p 122, gives Jam Firoz twelve years of reign, before his expulsion by Sılah-ed-dın Taking this to mean the second invasion of A H 926, would bring Jám Firóz s accession to A H 914 Shah Husein took possession of Tatta in A H 927, though Jám Firoz maintained a contest for some time later

On this hypothesis, Jám Nanda dued about  $^{\text{H}}$  914, Jám Silahed-din invaded Sind,  $^{\text{H}}$  918 and 926, Tatta was taken possession of by Sbah Husein,  $^{\text{H}}$  1927

In fixing on A H 927 for the

Jám Firóz, a minor Probably about

BOOK II

лп 914, др 1508

Misgovern ment

On Jám Nauda's death, the country was exposed to all the evils of a disputed succession IIIs son, Jáin Fuóz, being a minor, Siláli-ed-dín, his relation, the grandson of Jám Sinjer, the piedecessoi of the late prince, openly aspired to the crown But Jám Firó, being supported by Deria Khan, the minister, and by the chief families and holy men of Tatta, was finally established on the throne Siláh-ed dín, compelled to flee, reparred to Gújrát, where he remained several years with Mozefter Shah, with whom he was connected by marriage During a portion of that time, Suid enloyed repose, but, as Jám Filóz giew to manhood, like other princes educated in ease and pleasure, he gave himself up entirely to sensual and selfish enjoyment, neglecting the affairs of his government The natural consequence ensued IIIs countiers and the Sammas of his tribe were guilty of much oppression, both among the townspeople and the inhabitants of the country, who were of a different race from themselves, and the Jám, in spite of the repeated representations and remonstrances of his minister, having persisted in protecting the aggressors, Dena Khan, in despair of being able to conduct the public affairs with satisfaction to himself, oi benefit to-the country, withdrew from his charge, and retired to his jágín of Kahan, where for several years he gave hunself up to the moral and religious studies of the times *

Discontent, Siláh eddín called in, The inevitable effects of such inisgovernment were soon visible Discontent became universal, and oppression spread wider and became more audacious. The leading men of the older race of inhabitants, and the chief merchants, resolved to hazard every calamity conquest of Tatta, we are supported by Ferishta and the numerical words Kharabi-e-Sind, mentioned in the Tabakati Akberi knowledged that the time of Jam Nanda's death is far from being certain

* Far Sind, ff 69, 70

Still, however, it must be ac-

rather than continue in their present state of suffering CHAP VI They, therefore, sent privately to invite Siláh-ed dín to assume the government of the country, representing the time as most favourable, the Jám being a weak debauchee, while his late minister and great support, Deria Khan, had retired in disgust from public life Siláh-ed-dín communicated to his relation, Mozeffei Shah, the letters and invitation which he had received, and, in a short time, by that prince's assistance, he was enabled to return to Sind at the head of a considerable army, and, matching incessantly, contrived to cross the Indus, and come upon Tatta, while Jám Fuóz was quite unprepaied to oppose him That weak prince, without resistance, fled up the western bank of the The successful invader, having entered the who asriver capital, mounted the throne of Sind, and divided the throne property and possessions of the clansmen and adherents _of his iival among his own supporters, the country in general observing the change with joy

Roused from his dream of pleasure by these decisive Deria Khan events, Jám Firóz looked around him, and saw no hope of retrieving his ruined affairs, but in the assistance of his late minister, to whom he dispatched his mother, to express his profound regret for his past misconduct, and to solicit his support and countenance Dena Khan was easily moved to lend his aid, and, leaving his rethement, by the influence which he possessed over the whole western bank of the Indus, he soon collected a body of troops, chiefly from Blicker and Siwistan Fuóz's standard was joined by numbers from the Baluch and other neighbouring tribes, and it would appear that the Arghuns, too, lent a body of troops, under , the command, it is said, of Mehter Sambal, originally the slive, and now the favourite general, of Shah Beg * When all were ready, Derra Khan moved down to joins Firóz.

SECT 1

attack Jám Siláh-ed-dín, but was met by that prince's воок п general, Háji Vasír, and, after a bloody battle, defeated Battle. and forced to retreat F10m the field of battle, Há11 Vasír wrote to inform Siláh-ed dín of his success, and that affairs bore the fairest aspect The messenger who carried his letter happened to fall into the hands of a party of the enemy, and, with the letter, was brought That crafty statesman substituted and to Deria Khan forwarded a different letter, also witten in the Hán's name, to announce that his army had been completely 1 outed, that the enemy was advancing in full force, and advising his master to remove his haiam and followers fiom Tatta without any delay, and to meet him at the town of Cháchgán, to which place he was himself directing his march The stratagem succeeded Siláh-9 Ramzan, A II 918 ed-dín in dismay abandoned his capital by night, and crossed the river, to the total ruin of his affairs He was afterwards met by Hán Vasír, when an explanation. took place, but too late to repair the mischief that had been done, so that he was compelled once more to Siláh-eddin retires retire into Gujrát, after having reigned eight months in to Gujrát Tatta Deria Khan, after having pursued him into the desert, returned to Tatta, on the morning of the grand Muhammedan festival that takes place on the conclusion of the feast of Ramzán, and replaced Jám Firoz restored. Firóz on the throne * Id al-Fitr

Jám Firóz continued to reign for some years after he had thus regained his dominions, but the vices which had already excited discontent among his sub-

* Taríkhe-Sind, ff 70, 71, 72, Briggs's Ferishta, vol iv p 429 The year in which these events took place is uncertain The Kholasetal-Towaríkh mentions A II 918, as the year in which Silah ed-dín invaled Gujrat, f 344, but other dates in the passage are incorrect. The Taríkhe-Sind, ff 71, 72 mentions the 9th Ramzan as the night on which he quitted Tatta, and the ld-al-Fitr as the day on which Firoz re-entered it, but does not specify the year Ferishta makes Deria Khan, in the first instance,join Siláh-ed-din, but afterwards return to bis allegiance to Firoz, and assist in expelling the pretender, which is far from being improbable marches towards Tatta.

Misrule.

٠

BOOK 11

of his followers, which they contained, to the delight of his troops he led them towards the provinces on the Indus, the granary of that quarter – He was preceded by Mír Fázil Gokultásh, with two hundred and forty chosen horse, who, entering the Sind country, passed the town of Bághbán * – An army of Samnas had been collected by Mahmúd Matin Khan, at Tilhati †, on the left bank of the Indus, three or four kos from Schwán, to oppose and watch the motions of the invaders Shah Beg, with the main body of his army, followed Mír Fúzil – As he approached, the head-men and inhabitants of Bághbán hastened to submit, and entered with zeal into his service ‡

Advances to the capital

His great aim now was to induce the Sindums to submit without fighting, and, to attain that object, he lavished favours on all who joined hun But, fuding the progress of revolt slower than he wished, he resolved on more active measures Marching from the Lakhi. hills, he left behind the hostile army at Tilhati, advanced rapidly towards Tatta, and soon encamped on the banks of the Khanwa, about three kos to the south of that capital At that time, a great branch of the river flowed to the south of Tatta, and, from its depth, he found great difficulty in crossing, all the boats having been carefully removed Fortunately, however, a herdsman was observed, who had effected a presage from the other side, and who, being examined, pointed out a ford, by which the whole cavalry was enabled to get over, leaving the baggage protected by a strong guard Shah Beg then advanced towards Tatta, upon which Dera Khan, leaving Jám Firóz in the city, marched out with a large force to repel the invaders §

11 Moharram, A H 926, 2 January, A D 1520

> * I know not what district is here called Baghbán, perhaps Larkhana

+ Probably the Tith-Mur of Burnes's map, which, however, is on the right bank of the river ‡ Tar Sind, ff 103, 104

§ Dera Khan is called the adopted son (piser-e khwandeh) of Jam Nanda—Tar Sind, f 103 He may, however, be Deria Khau the minister

In the battle that ensued Shah Beg's hardy veterans CHAP VI were successful Dera Khan, with some other noblemen, and numbers of Sammas, were taken prisoners Defeats the and put to death Jám Firóz, filled with alarm, fled from the city, and clossed the Indus The town of Tatta was entered by the victorious troops, and for days subjected to all the outrages and miseries that are the lot of a city taken by storm Numbers of the Tula wives and children of the inhabitants of all classes were reduced to slavery Shah Beg, placing a guard on the palace, which Jáin Firóz had abandoned, saved the honour of his family, who, from the suddenness of the calamity, had all been left behind, and treated his children and the females of his haram with the greatest respect On the tenth day, when the lust and rapacity even of the merciless plunderers had been nearly satuated, Kázı Káz, a holy man, who, in the midst of "the general run, had in vain been steking in every quarter for his wife and children, sat down, and, with an eloquence that flowed from the heart, addressed a letter to Shah Beg, in which he described the intolerable musery endured by the inhabitants It was conveyed to the Arghun ehef, and touched his feelings The pillage He straightway took an arrow from his quiver, and, delivering it to the Imúin, who was the bearer of the letter. commanded one of his own attendants to accounpany him round the city, with orders that the pillage should instantly cease, and that the persons and property of the inhabitants should theneeforward be respected This ordinance, enforced by the respected symbol that accompanied it, met with unhesitating obedience, and an end was put to the barbarous seenes > that afflicted a great and unfortunate city

Jám F116z, on finding his women and family in the Treaty with hands of Shah Beg, remained for some time at Pular, showing every sign of profound affliction He deputed some of his chief officers to concluste the victor A

sicked

stopped

negociation was soon entered into, and, as he made BOOK II the humblest submissions, meanly laying the blame of the late war on the instigations of his ministers, and vowing eternal subserviency and gratitude to the invader, a treaty was not long of being concluded * His End of family being sent back, he waited on Shah Beg, and Sefer, А Н 926. it was finally agreed, that all the country from the February, A D 1520 Lakhı hills downwards, including Tatta, should remain the Jám's, while all the territory of Sind above these mountains was to be held by Shah Beg

The victorious army now marched out of Tatta, and encamped on the outside of the city, but the news fiom Schwant speedily recalled Shah Beg to that quarter The regular form which the invasion of the Ārghúns had assumed, did not seem likely to terminate in a mere political ascendency, leaving the wealth and property of the country much as before, but threatened to extend to a violent occupation of the very houses, lands, and property of the inhabitants, to support a numerous, rapacious, and famished body of Tartar adventurers, who were settling down like a swarm of locusts, devouring all they met with, and insatiate for The alarm spread on every side A great more assemblage of all the neighbouring chiefs and tribes, including the Safías and Sodhas, had met at Tilhati, and unanunously vowed to remain united, and never, while they had life, to desist from hostility to Shah Beg and his tribe

Measures of Shah Beg, Shah Beg hastened by rapid marches to Sehwán[‡], and, having reduced the castle, left a force, under some of his most trusty nobles, to defend the adjoining country Bheker, he left in charge of Sultan Mahmúd

* Tar Sind, f 103-107 Suspicions were very generally entertained that Jam Firoz had joined in inviting Shah Beg into Sind, that he might free himself from the control of his minister

† Síwístán,-by which name Sehwán is often called

‡ Kıla-Sıwístán

Confederacy

against the

Arghúns

cluded, and the Arghún and Terkhán troops withdrawn BOOK II from the province of Lower Sind, when the misgovernment and discontent inseparable from a falling state again became rapidly visible The news of what was passing at Tatta, and the disasters, incapacity, and unpopularity of Jám Firóz, once more emboldened Siláhed-dín to attempt to recover a throne, his possession of which had formerly been so transient He was now in Siláh eddín seizes high favour and power at the court of Gujrát, and was Tatta soon enabled, by the assistance of Mozeffer Shah, to enter Sind at the head of ten thousand horse, chiefly Jánuas *, Sodhas, Sammas and Kattis He was favourably received, and the pusillanimous Jám, who had no resources in himself, and deserved nothing from his subjects, fled on the first alarm of his approach, and hastened towards Sehwant, to claim the succour of the Arghún nobles, who, with a strong body of troops,___ had been left in that place, for the purpose of assisting" him in case of need Siláh-ed-dín quietly took possession of the capital, and of all the lower country, and at

Shah Beg moves to meet him

14 Moharrem, A H 927, 25 Dec. A D 1520 the same time dispatched a force in pursuit of his rival When the Jám reached Sehwán, he found that Shah Beg was absent, anxiously engaged in settling his affairs on the side of Shál and Kandahár But the Amírs who were left in charge of the province dispatched a messenger to inform him of what had occuried, and to ask his instructions This messenger was accompanied by an ambassador from the Jám, craving his protection The Beg, who well perceived how much it was his interest to support his own creature, ordered his Amíis to hold themselves in readiness to assist him, and dispatched from Shál his son, Shah Hasan, who in twenty days reached Sehwán, with a strong body of cavalry," and took the command He was followed by repeated

* So in the MS Tarikhe-Sind, + Siwistan, Tar Sind

f 108, perhaps Jharyas

BOOK II. name of the Jám, but in that of his own son, Mírza Shah Hasan, a decisive mark of the insignificance to which the nominal sovereign of Sind had been reduced And this period may be taken as the termination of the dynasty of the Sammas, and the commencement of that of the Arghúns, in Sind *

Milltary licence, An incident, which occurred at this time, may serve to show the mode in which military movements were conducted in that age and country Shah Beg's men, who accompanied the families and property of the army, or rather of the tribe, on its way from Shál to Sind, had reached Machi, a considerable town, when, receiving or fancying some insult, they attacked and took the place, slew the inhabitants, seized their effects and cattle, and razed it to the ground f

Shah Beg strengthens his forts The uniform success that had attended Shah Beg's enterprises on the Indus, now afforded him some leisure, which he employed in settling his conquests, and arranging his ulterior plans For that purpose, he returned to Bághban, where he was met by Shah Hasan, who had left Jám Firóz in Tatta, — with a body of troops, who, under pretence of protecting him, in reality, relieved him from the whole burden of government Shah Hasan was accompanied by the main body of his victorious army, whom his father received with joy, and honoured with rewards Shah Beg, leaving them there to rest after their fatigues, repaired once more to Schwán, where he inspected the condition of the fort, which he repaired, and fitted both for defence and as a convenient depôt for the families of his followers He commanded a large quantity of grain to be laid up in store, and enjoined each of his principal adherents to build a house for his own accommodation, marking out the ground for that purpose, as well as for the houses of the lower ranks He then rejoined the army, which

* Tar Sind, ff 108-110 Gandava Tar Sind, f 108

† It hes in the present Kachmarched for Bheker After the first day's march, he char vi dismissed Jáin Firóz's ambassador with presents and letters, intimating his intention of soon marching to conquer Gujrát, and, when in possession of that kingdom, he promised to restore Sind to the Jam. in all its ancient estent *

On reaching Chanduka †, a confidential servant ‡ of Affuirs at Bbeker Sultan Mahmúd Khan, who commanded in Bheker, arrived in the camp, to explain to Mín Fázil Gokultásh, his father, the difficult situation in which he was placed When he was made governor of that important fortress, he was advised to conduct himself by the advice of the great Syeds of the place, who formed numerous and powerful families that had long had great influence in that quarter, and who had become responsible for the management of affairs, and Shah Beg had also duected some of the chief men of the Dharicha tribe to remain in the fort The latter, having become discontented, fled from it, were now in a state of active hostility, and, to the utmost of their power, obstructed the governor's operations The truth seems to be that the new rule of the Arghúns was not popular Taxes and duties were imposed, which the people of the country positively refused to pay, and not only turned back with disgrace the officers sent to levy them, but assembled in force in the plain of Lohri, ready to offer battle to the governor Sultan Mahmúd, Mír Fazil's son, then only twelve years of age, was eager to match out against them, but his boyish impetuosity was restrained by the Syeds, who, on two occasions, when the Dharicha men threatened to cross over, and seize both the fort and Mahmúd, manned the towers and ramparts, and, by the bold face which they presented, dispelled the danger

‡ Baba Chuchak, his Anka, or * Tar Sind, f 111 + Chandhoh, said to be thirty foster-father kos west from Bheker

4

Sгст I

that, certainly the country was under water, and that, CHAP VI in consequence, a number of weeds had sprung up, which much required the assiduous use of the weeding Shah Beg instantly gave orders that the rest of hook the Dharicha prisoners should be put to death Sultan Mahmud, whose cruel and tyrannical disposition was derived from a taint of insamity, or increased by it, received the commands with pleasure, and, returning into the fort, had them all muidered that same night, and their bleeding bodies east over a tower, which was ever after called "the Bloody Tower"*

Soon after this barbarous execution, Sultan Mahmúd, The Syede accompanied by his father, brought the Syeds, to whom leave Bhe he had been so much indebted, and introduced them to Shah Beg He represented their admirable conduct, and the obligations under which they had laid him Shah Beg made many flattering inquines into the particulars of the late occurrences, and complimented them in the highest terms on their fidelity and the courage they had displayed After they had taken leave, he renewed his questions in private to Sultan Mahmud, inquiring particularly regarding the Syeds, and received the same answer as before, but the Sultan. m concluding, remarked, that though these men were indeed well-disposed, and had been useful, yet that the residence within the fort of so many persons of the same class and family was any thing but expedient Shah Beg smiling observed, "In sooth you give them light excellent commendation " Since they had now ceased to be necessary, he soon sent a civil message to let them know, that, as the Beg's men were about to enter the fort with their families, and were in want of room, it would be well if the Syeds confined themselves to two or three large houses They understood what was meant, and, discovering that it was no longer ad-

5

SICT I

BOOK II VISable for them to remain within Bheker, asked leave to quit it That permission was readily granted, and they settled in the neighbouring town of Lohri *

Shah Beg makes Bheker his capital

Shah Beg was greatly struck with the situation of Bheker, which, from being placed in an island, besides its advantages as a nearly impregnable fortress, commanded the country on both sides of the river, and the navigation of the stream He regarded it as admirably fitted to be the political and commercial capital of Upper Sind, and he bent all his attention to improve it to the utmost He divided the houses and wards of the town among his Amírs and troops, and, having fixed on a plan of a castle, he divided the different portions of the fortifications among his Amírs, that they might superintend their completion To furnish materials for the extensive works thus in progress, the fort and town of Alúr, formerly the capital of the country, but which had fallen into decay, were demolished, and the blicks transported to Bheker The houses which had been built by many Túrks and Sammas, in the immediate neighbourhood of Bheker itself, shared the same fate It is said that, when Shah Beg first laid down his plan for the defences, after making the proper survey, he remarked to his son, that, before beginning to work upon them, they must try to manage two rising grounds to the south, by which they were commanded But after an hour's reflection, he observed that, what was of most importance was to complete the fort and houses without delay, since the place had very powerful means of defence, that the two eminences might be overlooked in the meanwhile, -- since no prince with a shattered foice, or whose affairs were in disorder, would be able to reduce it, and no great prince was likely to attack so small and remote a fortress with a strong army The houses in the fort were soon finished, and a citadel

* Tar Sind ff 108-113

was elected, containing apartments for his household, curry for Shah Hasan, and a few Amírs of the first rank Certain of his favourite officers had also lodgings as signed them there *

Shah Beg resided about a year at Bheker, to see his settles the plans for the improvement of the town and fortifications carried into execution, and for the purpose of setthing the surrounding districts He found that large bodies of Balúches, a bold and hardy race of men, having crossed the Indus, had occupied large portions of the country on the left bank of the uver, and harassed the old inhabitants by their predatory incursions, which he found it impossible to check Determined to find a remedy, he adopted a measure, in the execution of which he was restrained neither by honour nor humanity He made a certain number of his most faithful and resolute retainers take up their quarters in every village, who, remaining there till all suspicion was lulled to sleep, were ordered, on the same hour and day, to rise upon the Balúches, and put them to the Mas acre of sword The plot was earried into execution with ie- Baluches lentless cruelty and detestable treachery, and the inhabitants of forty-two Balúch villages were butchered in cold blood †

Early in the winter of A H 930, Shah Beg moved Death of from Bheker with a large army, to proceed to the invasion of Gujrát, and, as he moved down the Indus, cleared A B. 1523 the country on both sides of the river, of such as he believed to be ill-affected to him When he reached Chanduka, his old general and connection, Mir Fázil Gokultásh, was taken ill, and forced to return to Bheker, where he died His death deeply affected Shah Beg, who spoke of it as a presage of his own Leaving the camp, he returned to Bheker, where he staid a fortnight.

SECT 1

country

^{*} Tar Sind, f 114 The author 1600) remarks, that the castle still sub-† Ibid, ff 114, 115 sisted in his time, A H 1009 (A.D

to be present with the family of Fázil during the cere-BOOK II monies of mourning, held so sacred by Musulmans On rejoining his army, he proceeded to Schwan, his troops ranging on both sides of the river as before After provisioning that foitress, and putting it in the completest state of order, as a military station, he again renewed his march, and took the direction of Tatta Having halted at the township of Akhim, he despatched officers to call Jám Firóz, and waited some time for his coming The news which here reached him, of the advance of Báber by Bhíta and Khusháb, to the conquest of India, deeply affected his mind, already sore tried by his misfortunes, and by bodily suffering He expressed, to some of his nobles, his appreliensions, that the Emperor would never suffer him to enjoy Sind, but would wrest it. too, from him and his family, that he must, therefore, appeal to another tribunal This inward anxiety preying on a weakened constitution, he gradually sank away, till the 22 Shaban A. H 930, when And of Shah Beg, he breathed his last His nobles and chiefs, after having 22 Shaban, tendered their allegiance to his son, and conducted л н 930, 25 June, everything, as we are told, according to the Chengizi A n 1524 usages, conveyed his body to Bheker Three years afterwards, it was cairied to Mekka, where a monument was erected over his grave *

> Shah Beg was an able and active prince, but eruel and unrelenting, a successful general, and a brave warrioi He was distinguished for his personal prowess In battle, it was his custom to push forward before all his troops, and when remonstrated with, and told, that such impetuosity was not becoming in a general, the

* Tar Sind, ff 115, 116 The Tabakate Akberi the Kholáset-ul-Towarikh, f 344, and Ferishta, make the conquest of Sind and the flight of Jám Firoz in A н 927, and Shah Beg's death three years after, in A н 930 The TarikheSind makes his death 22 Shaban, A H 928 In this instance, I have ventured to keep all the dates of that work, except that of the yeur The Ayin Akberi, 11 p 121, places the conquest of Sind in A H 929

remonstrance produced no effect, he merely answered, CHAP IL that on such occasions he lost all self-command, and only considered how no one should stand before him In his younger days, he had devoted a portion of his time to the study of the laws and speculative sciences of the Muhammedans While at Herát, a city which then abounded with eminent men, he had weekly meetings at his house of the most learned of the theologians and lawyers He himself wrote various works, which are said to have enjoyed considerable currency, such as notes on grammar and logic, some tracts on the laws of inheritance and on the fundamental articles of religion, as well as a few poems But his pursuits had not elevated his mind to a humane and refined morality, and the barbarous institutes of his ancestoi Chengiz Khan seem to have guided his practice His approved piety gained him the respect and support of the divines "and religious men, whose influence was at that time so powerful, and it was not supposed to be tarnished by his erimes Religion threw her mantle over passions which were directed against unbelievers, and only violated the laws of morals and humanity His tieachery and barbarous massacres were but ill fitted to civilise the countries which he conquered *

* Tab Akberi, f 508, Tar Sind, ut supra

CHAPTER VI

ARGHÚN CONQUEST OF SIND AND MULTÁN

SECTION II

CONQUEST OF LOWER SIND AND MULTÁN

ACCESSION OF SHAH HASAN — REVOLT OF THE JÁM — SHAH HASAN TAKES TATTA. — THE JÁM FLEES TO KACH — RETURNS WITH AN ARMY — IS DEFEATED — SHAH HASAN SOLE MASTER OF SIND — HIS DESULTORY WARFARE WITH THE BALÚCHES — HL AIMS AT THE CONQUEST OF MULTÁN — PREVIOUS HISTORY OF THAT COUNTRY — HE TAKES UCH — TREATY — HIS TERRITORY EXTENDED TO THE GHARA. — HE TAKES DIRÁWEL — RECALLED TO MULTÁN — BESIEGES AND TAKES THE CAPITAL — LEAVES A GOVERNOR THERE, WHO IS EXPELLED — MULTÁN OCCUPIED BY BÁBER — SHAH HASAN DE-FEATS THE THANKER.

WHEN the news of the death of Shah Beg reached BOOK II Tatta, it was received with every demonstration of joy Accession The inhabitants, who felt severely the burden and of Shah Hasan. misery of the voke under which they groaned, and who were keenly alive to their present sufferings, were willing, as the unhappy often are, to expect advantage from any change The weak and restless Jám saw with triumph, in the death of his lordly ally, a prospect of liberty, which he wanted the spirit and talents to improve With imprudent precipitation, he ordered the Revolt of the Jám kettle-drum to be beat, to announce the joyful event, and resolved to assert his independence . This intelligence reached Shah Hasan* at Násírpúr, where he was

> * The name of this prince is sometimes written Hasan, sometimes Husein In the Memoirs of

Báber he is called Hasan, by later historians generally Husein performing the ceremonies of mourning for his father, curry and where he mounted the masnad as his successor His nobles, the Kazis, and the holy men who were at his court, invited him on that occasion to read the Khutba, or prayer for the plince, in his own name, but that he declared he would not do, while any of the great Tamur's race remained, and he directed it to be read in the name of Báber The intended expedition against Guirát he at once gave up, and bent his whole force to punish the Jam for what he called his trenchery soon as the fast of Ramzán was over he marched to- August words Tatta

The Jám, who was as unable to oppose as he had Deputation been ready to insult him, alarmed at the news of his livan, approach, sent envoys with presents to meet him on the road, to condole with him on the death of his father, and to attempt to soothe and conciliate him, by the humblest professions of allegiance and fidelity But the envoys, among whom was Kázı Káz, betrayed the master whom they did not respect, and in whose firmness they had no confidence When privately interrogated, they acknowledged, that, though they had in public delivered the words of their employer, his real intentions were very different, and that he was busy collecting arms and warlike stores of every description, to enable him to expel the Arghúns Shah Hasan dis- who march missed the envoys, but soon followed them by long "sfor marches without intermission On hearing of his appronch, Jám Fuóz, who, even if he had possessed courage and military talent, had destroyed the efficiency of his own army by his long reliance on foreign succours, without attempting to face the enemy, retired beyond •_ - the river and abandoned his capital When Shah Hasan reached the branch of the Indus that ran to the south of the city, he found that Mámk Vazír, and some others of the Jám's officers, had collected boats, which they had filled with musqueteers and archers, to check his approach These, for some time, by then activity,

As Shawal A D. 1524

SFCT 11

prevented the passage of his troops. But this obstacle was soon removed These brave men were attacked BOOK II which he and slain, and his army crossed over, and occupied Tatta The Jám fled to Kach, where, by a profuse ex-penditure of money, and by the hopes of booty, which the invasion of the rich provinces of Sind held out to a race of bold freebooters, he speedily collected a large army*, from that country, and from the adjoining tribes of Guirát

It was not long before, with this force, he entered Cháchkán and Rahíma, on the eastern frontier of Sind, spieading terror around Shah Hasan took his measures with calm composure, to meet this danger Leaving an adequate force to guard the capital, he crossed the river, and, with the main body of his troops, hastened to meet the invaders They saw his sudden arrival with surprise, but the majority of their troops, being of the Rájpút race, kept their ground and remained firm and unshaken As he approached, they were seen to take off their turbans, and, tying themselves to each other by their clothes and girdles, with their head and feet bare, waited prepared for the fight Such is the practice of these tribes in those desperate cases in which Shah Beg pointed they determine to conquer or die out to his troops this act of desperation, as an un-doubted symptom of the terror inspired by his arms, and hailed it as an omen of victory He ordered his archers to get their bows and quivers in readiness, and dismounting, bathed and purified himself according to the rites of his religion, after which, holding up his hands, he poured forth his orisons, praying aloud to God for victory over his infidel foes. The archers began the battle by discharging showers of deadly 2-arrows, and when these had had time to take effect, he himself charged sword in hand at the head of his bravest troops The battle lasted with desperate fuly

The Jám collects an army ln Kach

Enters Cháchkán

Battle.

takes

^{*} It is called of fifty thousand men, probably by a great exaggeration from dawn till noontide prayers, when the field was cuvr vi strewed, it is said, with twenty thousand of the enemy, and all opposition was over The Jam fled to Gunat Shah Hasan, after remaining three days on the field of Hasan, battle, to refiesh his troops and improve his success, returned to Tatta *

By this decisive victory, which transferred the go- who be vernment of Sind from the Jam to the Arghun race in style and title, as for several years past it had already sind been in reality, Shah Hasin was left without a rivil He remained at Toghlakábád, one of the suburbs of Tatta, for about six months, a time which he employed in rewarding the Amirs and soldiers who had distinguished themselves, and in settling the rich and fertile districts of Lower Sind, whose inhabitants, chiefly composed of industrious cultivators, much as they regretted a change, were unable, from then liabits of life, to offer any resistance He then returned to Bhckei, which was placed in a country, and amidst a population, of a very different description, being surrounded by deserts, inhabited by brave and independent tribes. In the course of his march, he was met by the chiefs of the neighbouring country, who, with tributary offerings, congratulated him on his success, and made their submission He continued his journey, hunting all the way to the village of Baberlu, three kos from Bheker, where the chief inhabitants of his second capital came out in procession to welcome him At Blieker he spent some time †

His chief attention, while at Bheker, was devoted to and atthe improvement of the place, and to the more complete tempts to settle the country

* Tar Sind, ff 118 129 131 Behader Shah, of Gujrát, when on his way to the Dekhan, in Moharrem л н 935 was overtaken by the Jam, who complained, that the Arghuns had taken his country, Behåder gave him twelve lak of rupees, and promised to assist him in recovering his dominions This would look as if he had made some attempt subsequent to A 11 S31 -Ferishta, vol. 1v, Life of Behader

† Tar Resh f 131, 132

SECT II

gained by Shah

comes sole master of conquest and pacification of the neighbouring country BOOK II He was master of a great proportion of his territory only in name The mountainous tracts and desert. wastes around, harboured a hardy and independent race of men, who ill brooked any superior, and who were themselves accustomed to plunder and render tri-butary the more industrious population on every side In the hills, they consisted chiefly of tribes who lived by their flocks, and shared the strong love of freedom and of tribe that belongs to such a life Some, both there and in the lowlands, were of a foreign race, chiefly Balúches, introduced by conquest among the more peaceful cultivators,-a state of society in which, being the rulers, and relieved from the carcs and personal labour required to gain a subsistence, they form a dominant class, who have much leisure, and are strongly attracted In such a situby the excitements and prizes of war ation, predatory inroads on their neighbours become the favourite occupation These freebooters and warriors, both Shah Hasan and his father had laboured, though with imperfect success, to reduce to regular obedience. He now resolved, if possible, to put an end to their forays and robberies

Desultory warfare with the Baluches It happened that at this time complaints reached him from the inhabitants of the districts of Mátila^{*} and Mehr, east of the Indus, that they were incessantly molested by the inroads of their neighbours, the people of Ubára, Bhati and Ahen, who were of the Dehr and Machí race This induced him to send Baba Ahmed, the eldest son of the late Mír Fázil, to check their incursions Baba Ahmed advanced with a strong force, and, after having ravaged and plundered the territory of the offenders, marched back to the fort of Mátila The Dehr men, enraged at this chastisement, represented to the Sewrái Balúches, that, if an outrage

^{*} Mátila lies north east of Bheker, Mirpur about thirty miles It is said to be such as this was to pass unnoticed, it would soon grow CHAP VI into a custom, and that the insult ought to be revenged in the very outset The Balúches acquiesced in this reasoning, so consonant to their habits, and, pouring down in great numbers, wasted the district of Mehr their retreat, however, they were overtaken by Baba Ahmed, near Ubara, defeated, and some of the Dehn men taken prisoners Shah Hasan had sent another division at the same time against the Balüches, which advanced as fai as Kendi, plundering as it went, and, in returning, slew or made prisoners a number of the Machi men, dependent on Ubara, forced them to pay a heavy contribution, and to give a lady of the tribe in marriage to Baba Ahmed, a concession which only the greatest distress could have wrung from them Ubára itself was reduced by Baba Ahmed, who, leaving a garrison in the town, returned to Bheker

While the country was in this unsettled state, Shah Baha Hasan's camels, which were feeding near Mátila, attended by some men of Dehr and Mehr, under the charge of his servants, were driven away by the Sen rái Balúches, and the Játs of the territory of Duáwer* and Fatehpúr, who had learned where they were Baba Ahmed, immediately upon hearing of the foray, pushed after them, from Bheker, laid waste the Diráwer and Fatehpúr territory, slaying many of the inhabitants, and succeeded in recovering the camels He had returned back as far as Bhati and Aken, when he was intercepted by the Sewrái Balúches and Dehi men, who had united to cut off his retreat. A sharp action ensued, in the course of which, Baba Ahmed, having received some severe nounds, was forced to quit the > field, and, just as he reached the territory of Mátila. fell exhausted from his horse, and expired

His brother Abdal Fitah, burning with impatience Death of

SFCT II

BOOK II

to revenge his death, got permission from Shah Hasan to succeed him in his command, but, to check the excess of ardour, which was likely to lead him into danger, Mír Kásım, whose daughter the youth had married, was sent to accompany him on the expedition. The body of Baba Ahmed was sent to Bheker Abdal Fitáh remained foi some time in the country, watching a fit opportunity for striking a blow At last, he proceeded against the Rahmi Dehn tube, slew a great number of Balúches and Dehrs, and advanced as far as Mou, committing great devastation, and dispersing the Balúches who lay along his route They were at last glad to supplicate for peace, which was granted, on condition that Bhati and Ahen should become the lunits of Sind He took up his residence there for some time But the predatory habits of the Balúches were too deeply rooted to be easily removed One night, he was informed that they were driving off the cattle of Ubáia ~ Abdal Fitáh, hastily buckling on his armour, rode in pursuit of them The night was excessively hot and sultry, and he was suddenly and so severely affected, that he expired before he could be brought home Sultan Mahmúd Khan, the brother of these two youths, afterwards mounted the throne of Bheker These few details will give an idea of the ordinary waifare of Upper Sind 🎽

Shah Hasan s views on Multán But the ambition of Mírza Shah Hasan now aimed at higher objects than the reduction of a few villages in the desert The state of parties in Multán, at this time, flattered him with hopes that he might be able to seize the reins of government in that country Báber, who was at this time busily occupied in gaining an ascendency in the Penjáb, and whose views extended to the  $\prec$ throne of Delhi itself, is said to have encouraged him to proceed with his enterprise Shah Hasan acknowledged him as his superior lord, and the diversion char vi might in many respects be favourable to the Emperor But before setting out on an expedition that might detain him long from his other dominions, he paid a visit to Siwi, which he reached with a thousand horse He visits in one week, that he might examine how such of his Arghún, Nukderi and Hazára adherents, as had been left behind there with their families, were situated He carefully examined and improved the fortifications, which he left under the charge of trusty officers. He chastless returned by Chitrui Lohr, plundering the Rind and form Ba Maksı Balúches, made numbers of them prisoners, and reduced the rest to obedience The kilanters and head men of the country waited on him in token of submission, and, on condition of the prisoners being set at liberty, suffered themselves to be carried to Bheker

* Tar Sind, ff 131-133

For accomphshing the ambitious plan which he had - formed, it was of the utinost importance to Shah Beg, to have the active concurrence of Báber and his ministers While he resided at that prince's coult, he had Matrimoformed an intimate connection with Nizam-ed-din Min nivi al-Alí Khalífa, the prime minister, and an engagement had even been made for his maringe with a daughter of that nobleman He now sent ambassadors to Baber, to assure him of his attachment, and at the same time he claimed from Khalifa the fulfilment of his promise Accordingly, Gúlberg Begum, Khalífa's daughter, was conveyed with every mark of honour to Sind, where she married Shah Hasan To bind still closer the alliance of the families, Nahíd Begum, the daughter of Máh Begum *, who, as we have seen, was left behind in Kandahár, when her mother effected her escape, was now, with the Emperor's approbation, mained to Mohib Ali Khan, the son of Khalifa These alliances greatly strengthened Shah Hasan's interest at the Em-

* Mah-Chuchak Begum, after ried Shah Hasan her first husbands death, had mar-

Sini.

VOL I

peror's court, and seemed to secure him in the posses-sion of his recent conquests * BOOK II

State of Multán

л н 814.

Sheikh

Yusef chosen ruler

12

The province of Multán, which, though lying among deserts, contains some of the most fertile and popu-lous parts of the Penjáb, was then possessed by the dynasty of Langas The first Muhammedan conquest of Multán, if we except a transient one under the early Khalifs, was made by Sultan Mahmúd of Ghazni and his successors, on the decline of whose cmpire it again fell under the native Hindús It was afterwards conquered by the emperors of Delhi, under which kingdom it remained till the fall of the Toghlak dynasty, when the whole empire fell to pieces, and new monarchies started up in every direction The iniseries endured А п 1411in Multán, while this anarchy lasted, both from internal faction and foreign invasion, after being felt for some years, at length induced the inhabitants to assemble, in order to concert some means for removing them; when they agreed to confer the supreme power on Sheikh when they agreed to confer the supreme power on Shelkh Yusef, the head of a great monastery near the capital, —a man to whom they were partial, both from the reverence in which his family had long been held, and from the sanctity of his own character He acceded to their wishes, assumed the attributes of an independent prince, increased the military force of the country, made many wise regulations, and conclusted both his own

Deposed by the Langas countrymen and the neighbouring states Among these neighbours was Rai Sipehra, the chief of a tribe of Langas, who inhabited Rápri and the adjoining districts By a long series of flattery and artifice, he contrived to lull any suspicions that Sheikh Yusef may have entertained of his designs, and, having succeeded in introducing a band of his tribesmen into the city, seized Sheikh Yusef in his haram, sent him to

л н 848, A D. 1445

> * See the Tabakáte Akberi, f 516, Ferishta, vol iv pp 396 435, and the Kholásat-ul- Fowárikh, f 253 , Taríkhe-Sind, ff 134, 135

Dellu, and humself occupied the vacant masuad, under char vi the title of Sultan Kútb-ed-dín

In spite of the treachery by which Sultan Kútb-ed-dín A # 564, gained the throne, he reigned for sixteen years, died much lamented by his subjects, and transmitted the sceptre to his son, Husein Langa, and his grandson, Mahmúd, filled the throne, when Shah Hasan meditated an attack on the country *

Multán, during the eighty years it was held by the Ixtent of Lunga dynasty, seems to have been a prey to the Multin. surrounding tribes of Gakers, Afghans, Baluches and Schna Jáms Its territory reached from the Indus, near the Derra Dín-panáh, to the Rávi, and thence downward to Upper Sind It contained much deseit, but the lands on the banks of the Chenáb and the Ghara were richly cultivated, as well as some on the Indus, and Multán being the route which the caravans between India and Kandahár were accustomed to take, the union of commerce and agriculture had made Multán and Uch flourishing cities Some bodies of Balúches, Sehna Jáms, and other tribes, had been received within the Multán territory at different times, some of them settling higher up than the capital, while others occupied the country lower down, about Uch, and between the Ghara and Indus

The invasion of Multán by Shah Hasan was much Factions. facilitated by a deadly quarrel that had arisen between the reigning prince, Mahmúd Langa, and two of his ministers of the Sehna tribe, who were pationised by Sultan Sikander Lodi, of Delhi, which had proceeded to such a length, that the hostile parties met in the field, and, Mahmúd being defeated, a division of Multán had taken place,—the minister Jám Bayezíd receiving the cession of the district of Sirwar, up the Chenáb, while воок н

Mahmúd retained the city of Multán and the country below it

Shah Hasan marches from Bheker A 11 931, A D 1525

Takes Sewrat

and Mou

When everything was prepared for the invasion, Shah Hasan marched from Bheker up the left bank of the Indus, which in that age was chiefly overrun by the Balúch tribes, and, as he approached the fort of Sewrán, plundered and laid waste the country, slaying all whom he met The Balúches, toufied by the numbers of his army, fled to Uch, leaving a garrison in Sewiái, which was the strongest fort in that country Sultan Mahmud Bhekeri, who had been sent in advance with a small party, as he approached it, came upon a considerable body of the enemy, and, though accompanied by only eighty men, attacked them without hesitation, and put them to flight, killing two hundred of their number, thirty of whom, he boasted, had fallen under his own The enemy, confounded by this sudden attack, sabre deserted the place without farther resistance Shah Hasan, on hearing the result, loudly applauded the bravery of Mahinud, in presence of all his court, but afterwards, sending for him in private, gave him, we are told, three friendly slaps on the check, at the same time reprimanding him severely for his rashness, in having exposed himself and his little party to needless danger *

Having ordered the fort of Sewián to be nazed to the ground, he moved on to Mou, a place of considerable consequence Here he was met by two reverend Sheiklis, who eame out of the town to deprecate his resentment, and to express the willingness of the people in the fort to surrender. He sent in a party of his men, to take possession of the stores which it contained, and to make all the Langas and Balúches prisoners. Such of the inhabitants as took refuge at the shine of Sheikh Hamad, he respected, the rest were seized as slaves He halted there three days to visit the holy places, and

* These incidents are mentioned (f 138) to whom Sultan Mahmud by the author of the Tarikhe-Sind, himself related them extracted from the Sheikhs, who had charge of them, a cnur vi promise to suffer his people freely to pass and reprise, but to exclude his cucnues - Sheikh Ruh alla, the most venerable of them, then such for the pardon of the Rahmi-Dehris, but Shih Has in referred them to Sult in Malumid in the death of whose two brothers they had had a principal share. The holy man's intercession in the end prevaled, and the chief of the tribe having presented hunself before that prince as a supply int, with i sword hinging from his need, to signify that in his hinds hy his life or death, was forgiven. As a seal to this pardon, the chief then as led that his nice unght have the honour of being received into Sult in Mahmid harm, which was granted, and the sister of Jan Jum Dehr was accordingly given to him as a propitation and atonement for the claim of blood *

Leiving Mon-Shih H ism now sent forward a party of Amora five hundred horse mody mee, and, following, encamped on the frontiers of the Men of I ar ( N and ) Dehr, n in m of great weight at Multan, having wated on him and submitted, he proceeded on to Uch - The Langas and Bulnches land now had trace to collect their forces, and Uch was a town of such consequence that they resolved to hazard a bittle in its defence. They were very much more numerous than the invaders, who, on their approach, were assuled by showers of mrows But Shih Hism's veterans, moving forward ripidly and peters the undauntedly to the attack, broke and routed their Langas opponents with great Invock, and took a miniber of prisoners, some of them men of note, but all of whom they put to death, without discrimination From the field of battle, the victors pushed on to the gites of the city, which they assaulted, aundst showers of darts and arrows discharged from the ramparts. The enemy defended themselves vigoronsly, till the heads of their

> * Jar Sind, ff 158, 159  $c \in 1$

>

tto

BOOK IL chief leaders, who had fallen in the battle or in the subsequent slaughter, were exhibited, raised aloft on spears, when they were seized with terror and fied The Arghúns, entering, put to death every man whom they met that belonged to any of the tribes, while the wretched townspeople were exposed to all the horrors of a city taken by assault At length, the most distinguished of the religious men of the city, — men who, from their habits, were disposed, and from their influence had the power, in many instances, to mitigate the horrors of war in these rude and barbarous countries, — waited upon Shah Hasan Moved by their entreaties, he ordered the rapine and pillage to cease, and dispatched officers in different directions, with instructions, that the head of every man who disobey ed the command should be struck off, and brought to him on the point of a spear. He dismantled the fortifications, and destroyed many of the principal buildings, the timber of which he caused to be conveyed to Bheker *

Sultan Mahmud Langa raises an army

His death

Sultan Mahinúd Langa, alarmed at the progress of the enemy, and the occupation of the second city of his dominions, stiained every nerve to raise a powerful army to overwhelm the invaders Within a month, his ai my, we are told with the usual exaggeration, amounted to eighty thousand men, composed of Balúches, Játs, Rinds, Dudáis, and other tribes He marched out of Multán, proposing to meet Shah Hasan, who, on hearing of his preparations, had encamped on the banks of the Ghára The Sultan, after halting a month close by Multán, to provide the necessary stores, ammunition, and arms, at length put his army in motion But, at the very first station, he died suddenly, as was universally supposed of poison,—administered, according to some, by Sheikh Shujáa Bokhári, his minister and sonin-law, who dreaded his resentment for some acts of mis-

* Tar Snd, ff 138-140

conduct, according to others, by Langel (of Leshkel) CHAP VI Khan, a man of note, who had been a slave of the SECT IJ family, each faction probably throwing the crime on their rival *

When his death was announced, the Langas and Peace Balúches assembled and raised to the throne his son, Sultan Husein Langa, then a minor, and, seeing no hopes but in peace, sent Sheikh Behá-ed-dín, a man universally reverenced, to attempt to put an end to hostilities He found Shah Hasan well disposed to listen to his sind exovertures, and a treaty was soon concluded, by which tended to the Ghara was declared to be the boundary between the two states

To secure this large accession to his territory, Shah shih Hasan ordered the fort of Uch to be rebuilt, and, leaving a strong garrison in the town, marched back towards Sind He was naturally anxious to reduce to obedience and to order the country on the east of the Indus, which had already cost him so much trouble, and for that purpose no place was of greater consequence than Diráwel[†], a town and fort that lay at some distance within the desert He was informed by Ekbál Khan. who had deserted to him from Sultan Mahmud Langa, that it contained an immense quantity of treasure. which had been hid there by successive Sultans message was despatched to Gházı Khan, who held the place, inviting him to repair to the Arghún camp, but he declined obeying the call Shah Hasan, eager to secure the treasure, and to reduce a chief, whom. since the treaty, he regarded as his subject, marched

* Tarikhe-Sind, ff 140-142, Tabakate Akbere, f 516 Ferishta, in his history of Sind (vol. iv p 435) says, that Baber directed his generals IN A H 931 (A D 1524) to reduce Multan, but that, on Mahmud Langa's sending some officers to him. to entreat him to forego the conquest of the country, he consented, on the Langas acknowledging fealty and paying tribute. Does this refer to Shah Hasan's expedition recorded (Ibid. p 396, 397) in the history of Multán, and to his subsequent retreat?

2

† Or. Dirawer

cc4

Hasan,

1 Rejeb, A 11 931, 24 April, A D 1525 besleges

> und takes Diráwel

BOOK II

towards the town The tribe who possessed the country around were eminent for their valour. Sambal Khan was sent in advance, with a chosen body, to fix upon a proper place for a eamp, and for raising batteries He found the fort lofty and strong To supply teries life found the fort lofty and strong. To supply the want of water, which was likely to be one of the greatest difficulties the army would have to encounter, he set people to work, who dug three hundred wells in three days, so that the camp was abundantly supplied. The Mirza hunself arrived four days afterwards, and reconnoitred the fort. The necessary batteries and works being constructed, he commenced a discharge from his artillery, as well as his bowmen. After a siege of some length, the defenders found themselves hard of some length, the defenders found themselves hard pressed, without prospect of escape or relief Sambal Khan, having run mines in various directions, sprung two of them, which threw down the bastion and part of the rampart before the gate The gamison, who saw the near approach of destruction, defended themselves with desperation, throwing rockets, and heaving down burning combustibles among the assailants In the end, however, a resolute body of Arghuins, rushing on with their shields over their heads, gained the top of the breach, and were soon followed by the rest of the army, who made prisoners of all who were not slain The Mírza, thus in possession of the stronghold, lost no time in employing every means to discover the wealth of which he had heard, and especially the hidden treasure, and great quantities were, in reality, found One half of it, he retained for his own share, the other, he divided among the troops He then marched down by the Ueh territory for Bheker, which he reached in fifteen days, and there devoted some time to festive enjoyments in celebration of his victory *

Minority of

y of But Shah Hasan did not long remain mactive The state of Mult in speedily recalled him into that country CHAP VI Sultin Husem Langa, who had succeeded his father, SECT 11 Sultan Mahmud, being still a minor, the entire direction the Sultan ef Multán of the government remained with Sheikh Shiniar Bokhun, and the ladies of the harmin, who were strongly suspected of being concerned in the death of the late prince. In such a situation, the virulence of faction Anarchy acquired even more than its usual force. The muniter found linnself quite uncqual to the task of preserving or of restoring order - The leading chiefs and nobles retired, each to his own tribe or high, and strengthened lumself there, while oppression and injustice stalked abroad unchecked A general anarchy prevailed, and the suffering inhabitants, worn out by the immediate distress, were leady for any change

Langer Khan", one of the most powerful of the late shah Sultan's Amirs, was at the head of one of the parties died to Seeing no prospect of gaming an ascendency over his Multan rivils by his own in inded means, he repaired to Shuh Hasan Mirza, and to hun explained the disorder and misery of the country, and the factions into which it was divided, inviting him once more to invade it at the Shah Hasan required few arguhead of his army ments to induce him to follow this advice. Without An "" loss of time, he sent on Miskin Terkhán madvance, and  11-0 hunself followed Alarmed at the news of his approach, the Langas deputed Sheikh Ismael Koreishi, one of the most venerable of their religious men, to deprecate his The Sheikh met him when he had reached wrath Mou, was received with every mark of respect and reverence by Shah Hasan, who presented hum with a large sum of money as an offering to an honoured guest > After some conferences, in which the Sheikh attempted to divert the Mirza from his purpose, the holy man, finding that he made no impression, asked permission to reture to Tatta to his friends, a request to which

By some writers he is called Leshker Ishan

BOOK II

Shah Hasan agreed, and at the same time bestowed on him a village in Uch which he besieges,

From Mou, Shah Hasan pushed onwards to Multán, and the Langas, though they had collected in some force, seeing no hope of encountering hun with success in the field, retired into the capital Langer Khan, who was now at the head of a considerable body of men, having plundered the Tilhati Kehlu men, brought all their grain, cattle, and property to the camp, while Shah Hasan, without loss of time, sat down before Multán, and laid active siege to the place A deputation from the city, headed by the prime minister's brother, now waited on the Arghún, to assure him of the devotion and attachment of the Sultan, but Shah Hasan told the ambassadors, that the most satisfactory proof of such attachment would be for the Sultan immediately to meet him in his camp and make his submission, a step which would allow him at once to settle the affairs of the country, to restore Multán to the Sultan, and himself to return home

When the ambassadors carried back this icport, the Langas, seeing no hope of an accommodation, made every preparation in their power for an effectual defence. In the beginning of the siege, they made a series of desperate sallies on the Sindians, and molested them in all their operations But Shah Hasan, in spite of all their efforts, proceeded steadily in his plans, constructed his batteries and cannonaded the walls, at the same time that he kept the city in a state of blockade, and cut off all its supplies of provisions distress of the besleged The siege was long, and much vigilance and valour were exhibited on both sides At length, famine began to prevail in the city, though the Amírs, to make their grain last the longer, had issued a proclamation, that no flour should be baked into bread, but that it should be employed solely for broths and other messes * Provisions of every kind gradually fuled, and the little curva that was left asse to the most exorbitant prices The SPIT 11 , most disgusting and unlawful food was used, the hides of cows and other annuals were steeped and ravenously enten, if n eat or dog was found, siys un eye-witness, it was considered like kid, or the greatest damity Shinjunul-Mulk hud appointed one Jadeh, a Máchi, to the command of a sort of country militia, and give hum charge of the city I le and his men cutered any house at pleasure, under pretence of searching for provisions, ind plundered whitever fell in their way. Such was the general misery that many of the mhabitants threw themselves over the walls into the ditch, in hopes of effecting their escape, numbers perished, and Shih Il isin, pitying their deplorable condition, issued orders that no Multani, while thus attempting to escape, should be put to death

• The head of an ox sold for ten weight) for a hundred taugas — tangas, a man of grain (Multan Tar Sind

When the siege had lasted a year and some months, The place and the garnison were worn out and reduced to skeletons, storm the Arghuns resolved to terminate it by a grand effort, and, after having slam a number of the defenders, and cleared the defences by a continued discharge of 1 nd of arrows and shot, made a general assault, and at the Autoria same time having broken open the Lahór gate with autumu axes and hammers, about the dawn of day entered the place A seene of indiscriminate slaughter and pillage The inhabitants, from the age of seven to ensued seventy, except such as took refuge in the convent of the Sheikhs, were seized and reduced to slavery After the pillage had continued for ten or twelve days, Molub Terkhán proceeded to the monastery, which also he plundered and set on fire, after he had drenched it in The greater part of the Langas, and of the army > blood of Multán, perished in this calamity, and money, jewels, and other valuable property to a large amount fell into the hands of the victors Shah Hasan at length put an end to the slaughter, directed that no creature

A D 1526

BOOK II should suffer any farther injury, and commanded deep pits to be dug to bury the dead The young Sultan Husein and his sister were brought to him, and delivered to Miskín Terkhán, who married the lady and treated the youth as his own son, he is said to have died soon after *

> * Taríkhe-Sind, f 145-147, Tabakáte Akberi, f 516, Ferislita, vol 1v p 399, Kholásat-ul-Towarikh, f 253 The Tarikhe Sind, differing from the others, places the sack of Multán in A n 933, Rehi ii 15 But the testimony of Moulána Saad-ulla Lahuri, an eyewitness, (Tahakate Akberi), seems decisive Fifteen months is mentioned as the length of the siege Nızám-ed-dın Ahmed Bakhshi, the author of the Tabakáte Abkeri, eites part of the curious narrative of an eye-witness, some of which is also quoted by Ferislita, from a document in the narrator's handwriting (Ferishta, vol iv p 399) The account of Moulana Saad-ulla Lahúri, who was an eminent man of letters of that age, says Nizámed-din, is as follows, -" I was at that time in the fort of Multán The siege had lasted several months, and Mirza Shah Husein's army had so completely prevented all entrance into, or issue from the place, that it was impossible for any living thing from without to afford assistance to the besieged, or for any of those within, to make their escape out, so as to reach a place of safety. Such gradually became the scarcity of food and victuals in the town, that, if perchance a dog or cat fell into the hands of any of the besieged, they ate its flesh as a dainty, or as if it had been kid When the town had been besieged a year and some months, it was at last taken and given up to be plundered AB

the inhabitants, from the age of seven to seventy, were seized as Such as were suspected of slaves having money were subjected to every kind of suffering and torture This calamitous event took place in the latter end of A ii 932" He proceeds to relate some occurrences regarding himself personally "When the town was taken by the Arghun army," he says, " a party entered our house, and one of them bound and carried away my father, Moulána Ibráhím Jamád, who, fer sixty-five years, sitting on the masnad of instruction, had delivered lessons in various branches of knowledge, and, towards the close of his life, had become hlind He was placed in confinement, as, from the style and elegance of his house, they supposed that he must be possessed of wealth They began to exercise severities upon him Another of them laid hold of me, and took me to the Mirza's yazir, to whom he gave me in a present. It so chanced that the vazir was sitting on a wooden platform in the court of a serái, and desired a chain to be put on my leg The other end of the chain they fastened to the foot of the platform Not a tear stood in my eye, for myself, but I lamented grievously the misfortune of my father In about half an hour, the vazir called for his inkhorn, and, having mended a pen, was preparing to write, but it occurred to him that, before writing, he should perform hus religious

396

Shah Hasan, after remaining two or three months in cusp y Multan, which is represented as having been so completely sacked and runed that it was not supposed it shemsed din the new could ever again be restored, returned to Bhekei, leaving revenuer. Khwaja Shems ed-din, one of his Amirs*, with two hundred horse, an hundred foot, and an hundred matchlock-men in charge of the city Longer Khan was joined with him in authority. The Arghun seems to have regarded Multán as a secondary conecra, being probably well aware, now that Baber had succeeded in the conquest of Delhi, that he could have no hopes of being allowed permanently to retrin an important province, so near Lahor Great cruelties were exercised on such as were supposed to be wealthy, to make them Among others, large sums were discover their riches ablutions, and he went into the bath Being now left alone, I went to the platform, and wrote a couplet of a hasideh, applicable to my circumstances, on the paper which he had made ready for writing upon , and then returned to my own place, while tears streamed from my eves In an hour (saat) he returned, and resumed his reat, and was proceeding to write, when he observed the couplet written on lus paper Ile looked around, but seeing nobody else, turned to me, and said, 'Did you write this?' I answered, 'I He inquired, who I was did No sooner had I mentioned my father s name, than he rose, removed the chain from my foot, threw over me his own cloak (pyrahan), and the same instant mounted his horse, and went to the presence chamber, where he presented me, and explained my father's situation The Mirza gave orders to search for my father, and bring him

" It so happened that, when my father was brought into the Mírza s court, in a very unseemly plight, they were reading the Hedaya The Mirza ordered one dress of honour to be given to my futher, and another 10 me My father, in spile of the distraction of his spirits, expressed hunself, when he began to speak, with such order, perspicuity, and force, that all present were amazed and delighted, and the Mirza, before the levee broke up, gave directions that my father should attend hun in all his journies. He, at the same time, enjoined his officers to recover such of the Mullas property as had been carried off, and to pay from the treasury what could not be recovered father observed, ' My life 15 drawing to a close It is now time for me to be preparing for my last journey, and not to think of attending the Mirza,' And my father was not wrong, for, in the course of two months from that time, he became partaker of the mercy of God ____ Fabakate Akberi, f 516-517

* The Kholasat-ul- Fowarikh calls him his slave

Ster H

BOOK 11

Ilis tyranny daily extorted from Sheikh Shujáa-ul-múlk Bokhári, the late minister, till at last he sank under the tortures to which he was exposed These severities were probably exercised chiefly by Shems ed-din, for Lengar Khan appears to have pursued a different course, and, having collected workmen from all quarters, gave them high wages, and restored a great part of the buildings of the desolate city, a conduct by which he carned much and just popularity An oppressive foreign government, unsupported by a powerful military force, could not be expected long to maintain its authority Langer Khan, disgusted with the management of affairs, left Multán, and repaired to Báber's court, upon which Shems-ed-dín was expelled by a popular insurrection headed by one Shemshir Khan, after the Arghuns had held it about fifteen months Shah Hasan is said to have, in consequence, resigned the province to the Emperor, who seems to have bestowed it upon his son,-Askeri, and to have sent him, accompanied by Langer Khan, to take possession of his government, and under the management of Langer Khan it remained, during the rest of Báber's reign *

On Báber's death, Humáyun found himself compelled to give up Multán, along with the whole of the Penjáb, to his brother Mírza Kámrán That prince sent his own servants to take charge of Multán, and recalled Langer Khan to Lahór, where he was well received, and the Mírza assigned him a residence near the city, which afterwards became a part of it, and was called the Daireh of Lenger Khan, from his palace He seems also to have been nominated to the government of Kábul, in

⁵ The date at which Báber named Askeri to Multán is not precisely fixed, but it was probably about the end of  $\wedge$  n 933, or very early in  $\wedge$  n 934 The Emperor, before setting out sgainst Chánderi (14 Rebi 1,  $\wedge$  H 934, December 9, 1527) had recalled that prince, to consult with him on the affairs of 2 Multan Baber's Mem p 374 Askeri rejoined him, 3 Moharrem, A II 935 (Sept 18, A D 1528) p 374, p 382 Inroads of the Baluches are mentioned, pp 1bid., 382, 396, and 398

The Arghúns expelled

> It is occupied by Báber

Its future revolutions. exchange for Multin, though probably he was never cusp w Ster II allowed to visit his government From Kamrán, Multin passed to Sher Shah, and his descendants Under Akber, it was regained by the Imperial family *

When Mirzy Shah Hasyn reached Blacker, on Jusreturn from Multan, he found that the Khanku was feats the threatening an invasion on the side of Gujrát This induced him to repair to Tatta where he received an embassy from the Khunkart demanding reparation for the blood of his brother Amir Amráni, who had been shin in some border inroad by Shah Hasan's subjects That elucif mondly observed, that he had declined attacking the family and children of Shah Hasan, while he was engaged at a distance, but now that he was come back, he must either resign some portion of the territory of Suid, as an atonement for blood, or prepare for war Shah IInsan replied, that his answer was contamed in a single word, war, and insultingly added, that the blood of Amrin was still fresh on his garments, and that, instead of waiting at home to receive his enemies, he would hasten to meet them in the field

Leaving part of his force for the protection of latta, he instantly marched with the remainder into Kach Being there disappointed of supplies, scarcity made its appearance in his camp This compelled him to adopt decisive measures for forcing on an engagement He divided his army into fom bodies, intending to surround and attack the enemy on every side The Klinnkar, whose seouts informed him that Mirza Shah Hasan was advancing with but a handful of men, believing the division which that prince commanded to be the whole of the army, determined to anticipate his attack, and ~ marched, with ten thousand horse and a large body of infantry, for that purpose The sound of his kettle-

* See the Tabakate Akberr, f 516. 517 Tarikhe-Sind, f 147 Ferishta, vol iv p 399 400 and 435, 430, vol 11 p 62

† The Khankar seems to have been a chief settled in Kach and the adjoining desert.

Shah Ha an dehbankar drum was heard at a distance in the desert by Sultan BOOF II Mahmúd Bhekeri, who commanded another of the divisions of the Mirza's army, and a reconnoitring party having been sent to a rising ground not far off, descried the enemy's columns in full march to attack the Mírza Mahmúd instantly dispatched messengers to inform the Mírza, and the commanders of the other divisions, of the enemy's movement, and that he was ready to assist them in a simultaneous attack The divisions closed The Khankars, on seeing themselves surrounded, ın alighted from their horses; and, as was usual with their tribe, when brought into imminent danger, joining shield to shield, and tying together the hems of their girdles, stood spear in hand to receive the foe The Arghúns were ordered to use their bows only, in the first instance, and to shower down arrows upon them. For an hour or two the slaughter continued, when the survivors of the Khankar fled in despair, and were metand cut in pieces by the division of Shah Hasan's army that had taken a circuit into their rear The defeat was complete The victors spent the night on the field of battle, and, next day, spread themselves over the whole surrounding country, plundering the inhabitants, pillaging their houses, digging up the floors and searching in their concealments, for their jewels, money, and other valuable effects They, at the same time, carried away their camels, horses, cows, and other cattle, as well as the miserable inhabitants themselves, in droves, after which, the whole army returned to Tatta *

Extent of his dominions Mírza Shah Hasan continued to rule for many years his extensive territories of Upper and Lower Sind and Síwístán, reaching from the limits of Kandahár, Afghánistán, and Multán, to the borders of Kach and-Gujrát, and his history, at a future period, will be found mingling itself with that of Báber's son and successor, Humáyun

* Tar Sind, f 147-9

400

ROOK III

101 name is r pla

CHAPHR I

INVASIONS OF PUPER -- BATTLE OF LANDAR

The latter years of the life of Baber were chiefly cuve a occupied with the most important enterprise of his reign, and that which has rendered his imme most illustrions in history, the Invasion of India , and especially the conquest of Dellu and its dependent provinces

That invasion he undertook rather more than twenty years after his conquest of Kábul and Ghazin, at a time when, besides these kingdoms and the dependent principalities of Badakhshán and Kunduz, he was master also of Kandahar – But before proceeding to the details of that enterprise, it will be necessary to cast a cursory BOOK III glance over the previous revolutions of Hindustán, and to explain such circuinstances, in the internal situation of the kingdom of Dellu, as ultimately affected his Success

VOI I

Early history of Indla.

The inhabitants of the vast and populous countries of India seem to have been doomed, from the earliest times, to be the prey of every invader who came upon them from the north, while they, on the other hand, never made conquests of any importance, at least in historical times, beyond what are considered as the natural limits of the country,-the Hinnlay a mountains and the Indus Passing over the ancient mroads of the Persians and Greeks, they have, in modern times, been repeatedly invaded with success, on the land side, by the Muhammedans of Asia, and from the sea, by the Christians of Europe

Hindu Period

First

l'erlod

During the Hindu Period, which may be considered as reaching down to about the year one thousand of the Christian Era, all Iudia was subject to races of men, whom, from our ignorance of their previous history, we may regard as native From the Indus and the northern mountains on the one side, to Cape Comorin on the other, a variety of languages, differing from each other in a greater or less degree, were spoken, and the prevailing religions were, the Brahminical and the Bhuddist, including in the latter the Jama

This original state of things was violently altered by the irruptions of the Musulmans, who gradually gained a predominant influence over the whole of India Their history, in that country, we have already divided into two periods, the one, of about five hundred years, extending from the invasion of Sultan Mahmid of Musulman Ghazm to that of Báber, the other, of nearly three hundred, reaching from the invasion of Báber to our own times, which last is known as the Dynasty of the House of Taimui in India

The former of these periods comprehends several CHAP I dynasties

Under the first of these, that of Ghazni, the repeated Dynasty of irruptions of Sultan Mahmúd, — which reached with Gharni desolating fury from the borders of Afghánistán through * D 1001 the Penjáb to Delhi, the Rájpút States, and the farthest extremity of the peninsula of Gujrát, --- broke up, for a time, several of the native Hindu governments, most of which, indeed, resumed their authority, though some of them emerged under new forms, as soon as the toirent of invasion had swept by But the Sultans of this dynasty retained possession of a great part of the Penjáb, especially of Lahúr and its territory, for about a hundred and ninety years, and, though several of these A H 582, princes occasionally extended their conquests into Hindustán and Gujrát, the Penjáb may be considered as the boundary of their dominion, all to the south being - still under Hindu government

The Ghaznevi was destroyed by the Ghúri dynasty, of Ghur founded by Shehab-ed-dín Muhammed Ghúri*, an Afghán of Ghúr, who, from the mountains of that country which lies between Herát and Kábul, overthrew the already tottering power of the Sultans of Ghazni His armies, after occupying the seat of government, penetrated in repeated invasions through the Penjáb, advanced into Hindustán, and, in a great and decisive battle, defeated and broke the force of Rajasthán and Delhi Muhammed Ghúri was succeeded by Eibák, one of his lieutenants, originally a Turki slave, who, under his auspices, had conquered Delhi, and may be A # 569 regarded as the real founder of the Musulman Empire A D 1193

* This distinguished prince is by Ebn Batuta (Lee's transl. p 112) called Sultan Shehab-ed-din Muhammed ibn Sam el Ghouri, by Báber (Mem p 309) he is called Sultan Sheháb-ed-din Ghuri, the Tahakáte Akberi styles him Sultan

ł

Moiz-ed-din Muhammed bin Sam, often called Shehab-ed din Ghun In Briggs's Ferishta (vol 1 p 161 et seq) he is generally called Mahomed Ghoory, though (p 168) he is described as Moyiz ood deen Mahomed Ghoory

A.D 1186

BOOK III IN India The throne, now transferred into that country, was held, for nearly a hundred years, chiefly by successful generals and slaves of the Ghúris They extended the Musulman sway far to the south, so that, besides the uniform possession of the territory of Delhi, the provinces of Bengál, Behár, Guahár, Malwa, and various others were, from time to time, subject to them They were essentially a Túrki dynasty, and supported by Túrks from the north

Of the Khiljis A 11 687, A D 1258

The Toghlaks The Ghún was succeeded by the Khilu dynasty, also said to be of Túrki extraction, but which seems rather to have been of an Afghán race, and it may be doubted if they are not of the Ghiljí Afgháns They reigned, with great renown, over Delhi and a considerable purt of Hindustán, for about thirty-three years, and even pushed their conquests beyond the Neibáda into the Dckhan

The Toghlak dynasty, originally descended of Túrki slaves, succeeded that of the Khiljis, and, for nearly a hundred years, ruled over Dellu and its subject provinces, though with diminishing power and distracted by factions In the troubled reigns of some of its princes, most of the principal provinces of Hundustán separated themselves from the empire, and became governed as independent states After the invasion of Taimur Beg, or Tainerlane, the Toghlak kingdom, frail and disjointed before, was broken in pieces

The Syeds

лн 814, лр 1412

> The invasion of Taimur in India was, like a hurricane, short and terrible, but, though his conquests introduced a new race of princes into Transoxiana, Khorásán, and Persia, he left no prince of his own race to secure his conquests in India An officer, whom he appointed to command in Delhi, did not claim the style of Sultan, which, however, was early assumed by his posterity, who are known as the Syed dynasty, and governed, after the Toghlaks, with a loose rein for about thirty eight years when Delhi passed into the hands of an easi r Afghan family

Behlul Lode, whose uncle had some time before The low usurped the government of Sirhend, was rused to the artica throne by a confederacy of six or seven great. Mghan chiefs. At the period when this confedericy was formed the empire of Della had really censed to exist, hiving hern broken down into a viriety of Engdoms and permapathties. Of all the former vast empire, party Della alone with a small territory around it, was held  $\ln \omega$ ly the Syed Sultin, Aleed dm, the nominal sovereign The more considerable provinces, Multan, Juanpar, Bengal, Malwa, and Guirat had each its separate king The provinces around Della were in the condition emphatically called Malake Fewarf, or governments of tribes Mehroh and Mewid, to within seven kos of Delhi, were in the hunds of Ahmed Islan of Mewit, on the opposite side, Simbhal to the very suburbs of Delhi, wis occupied by Deric Khim Lodi, Kol Julesir, in the Dody hy Isi Khim Turk, Robert and its dependenotes by lynth lyhan Afghan, Rympily and Patiah, by Raja Pertab Sing, Bana, by Dand lyhan Lodi The names of these rulers will mark the degree of ascondenes enjoyed by the different tribes, in the immeduite vicinity of the capital Behlúl lumself possessed the extensive provinces of Luhir, Dibulphr†, and Sirhand, as far south as Pampat

The accession to the thrane of Delhi of Sultan Behhil Sutan I oh, the founder of the Lodi dynasty, and a prince of lishing great energy, restored some portion of vigonr to that such mominely. He soon reduced the petty states around the capital to narrower limits, he forced the neighbouring princes to own his supremacy, and, after a longcontinued series of hostilities, conquered that part of the Sherki of Eastern kingdom of Juánpúr, which com-

n 1+ 3

Or Bhelol

+ Often called Dipulpur

BOOK III prehended the countries lying north of Behár, and east of the Ganges, at the same time driving the King, Sultan Husein Shah Sherki, into Behár Sultan Sekander A H 894, A D 1488 extends the empire.

which is smaller states

composed of many

Behlúl's son, Sultan Sekander Lodi, a prince of talent, in a reign of thirty years, enlarged the kingdom still farther In the East, he subdued Behár, the last province that remained in the possession of the Sherki kings, and even advanced into Bengal, where Sultan Husein Shah had taken refuge By a convention con-cluded with Sultan Alá-ed-dín of Bengal, it was agreed, that Sekander should retain Behár, Tirhút, Sirkár Sárán, and all that he had conquered, that he should not again invade Bengal, and that neither prince should support the enemies of the other On the west, he gained possession of Dhúlpúr and Chándéri, and received the submission of the Raja of Gualiar and other princes, so that, at his death, his kingdom had attained a very great extent, containing the Penjáb, the Doáb, the provinces of Oud, Laknau, Juánpúr and Behár, besides a wide tract of country to the west of the Jamna, from the Satley to Bandélkand These extensive possessions, however, though under one king, had no very strong principle of cohesion The monarchy was a congeries of nearly independent principalities, jágírs and provinces, each ruled by a hereditary chief, or by a zemindar or delegate from Delhi, and the inhabitants looked more to their immediate governors, who had absolute power in the province, and in whose hands, consequently, lay their happiness or misery, than to a distant and little known sovereign It was the individual, not the law, that reigned The Lodi princes, not merely to strengthen their own power, but from necessity, had in general committed the government of the province, and the chief offices of trust, to their own countrymen, the Afgháns, so that men of the Lodi, Fermuli, and Lohána tribes, held all the principal jágírs, which, from the habitual modes of thinking of their race, they considered as their own of light, and pur- CHAP I chased by their swords, rather than as due to any bounty of hberality on the part of the sovereign

The natural consequences of this state of things were sultan felt on the accession of Sekander's son, Sultan Ibrálium ^{Ibráhím} Lodi * On that event, a meeting of the principal 7 Zikida, Afghan leaders was held, at which the affairs of the io Nor state were discussed These free and turbulent chiefs, who liated any superior, being struck with the danger of making the monarchy despotic, should all the cxecutive power be vested by mere hereditary succession in one hand, came to the resolution of effecting a partial Intended division of then acquisitions in India, by giving Ibráhim the empler. the kingdom of Delhi, with the chief power, and placing Jılál Khan, his brother, in the government of Juánpúr, as a subordinate prince, - a division which seems to have been intended by their father Sultan Ibráhím, it would appear in the first instance assented to this arrangement, and Julál Khan had accordingly set out for Juanpúr, to assume the government But he halted for a few days at Kalpı, his old jágír, to enjoy the pleasure of the chase, where he strengthened his interest by making Fateh Khan Sirwáni, the son of Azím Humáyun, his prime minister Meanwhile, Khan Jehán Lodi, a chief of the first rank, coming to congratulate Ibráhím on his accession, exclaimed loudly against the

* There is some difficulty as to the date of Sekanders death and Ibráhim's succession Ferishta says, that Sekander died on Sunday, 7 Zikada, A H 923 (21 Nov., A D 1517), and the Nisab nama-e Afghauan remarks, that Ibrahim succeeded on the 8th Zekada of that year Baber, in his journal of Sefer, A H 925 (Feb, A D 1519), informs us, that he sent ambassadors to Ibráhim, whose father had died five or six months before This would place Sekander's death in л п 924 (л р 1518) Now, the 7 Zikada, A H 923 (21 Nov, A D 1517) falls on a Thursday, whereas the 7 Zikada, A 11 924 (10 Nov, A D 1518) fails on a Sunday Ferishta's date seems, therefore, to have placed the occurrence one year too soon The later date also accords better with the date, Friday, 15 Zihaj, л н 923 (924), the day of Ibrahim s grand entertainment

3

DD4

A D 1518

division of

proposed policy, and pointed out to him, and to the Afghán Amírs, that it would inevitably lead to eivil war, and, in the end, prove fatal to the Afghán authority in India In order to repair the error which had been BOOK IIJ committed, he prevailed upon the Sultan to despatch a messenger to Jilál, inviting him to an immediate personal conference, on matters that could not be settled by correspondence Jilál, however, suspecting treachery, declined to return A deputation of three of the most connent nobles of the court of Agra, that was next sent to him for the same purpose, used every kind of persuasion to induce him to meet his brother, and, for that purpose, among other expedients, resorted to the use of magical charms, in the efficacy of which they had a faith common in that age and country, but he persisted in his refusal

The Sultan, thus bafiled, determined to resort to force At the same time, however, he did not neglect the arts of intrigue; and, by his emissaries, soon suc-eceded in gaining over several of the great chiefs and jágíidars, connected with Juánpúr, who engaged to favour his interest, and to refuse submission to Jilál Of this number weie Deria Khan Loháni, governor of Behár, Násii Khan Loháni, the jágírdar of Ghazipúr, and the Sheikhzáda, who held Oud and Laknau; men of such high influence that, among them, they could bring thirty or forty thousand horse into the field

лн 924, Zihnj 15, A D 1518. Dec. 18

Jllál, king of Juánpúr bring thirty or forty thousand horse into the field To gain popularity, so necessary at such a crisis, Sultan Ibráhím, after his enthronement, gave a royal entertainment, at which, with a liberal hand, he not only bestowed offices, and rich presents, and dresses of honour, on the principal Afghán Amírs and chiefs, but distributed charitable donations among the religious mendicants, and the poor and needy of every description His success was such that Jilál became alarmed, and openly charged Ibráhím with the design of wresting from him the apanage intended for him by his father,

He, thereand confirmed to him by special agreement спар І fore, threw off the mask, assumed the insignia of royalty, was proclaimed King of Juánpúr by the style of Sultan Jılál-ed-dín, and raised an army to maintain his pretensions

These precipitate measures disconcerted the nobles who had originally intended to support him, but who were not yet prepared to declare themselves While some of them still adhered to their engagements, others Azım Humávun felt inclined to declare for Ibráhím Sirwáni, a chief of great influence, but not well affected to Ibráhím, had, for some time previous to Sekander's death, been engaged in besieging Gualiár Jilál, we have seen, had raised his son Fatch Khan to the office of his prime minister, and the father was prevailed upon to raise the siege and join in the revolt He advised Jılál to march to Juánpúr, to establish and strengthen himself there, and he soon succeeded in driving out of Oud the governor, Said Khan, who retreated to Laknau *

No sooner was Ibráhím informed of what was passing, ^{lbráhim} marches than he set out to attack his brother The great against him Afghán nobles had now, in general, become sensible of the danger into which they were bringing their dynasty, by attempting to raise up two independent and hostile princes The greater part of them, accordingly, drew back, and joined Sultan Ibráhím When that prince arrived near Kanauj, he was met by Azim Humáyun Sırwánı, and hıs son, Fateh Khan, Jılál's prime minister, who both now deserted him, and entered Ibráhím's service This was decisive of the fate of Jilál, numbers unitated the example Finding himself hard pressed, the unhappy prince resolved to make a desperate effort, and, leaving his family in Kalpi, advanced with

* There is considerable indistinctness, and some contradiction, in the account given of Jilals proceedings, during his short career It seems to be uncertain whether hc ever went in person to Juanpur

BOOK III. thirty thousand horse towards Agra On reaching that city, instead of immediately forcing his way into it, he allowed the governor to amuse him by negotiations, till reinforcements had arrived, and the danger had ceased Meanwhile, Kalpi was taken and plundered in his rear Jilál, driven to extremity, concluded a treaty with Ibráhím's generals, by which he agreed to resign the insignia and dignity of a king, and to confine himself to Kalpi, his old jágír This convention, however, Ibráhím, who had been successful in the interval, refused to confirm, and Jilál, in despair, fled and took refuge with Raja Mán, of Gualiár But, an army being some time after sent to besiege that fortress, Jilál was compelled to leave it, and repaired to the could not find a safe asylum Being compelled to quit Malwa, in order to seek refuge elsewhere, he was taken by the Gonds, while passing through their country, and de- livered into the hands of his brother, who put him to death *

Ibrábím wishes to humble the Afghán chiefs The suppression of a dangerous rebellion, which always strengthens the power of a sovereign, would have afforded Ibráhím a favourable opportunity of conciliating the great Amírs, many of whom were discontented Unfortunately, however, his vicws had taken another direction, and he made it the grand object of his policy to humble them, and to extend the royal prerogative Renouncing the homeliness characteristic of his nation, his great desire was to accustom his nobles to pay him the reverence which he decmed to be due to a king All were commanded to stand motionless in his presence, with their hands crossed on their breast, and other corresponding changes were made in court etiquette The Afgháns, who, in their own country, are reinarkable for the freedom and blunt-

* Nisáb náma-e Afgh, f 72-7, Kholaset-ul-Towárikh MS Briggs 5 Ferishta, vol 1 p 591-5, ness of their manners, and who were accustomed to cusr r regard the prince as their chief, not their muster — as the representative of the national force, raised to power and maint much in it by their support — could ill brook the change Ibráhan, more perhaps from dishke to hus nobles than love to his subjects, affected to view all below him with precisely the same favour, and as entitled to the sime importial consideration. But he soon learned that such maxims, however just in themselves, and however beneficially acted upon by a prince who governed either a despotic monarchy or one regu-lated by equal laws and fixed political institutions were but ill suited to a foreign and military govern-ineut, limited only by an aristocricy of rapicious and turbulent chiefs Such a government, defective in its very foundation and principles if it does not happen to have it its head a nam of powerful and commanding talents, must be content to employ the ordinary grosser principles of fear and favour, and to purchase at a high price, the support of partizins, by whose and its own usurpitions may be mantaned. Discontent spread users, rapidly, especially among those who were most nearly on a level with the throne Ibrahim, actuated by perionsy of all the leading nobles, even of those by whom he had been raised and supported, imprisoned some, and treated others with capitations cruelty. A autical revolt and eivil war were the consequence, which, after much bloodshed, were quelled by the energy of Ahmed Khan Lodi, Ibráhun's general

The Sultan, imagining that, by the successful issue ibrahim of this second domestic contest, he had at length gained death some the object of his ambition, and presuming too histily of his amin, upon his power, ventured to put to death several of the most connect of his father's Amirs But these executions, far from queuehing, added fucl to the flame of discontent Disaflection spread more rapidly than ever The whole monarchy was convulsed In Beluir, Revolt in Behar,

BOOK III

ан 930, ар 1523.

Deria Khan made king , succeeded by his son

Doult revolts in the Penjáb

Ala ed din aims at the throne of Dubl

Baber called fn

Oud, Juánpúr, and the Sherkı or Eastern provinces, which had so lately been an independent kingdom, and where the Afghán nobles appear to have been always very powerful, — they flew to arms, under the direction of Násir Khan Loháni of Gházipúr, Maaruf Fermuli, and other Amírs, and, the rebellion having soon assumed a regular form, they elected for their chief Deria Khan Loháni of Behár, who, besides his own province, soon saw himself in possession of the whole country east of the Ganges He defeated, in several engagements, the troops sent against him by Sultan Ibiáhím, and, on his death, which happened not long before that of the Sultan, the revolted chiefs transferred the chief command to his son, Behár Khan Loháni*, whom they proclaimed king, under the style of Sultan Muhammed Shah. To quell this rebellion, Ibráhím had been obliged to send a powerful army, under Mustafa Fermuli and other officers †

Nor was Ibráhím's policy more successful in the important province of the Penjáb Doulat Khan, the governor of Lahúr, alarmed at the violent proceedings of the Sultan, which threatened his destruction, rose in open revolt In addition to this, Alá-ed-dín, an uncle of Ibráhím, aiming still higher, fied to Báber, at Kábul, to solicit him to support his pretensions to the crown itself, against his sovereign and nephew In a word, at the moment when Báber's views were definitively turned to India, faction, distrust, and open rebellion, were shaking the throne of Delhi on every side

We have seen that Báber, even before he was thus called upon, had long eagerly turned his eyes towards that country, and that he was hardly master of Kábul

* The Lohanis or Lohanas are often called Nuhanis It may, I think, he remarked, that, under the Lodis, the Afghana who rose to chinence were chiefly those on the eastern borders, the Lohanas, Fermulis, &c.

† Báber's Memoirs, p 385, and Nisáb-náma, f 79, Briggs's Ferishta, vol 1 p 597 before he was invited into the Penjáb The chronology CHAR I of his various invasions of India is not very distinct. but he hunself tells us that he made four, previous to that in which he conquered Delhi

His first was in A it 925, when, after taking the fort of Byjour, he may ched through Bunir, and, fording the india Sind with his ervalry, cimels and biggage, transported the infinitry and camp followers over the inver by rafts He seems to have crossed above Attok He had with sefer 10 hun but an inconsiderable force, between fifteen hundred and two thousand men, having left part of his army in Kábul, part in Bajour,-and numbers, whose horses had been worn out by fatigue in some preceding excursions, had returned home His chief object in entering the Penjáb was to collect plunder, the army not having been successful in that respect in their previous forays He pushed on without delay to the country of Bhirn, - which hy on the upper course of the Jilem or Behat, the Hydaspes of the ancients

The Penjáb, at the time of this first invasion, was Penjab held subject to the kingdom of Dellin, and Sultan Ibrahim khan had but recently mounted the throne We have seen  $\frac{4}{4}$  in  $\frac{854}{1450}$ that his grandfither, Sultan Behlúl, had been raised to the throne by a combination of six or seven great Afghán chiefs Of these, Tát ir Khan was one This Tatár Khan held Sirhind, and all the countries of the Penjáb north of the Setlej On his death, Sultan Sekander, who then reigned, probably jerlous of the power of the family, had deputed them of that governinent But, about two years before Baber mounted An 908 the throne of Kabul, the Sultan had restored to Doulat Khan, Tátár's son, the government of Lahúr alone, which, at the time of this invasion, he had therefore held about seventeen years * Bhira had been gained

* Báber calls Tátár s son, Doulat Khan Tatar Khan Yusef Khail Mem p 256 Ferishta calls him, Doulat Khan Lodi (vol ii p 97. and vol 1 p 597-8), as does the Nisab-nama-e Afghánán, f 79 .

His first in value of ди 925, др 1519

1 cb 17

by Doulat

BOOK IIL at a later period by Doulat Khan, who bestowed it on his eldest son, Ali Khan

Báber occupies Bhíra,

A 11 925, Sefer 25,

А в 1519

Feb. 26

Báber halted some time in Bhíra, and, as he intended to take permanent possession of the country, which he claimed,-as having for a series of years belonged to the House of Tannur, whose sole representative he now was, -he carefully prevented all pillage and outrage, instead of which he substituted a contribution of four hundred thousand shahrukhis from Bhíra alone * Many of the neighbouring chiefs submitted, and sent him tribute; and he appointed some of his own officers to take charge of the more considerable districts He then encamped on the low grounds, when a sudden and unexpected rain swelled the rivers, and threatened destruction to his whole army The troops, however, with difficulty reached a higher situation, having effected a passage over the inundation, partly by wading through it, and partly by the assistance of boats The whole country of Bhíra, Khusháb, and Chenáb, probably including the low lands along the course of the Jelem, from the Salt range to the junction of that river with the Chenáb or Acesines, submitted to his authority, and received the civil and military officers whom he sent

Returns by the Gakers country,

Having made the needful arrangements, he took his way back to Kábul, by the table-land, which is buttressed by the Salt range, and passed through the country of the Gakers These were an old and independent people, who had long occupied the high broken ground, intersected by deep ravines and precipitous watercourses, that runs along the foot of the snowy mountains The tribe had lately been divided into two and gives the same epithet to his son Gházi Khan Was Tátár really a Lodi? The Penjáb, and territory held by Tátár, are those that were held by Behlul, before he ascended the throne. Did he transfer them to his relation, Tátár? Is Báber's addition of Yusef-khail a mistake of the copyist for Isa-Khan?

* This sum might amount to nearly 16,0007, the shahrukhi being about nine pence halfpenny

BOOK III. Ibráhím, most probably to congratulate him on his recent accession to the throne of Delhi, and, at the same time, to demand restitution of the countries in the Penjáb, which, he alleged, had long been held by Túrki families dependent on the House of Taimur. He also gave his ambassador letters for Doulat Khan at Lahúr, through whose territory it was necessary to pass But that wary politician, after detaining the ambassador a long time at his capital, would not suffer him to proceed to Delhi, so that, about five months afterwards, the Múlla rejoined his master at Kábul, having effected nothing *

Second invasion of India. The particulars of Báber's second expedition are by no means clear Kháfi Khan says, that, in the course of it, the Emperor advanced towards Lahúr, Multán and Sirhind, quelled the refractory Afgháns, carried off thirty thousand of the inhabitants as slaves, and levied a contribution of four hundred thousand shahrukhis But the advance seems to be too great, compared with future expeditions, to have been made so early, and it is probable that the circumstances of the first and of some later expedition have been mixed up in this account Ferishta, on the contrary, considers an expedition—undertaken in the same year as the last mentioned, and directed against the Yúsefzais, in which Báber advanced to Pesháwer, but did not cross the Indus,—as being the second invasion †

Third invaslon, A H 926, A D 1520 The third invasion took place in A H 926 Having crossed the Indus, he marched through the country of the Gakers, and descended the Salt range into the low country of Bhira, chastising those whom he considered as the authors of what he called the revolt Thence, having crossed the Jelem, he advanced to Siálkót, ar important town, which stands high up to the south of the Chenáb (or Acesines) As it submitted, the town

* Mem of Báber, p 257 † Kháfi Khan, MS 1, f 25 .

Briggs's Ferishta, vol 11. p 36

Slálkút taken

was preserved from plunder Syedpúr was not so for- CHAP I tunate, for, resistance being made, the garrison was , 1522 put to the sword, and the inhabitants carried into captivity

While thus engaged, he received the news of an inroad made into the territory of Kábul or Ghazni by the Arghúns of Kandahár, upon which he retraced his steps He clearly perceived, that, if he would direct his whole strength, without interruption, against Hindustán, he must take means to relieve himself from such diversions on the west He, therefore, employed his army between two and three years in completing the subjugation of Kandahár and the other provinces lying between Ghazni and Khorásán, which he effected, A H. 928, 1. 7 1522 as has been already mentioned *

In the interval between his third and fourth expedi- Rebellion against Ibrahim

* Khafi Khan, as above, Ferishta, il. p 37 There is much difference among historians in regard to Baber's expeditions into India. All agree that they were five. I have chiefly followed Ferishta and Khafi Khan, assisted by Baber himself-the best of authorities, where it is to be got. Ahulfazl reckons the long and circuitous expedition which Báber made in the Afghán country (л н 910), immediately after conquering Kábul, ashisfirst Indian expedition Báber, no doubt, set out intending to enter India, but did not cross the Indus, though, in one part of his course, he came upon a portion of the territory of Multán, west of the His second expedition, Indus Ahulfazl places in A H 915, when Baber, alarmed at Sheibanis approach, set ont for Hindustan But he balted before reaching the Indus. and turned back to Kabnl The third invasion of Abulfazl (A H 925) 16 that, which, in the text, is placed as the first, and which Baber himself considered as such (Mem p 309) Of the fourth, Abulfazl acknowledges that he could get no information-a singular admission regarding an important event, so near his own time, especially considering his means of information (See Alharnama MS A, f 27-8) The Kholaset-ul-Towarikb, f 244, agrees with Ahulfazl as to the three first expeditions, the fourth it very properly makes the expedition of A H 930, when Baber advanced to Lahur As to the fifth, there is no difficulty What is reckoned the second, in the text, though resting on the authority of Ferishta and Kháfi Khan, is indistinct and uncertain Indeed, there is hardly an interval of time snfficient to admit of its taking place. I would gladly discard it for one in the long interval between the third and fourth, were there any evidence of an inroad at that period.

VOL I

л в 1522 24

Alá ed-dín calls in Baber, л п 930, д в 1524, who defeats the Lodis, and takes Lahur, and Dibil par

Báber joined by Doulat,

BOOK III. tions, while Báber was employed in the reduction of Kandahár, in bringing the Afgháns into order, and in arranging the internal economy of his kingdom, events had daily become more and more favourable for his attempts on India. The civil wars, which had followed the accession of Sultan Ibráhím, had been renewed in an aggravated form, and threw the whole country into disorder Alá-ed-dín, Ibráhím's uncle, who fled to Báber, now solicited that monarch to place him on the throne of Delhi In the Penjáb, Doulat Khan of Lahúr, long an object of suspicion to Sultan Ibráhím, having joined the hostile confederacy of Afghán nobles, had been attacked by an army sent against him under Behár Khan Lodi Finding himself unable, with his own resources, to resist this force, he sought assistance from Báber, offering in return to acknowledge him as his sovereign This call the Emperor gladly obeyed, and soon put his troops in motion He crossed the Sind, advanced through the country of the Gakers, passed the Jelem and the Chenáb, and speedily appeared within ten miles Doulat Khan, meanwhile, on Behár Khan's of Lahúr approach, abandoning his capital, had fled to the country of the Balúches, that is, to some one of the Balúch tribes, which already occupied the banks of the Ghara, and much of the adjoining country Báber was encountered near Lahúr, by the Lodi army, under Behár Khan, which he defeated with great slaughter, and his troops, entering the city in pursuit of the fugitives, plundered it and burned the bazár He halted only four days in Lahúr, and then, with his accustomed celerity, ad-vanced to Dibálpúr, which he assaulted and took by storm, the defenders being put to the sword and the town plundered

Here Báber was joined by Doulat Khan and two of his sons, Gházi and Diláwer Khan They were courteously received, but a misunderstanding soon arose between the protected and the protector Instead of the wide province of Lahúr, Báber allotted to Doulat CHAP I Khan only the districts of Jalinder and Sultanpur, that _ 1524 he between the Biah and the Satley (the classical rivers Hyphasis and Hesudrus) as his jágír At this moment, that chieftain communicated information to Báber, that Ismael Jılwánı, a powerful Afghán chief, had collected a body of troops, about Tihára, to the south of the Satley, with the intention of harassing his army, and opposing its progress towards Delhi, and suggested, that a strong detachment should be sent to beat up their quarters and disperse them While the Emperor, who approved of the plan, was actively employed in forwarding the preparations for carrying it into execution, Diláwer Khan privately waited upon him, and informed him, in confidence, that his father's advice was given with the treacherous intention of inducing Báber to divide his army, so that Doulat and Gházi Khan might be enabled to attack and destroy it, when thus separated Báber. roused by this notice, instituted inquiries, which convinced him of its truth He placed Doulat Khan, and whom he his son Gházi, in custody, but was soon after induced imprisons, to set them at hberty, when he assigned to Doulat Khan the town of Sultanpúr (which that nobleman had built), along with its territory, as a jágir for the sup- gives him a port of himself and his family

Doulat Khan took leave of the Emperor to repair to Doulat flees his jágír, boiling with secret indignation Soon after to the hills his arrival there, having privately sent off everything that could be serviceable to him in his meditated hostilities, he hastily withdrew from Sultánpúr into the hillcountry of Himaláya on the east, attended by his son, Gházi Khan, - there, at once to escape the Emperor's power, and to watch a favourable season for pouring down his followers into the plains, and regaining his former authority

With the real history of these events we can hardly Báber de-hope to become accurately acquainted On one side, has bis in-

EE2

Delhí. ,

BOOK III. Doulat Khan must have felt a natural resentment against Báber, who, when called in to his assistance, in-A D 1524 stead of restoring him to his government, had himself taken possession of it, and we may easily suppose a man of his ambition to have been ready to adopt any means, by which he could hope to recover the grand object of his wishes On the other hand, little credit is due to a son who could stoop to exercise the trade of an informer against his father and brother, in the hope of founding his guilty greatness on the ruin of them both Báber, who had advanced towards Sirhind, on his way to Delhi, as soon as he heard of their flight, thought it prudent to hasten back to Lahúr, to check any attempts at revolt, and to put the province into a state of defence against the designs of its late governor This compelled him to give up, at that time, his expedition against Hindustán, and circumstances soon after obliged him to return to Kábul The traitor, Diláwer Khan, ~ Returns to Kabul was rewarded with the district of Sultánpúr, which his father had abandoned and was honoured with the high title of Khan Khánán *

Parcels out the Penjáb Bábei, having now acquired an extensive territory beyond the Indus, intrusted the different provinces of his new conquest to some of his most distinguished officers Sultan Alá-ed-dín Lodi, the competitor for the crown of Delhi, who had instigated this expedition, and who was still treated as a king, got Dibálpúr for his support,—Báber Kushkeh, a veteran Moghul officer, being appointed ostensibly to advise, but really to direct him, Mír Abdal-azíz, a near relative of Báber, had Lahúi, Khosrou Gokuldásh had Siálkót, and Muhammed Ali Tájík, Kila-núr, a district which lies high up between the Rávi and the Bíah † Multán, it is to be observed, still belonged to the Balúch tribe of Langa,

* Lord of Lords Biber s Mem p 300, Briggs s Ferishta ii p 37-9, khelaset-ul-Fowarikh, f

244

† Briggs's Ferishta, 11 p 37, Khifi Khan and it was probably at this time that Báber incited CHAP I Shah Hasan to attack it л в 1525

As soon as Báber was fairly out of the Penjáb, on his Doulnt return to Kábul, Doulat Khan, who retained great in- Penjab fluence in the province which he had so long governed, issued from his mountain retreat, with a band of his faithful adherents, surprised, and threw into chains, Diláwer Khan, his perfidious son, seized Sultánpúi, and speedily collected a large army His first operations weie directed against Ala ed-din, in Dibálpúi, whom he defeated Alá-ed dín fled straight to Kabul, to Báber, while Bábei Kushkeh retreated to Lahúr Doulat Khan next detached a body of five thousand men to reduce Siálkót, but Bábei's generals, concentrating their force, marched from Lahún to protect the place, attacked the detrehment, and defeated it * Sul- Ibrihim tan Ibráhím of Dellu, meanwhile, wishing to avail him- it invades self of the favourable moment to recover the Penjáb, had sent another army to reduce it to obedience But Doulat Khan, artfully availing hunself of the discontents that prevailed among the Afghans in Ibrahim's service, and of the factions by which the court and army were divided, contrived to gain over the general and a part of the troops, who deserted and joined him, upon which, the remainder of the army of Delhi broke nis army up and retreated †

disperses

3

* л н 931, л р 1525

+ Ferishta, 11 p 40, Kháfi Khan Considerable confusion exists among historians regarding Alim or Ala-ed-din Khan Lodi He is variously represented as the uncle, the brother, and the son of Sultan Ibraham Loda

1 Ferishta calls him the brother of Ibrahim Lodi (Vol 1 p 598, vol 11 p S9 twice, and p 40) This was about the time of Baber's last invasion, and he is uniformly so called by Khafi Khan, perhaps following Ferishta He could hardly, however, be a brother of Ibrahum's, for,

2 In the enumeration of the sons of Sekander (Ibrahim s father). on his accession, six are mentioned, but among them is no Alim or Alaeddin (Vol 1 p 564)

3 Ibrahim's brother, Jilal Khan, having revolted and proclaimed himself King of Juanpur (abid p 591), Ibrahun "confined his other brothers in the fort of Hansi, where they remained for life " (Ibid p 592) EE 3

A n 1525 Alá ed dín — his bistory

BOOK III.

When Alá-ed-dín, in his flight, had reached Kábul, he prevailed upon Báber to engage anew in an expedition

This would apply, even supposing Alim to have been born after his father's accession See also Tar Akber shahi, f 148

4 The Taríkhe Nizámi gives the names of the brothers so confined, Ismael Khan, Husein Khan, Mahmud Khan, and Sheikh Doulat. (f 162) It probably was intended to confine them for hfe, but some of them, at least, seem to have been released on their brother Ibráhim's death, for Mahmud Khan was acknowledged by the Afgháns, and hy Rána Sanga, as his successor, under the title of Sultan Mahmud, and became King of Behár

5 Ferishta himself mentions that Sultan Behlúl Lodi, at the time of his accession, had nine sons, among whom was "Alum, who also became king, under the appellation of Alaeddin" (Ibid p 549) This was л п 854 This Alim Khan received from his father the province of Karra-Mánikpur (p 560), and, in the reign of his brother Sekander, having declared his independence, fled from Raberi-Chandwar, then his jágír, to his cousin, Isa Khan Lodi, and was afterwards reconciled to Sekander, who gave him Etáwa (p 566-7)

6 After Sekander's death, Alm again aspired to the crown, fled to Báber, at Kábul, and entered the provinces of Delhi, in an attempt to dethrone his brother Ibráhim His defeat, mentioned in the text, occuired when Báber was marching through the Penjáb, on his last invasion of India

7 Báber, the best authority, never mentions who he was, the fact was too well known for a contemporary to think such information needed But, in the rhetorical account of the battle of Kanwa (Mem p 362), the prince in the command of the left of Báber's centre 15 called Sultan Alá-ed-dín Alım Khan, the son of Sultan This seems decisive Behlul Lodi In a future passage, Jelál Khan and Kemál Khans are called "the sons of the Sultan Alá-ed-dín, who has been mentioned" (Ibid p 364) Ferishta himself, in his account of the battle of Kanwa, following Báber, mentions "Prince Alim Khan, a son of Bheilole Lody," as commanding the left wing (Vol. n p 56)

He was afterwards sent to 8 Badakhshán, and, as will be mentuoned, escaped to Gujrat, where, in the reign of Humáyun, he was encouraged by Sultan Behåder Shah to attempt the throne of Delhi (Ferishta, vol 11 p 74, and vol 1v p 125) At a later period Dandhúka is mentioned as his jágir in Gujrát, where he received and supported Mahmud Shah III, of Gujrát (vol 1v p 146), A H 947, and even aspired again to the throne of Delhi, but finally joined Shir Shah

Supposing Alim to have been only one year old at the time of his father Behlul's accession (A H 854, A D 1450), he must have been about seventy-four or seventy-five when he marched against Dehli, before Báber attacked it, upwards of eighty when set up by Beháder Shah, and minety when he supported Mahmúd Shah

Ferishta and Kháfi Khan seem, therefore, to be inistaken in considering Alim Khan as Sultan Ibrahím's brother

In the reign of Humáyun, new difficulties occur regarding this pcrsonage, from his being confounded with others of the same name for the reduction of Delhi Alá-ed dín, oi, as he is generally called, Ahm Khan, was the son of Sultan Behlúl Lodi, King of Delhi, and, consequently, was the brother of the late Sultan Sekander, and uncle of the reigning prince Ibráhum After his father's death, one of Sultan Sekander's first acts was to depute his brother, Alim Khan, of his jagir of Raberi Ahm, who escaped, 1emanued for some time hostile to hun, but afterwards was reconciled, and received the jagir of Etawa IIe is said, however, to have fled to Gunat, where he was protected by Sultan Mozefler, who then reigned Ou the death of his brother Schander, Alun Khan openly he a pires aspired to the throne In the distracted state of affairs throne that followed, he had secured a considerable number of partizans among the Afghan loids, who were disgusted with his nephew's cruel and imperious conduct All these were prepared to favour lns enterprise IIe was Treaty with willing to purchase the co-operation of Baber at a high price, and it seems to have been settled that, while the Sultan, Alá-ed-din as he was called, was to be elevated to the throne of Delhi, Baber was to receive the formal cession of Lahnr and all the countries west of it, in full sovereignty This formal confirmation of Bábei's right of conquest was something gamed, in the meanwhile, for public opinion, and, as political justice was not the virtue of the age, Baber probably calculated, that, if affairs turned out prosperously, it would be an easy matter to cast down the puppet king whom he had set up He accordingly sent back Sultan Alá ed-dín, to his who gives generals who commanded at Lahur, with a body of him troops troops and a firmán, enjoiring them to assist him in his expedition against Delhi He intimated his intention to follow without delay

It so happened, however, that Sultan Alá-ed-dín had Uzbeks bescarcely taken leave of the court, when news reached Báber, that the whole Uzbek chiefs had assembled their forces and laid siege to Balkh, -which still belonged to

с б 4

CHAP I

Baber,

siege Balkh

⁴²³

BOOK 111 A D 1525 Allm hastens to Lahúr

ł

him

Union of

of the Peniáb

his ally the King of Persia, and the possession of which was of such importance to them both that he resolved to march without loss of time to its relief Sultan Alá-ed-dín, meanwhile, eager to avail hunself of the advantage which he had gained from the Emperor's fir-mán, and apprehensive lest the change of aflairs at Kábul might produce a new order for arresting the march of the troops that were devised to accompany him, hastened forward, by marches of twice the usual length, in spite of the scorehing weather, and regardless of the sufferings of those who attended him On reaching Lahúr, he insisted that Babei's generals should join him, in terms of the imperial firmán, and march at once Doulat joins on Delhi Doulat Khan, when informed of the enterprise of Sultan Alá-ed-dín, seeing, in the diversion caused to Báber by the Uzbek war, and in the proposed expedition against Delhi, a reasonable prospect of recovering his power at Lahúr, made haste to arrange his differences with the Sultan, pretended to enter warmly into his views, and professed an earnest desire to be allowed to views, and professed an carnest desire to be anowed to march with his army to assist in scating him on the throne of his father This offer was most joy fully ac-cepted by Alim Khan, but Báber's officers, with great justice, represented to him, that, situated as they were in regard to Doulat Khan, who was still in arms against the Emperor, as he had so recently been against Alá-ed-din himself, it was impossible that they could, with any confidence, engage in concert with him in such an confidence, engage in concert with him in such an enterprise, nor did it appear to them that it would be prudent for Alá-ed-dín himself to do so, unless Gházi Khan, as a pledge of the good faith of the family, would consent to send his younger brother, Haji Khan, and his own son, to Bábei's court, or at least leave them at Lahúr as hostages. To evade this demand, and to testify the sincerity of his professions, Doulat Khan presented to Alá-ed-dín a Deed of Accession and Allethe Afgháns giance, acknowledging him as his sovereign, authenti١

cated and guaranteed under the seals of the Kázis and cuar i leading men of the province Ala ed-dín, eager to g nu  $\frac{1}{100}$   $\frac{1}{100}$ so import int an ally, and deaf to all the representations mide to him by the Emperor's officers sent his own son, Shin Khan, to confer with Doulat and Ghazi, and, soon after, hunself had a conference with them Diláwer Khan, ilso, who had escaped from their enstudy, and arrived in Lahnr two or three months before, wis now reconciled to them, and associated in the confeduracy Mahmúd Khan Johan Khan, whom Baber doscribes as entrusted with the government of Lihuir, perhaps an Afghin chief to whom he had committed the civil charge of the country and the minigement of the native officers, was pressed into the service short, it was finally arranged among them, that Doulat Khan and Ghazi Khan were to remain in the Penjab, and to have the government of that country and the controul of all the officers whom Baber had left behind, and who were still stationed there, while Sultan Al i-eddin, attended by Dilawei Khan and Háji Khan, two sons of Doulat, was to lead the nuny against Delhi *

In pursuance of this plan Ala-ed-din, attended by Murch to Denil these noblemen, put his army in motion, and was soon joined by Ismiel Jilwam, who had lately been his encmy, by Malik Baban Jilwam, an able and powerful Afghán chief, and by a number of other Afghans of rank He histened by forced marches to Dellu, new adherents joining him by the way, so that, on arriving before the city, to which he laid siege, his army amounted to thirty or forty thousand men

Sultan Ibráhím, when informed of these operations, Ibrahim oplost no time in advancing to meet his rival On his poves him - approach, the siege was raised, and the invaders, retiring, took up a position, prepared to encounter him Alá-ed-dín had a secret correspondence with some leading

Babers Mcm p 295

A D 1525 Treachery In his camp

Night attack.

Afghán nobles in his iival's camp, but did not venture BOOK III Alghan nobles in his fiver's camp, but did not venture to attack hum in the day-time, in consequence of a sin-gular national point of honour, which hinders the Af-gháns from deserting the army to which they belong in the face of day, while they are under httle restraint in quitting it by night, which, they observe, covers many things IIe therefore resolved to favour this feeling, by a night attack, which would allow them to follow their nuclear. follow their wishes But there was a want of decision in his councils The distance between the camps was only nine miles, yet, twice did the cavalry mount at noon, to be ready to march to the attack, and, after noon, to be ready to march to the attack, and, after remaining under arms till past midnight, receive their dismissal, without having moved a step, the generals being unable to come to a resolution "The third time, however, they set out about three in the morning, the plan proposed being, merely, to set fire to the enemy's tents and huts, beat up their quarters, spread an alirm, and return. They succeeded in setting fire to the tents, at the same time shouting the war-ery. The enemy's troops, alarmed, fled in dismay. Some Afghán lords did join the assailants, and acknowledged Alá-ed-dín. During this confusion, Sultan Ibráhím remained in-movable at the royal tent, surrounded by a small but chosen band of his tribesinen, and kept his ground steadily till the morning appeared. As the day dawned, he perceived Alá-ed-din's troops, now dispersed, and employed in plundering on every side. He saw that he perceived Alá-ed-din's troops, now dispersed, and employed in plundering on every side IIe saw that they were not many in number, and that they were much scattered Seizing the favourable moment, he put his followers in motion, accompanied by his only remaining elephant But, no sooner was it seen moving along, than Alá-ed-dín's troops were struck with a punc, which, in their flight, they communicated to the rest of the army, who fied on every hand That prince himself joined in the flight, and crossed the Jainma into the Doáb, recrossing at Painpat His army diswhich fails

persed His eldest son, Jilál Khan, with Ismael Jilwáni CHAP L and Baban, sought shelter in the Doab Some of his A D 1525 chief officers, among whom was Mahmúd Khán Khán Alims Jehán, had joined Sultan Ibiáhím before the battle, so persed that there was treason in both armies Alá-ed-dín himself retreated in confusion towards the Peniáb, attended by the two sons of Doulat Khan *

At this important crisis, Báber himself was not far Baber's and distant No sooner had he disengaged himself from the affairs of Balkh and Kábul, than, leaving his son Kámrán, then a child, in the nominal charge of Kábul and Kandahár, he set out on his fifth and last invasion of India He was joined on his march, first, AH 932, by his eldest son Humáyun, with the troops from Sefer 1, Badakhshán, and, the same day, by Khwája Kilán, Nov 17 with those from Ghazni In about a month he passed He passes the Sind, with a larger army than he had ever yet the Sind --carried into India, though the whole, troops, servants, Dec. 16 and camp followers of every description included, amounted only to twelve thousand men + He hastened forward for Siálkót, keeping close to the eastern mountains, to secure a supply of grain, as there had been a deficiency of rain in the low lands In the Gaker country he found some pools covered with ice, the only ice or snow, he remarks, that he had ever met with in India After passing the Behat, he was joined by some Rebil 9, Dec. 24 officers of his Lahúr army, who had come from Siálkót, and learned, that Khosrou Gokuldásh, the governor, had abandoned that place to march for Lahúr, where Báber's officers had all formed a junction, for the purpose of counteracting the hostile intentions of Doulat Khan Báber sent on expresses to that city to announce his approach, and to enjoin his generals not to

* Babers Mem p 295, 296, Ibrahim, amount to five or six Nisabnama-e Afgh f 79,80 The thousand men Nisabnama makes the number, who † Ibid p 293 remained in the field with Sultan army dis-invasion

the Sind

engage in action, but to meet him, either at Siálkót or BOOK III Perserúr Events had proved the soundness of their A D 1525 judgment in distrusting the intentions of Doulat Khan, and his son Gházi, who were eager to recover the rich government that they had lost The latter, after Alá-ed-dín's departure on the expedition against Delhi, had, by strenuous exertions, collected a powerful army, and his father, old as he was, had girded on two swords, to intimate his defiance of Báber, and his determination to meet him in the field, there to conquer or die In two marches more, Báber reached the Chináb, and was so much struck with the situation of Behlúlpúr, which stands on a ravine on the banks of that river, that he reaches resolved to transfer the population of Siálkót to that place On reaching Siálkót, he found that the in-Slálkót, Rebi I. 14, Dec. 29 habitants in the vicinity, who were chiefly composed him to subject them to military execution, and to put to death some of the principal offenders It was at Siálkót that he learned the disastrous result of Aláhears of Allm's defeat. ed-dín's expedition against Delhi

Rebi I. 15, Dec 30

Doulat's army breaks up in alarm

л п 932,

Báber sets out in pursuit, Rebi I. 16, Dec. 31 Next morning, he continued his march to Perserúr, where he was joined by some of his troops from Lahúr He sent out a party to reconnoitre the disposition of the enemy, who, to the number of forty thousand*, were encamped on the banks of the Rávi, near that capital, and, on their return, learned that the enemy, as soon as they were informed of his approach, had broken up and retreated in consternation Báber, upon this, anxious to intercept them before they gained the mountains, leaving his heavy baggage to follow, pushed – forward with a light force, and reached Kila-núr He anticipated that the two Khans would attempt to

* This is the number given by Kholaset-ul-Towárikh, p 245 Ba-Ferishta, vol 11 p 42, and 10 the ber seldom mentions numbers gain the strong fortress of Milwat, which lies close upon CHAP L the mountains, and was eager to prevent them from  $_{_{\rm IP}\,1525-6}$ strengthening themselves there On the following morning, therefore, he again marched on, and, dis-  $_{\rm RebI\,I}$  17, covering along the road evident traces of the flight of  $_{\rm January\,I}$ Gházi Khan and his scattered followers, hurried forward a detachment of light troops, with orders to follow the fugitives without halting, and, if possible, to overtake them, but, at all events, as soon as they reached the fort of Milwat, to block up every passage and outlet from it, so that none who were in the place might escape Gházi Khan was the person chiefly aimed at by these orders Báber then proceeded to cross the Biah, and three marches more brought him reaches before Milwat

Being now joined by the rest of his troops, and by which be many of the Amírs of the country, he blockaded Milwat Rebi I 20, on every side He sent a grandson of Doulat Khan's January 4 into the fort to offer terms As the siege was pushed on with great vigour, Doulat Khan, seeing no hope of escape, was unwillingly forced to capitulate He sent to say that his son, Gházi Khau, was not in the fort, having fled to the mountains, but that he himself was the Emperor's slave, and ready to wait upon him Báber had soon after the satisfaction of seeing this Doulat surpowerful chief, who had so long governed Lahúr with regal power, come out from his fortress as a humble suppliant, having, suspended from his neck, as if ready to be used for his punishment, the two swords which he had boasted that he was to employ against his foe The Emperor, who was deeply offended, and behaved to the old man with little courtesy, at the same time  $\sim$  that he commanded the swords to be removed from his neck, reproached him with his perfidy, but he allowed him to retain the private estates of his family, and the authority which he held in his tribe The whole rich property in the fort was seized, and Báber Rich booty renders

Milwat,

mentions in particular Gházi's library, as containing a BOOK III number of valuable books, part of which he gave to A D 1526 Humáyun, and part to Kámrán, another of his cons Doulat Khan was sent to be confined in a fort of Bhira. but died on the road

Alim reaches Gházl Khan,

Meanwhile Alá-ed-dín, with Diláwer and Háji Khan, having passed Sirlund in their flight to the Penjab, were informed of Biber's approach, and of the fall of Diláwer Khan, who had always professed Milwat himself a partizan of Báber, separated from them and hastened to join the Emperor, while the other two, who were conscious in what an unfavourable light he must regard them, crossing the Satley, entered the hills, and threw themselves into the strong castle of Kinkútch, where they were instantly surrounded and besieged by a detachment of Hazaras and Afghans from Babei's army They contrived, however, to escape, on foot, during the darkness of the night, and, after excessive suffering, joined Ghazi in the mountains That chief gave but a poor reception to Alá-ed-din, who, in his present miserable circumstances, was no longer a tool that could be profitably employed The detachment which Báber sent among the hills, with orders to use every exertion to scize Ghúzi Khan, succeeded in taking several hill forts (in the outer and inferior range) that had long been deemed unpregnable, and reduced the surrounding districts, but Ghazi hunself eluded their vigilance *

Lahin, and its dependent provinces, being subdued and brought to some degree of quiet, Báber was now enabled to bend the whole force of his arms against Delhi itself, and its king, Sultan Ibrahim Lodi The factions, among the Afghán chiefs, still continued, and several of them had invited the Emperor to advance, promising to join him when a favourable opportunity

* Baber's Mem pp 296-300

ls ill received,

INSTON OF INDIA Baber, after passing the Satler, advanced by Sirhind, and crossed the Gagar at Ambála Here he learned, that Sultan Ibiahim was advancing from Delhi, and Hamid Khan from Hussin-Fridza, to meet hun Having 432 proceeded one march farther, he drepatched a select BOOK III body of men, under his son Humáyum, to attack the A D 1526 latter — a service which was accomplished with great Baber vigoui, the troops of Hamid being routed and dispersed reaches Ambhin In order to inspire terror into the enemy, the Emperor, л 11 932, in compliance with the cruel policy of his age, ordered Jemúdi I upwards of a hundred prisoners, who were brought to 13, A D 1526, the eamp, to be shot Seven or eight elephants were 1 cb 25 Bumhyun also taken by the victors A part of the detachment, defents following the fugitives, entered Ilissir-Firoza along Hamfd, Jemudi I This with them, and took and sacked the place 16, FLD 28 being Humáynn's first exploit, the district of Hissár Fuora, and its dependencies, were bestowed on hum as Illeant-Firoza It was at this station that Biber was joined by Malek taken ١ Baban Jilwáni, an Afghán chief of great weight, already mentioned, who, after the defeat of Ala-ed dun near a júgii Delhi, had fled to the Donb IIe brought with him three thousand horse, and after wards acted an important part in the history of the times Baber was, from the Malck Baban joins fust, oflended with his Afghan independence and piesumption, and especially with his pretensions to sit at the Derbar, though, the Emperor observes, neither Diláwei Khan, noi even the sons of Ma ed-dín, had thut Baber now held on, on his way by Shahabad, where he halted some days, and, after two marches more, Ibráhím's Puvilege* encamped on the Jamma, opposite Susaina supply in a satisfactory manner, the blanks, sometimes of several Baber approaches years, that are found in them and also Ferishita and Kháfi Khan, Ibráhim s * Buber, P 302, Ferislita, vol -follow the Memoirs more or less camp closely Indeed, most of what we know of Baber's lustory 19 ultimately n P ¹³ derived from his own Commentarite It is surprising how difficult it is to camp was not far off That prince had been advancing CHAP I slowly, by three or four miles at a time, halting two , p 1526 or three days at each station Baber continued his 1oute, down the right bank of the inver, for two matches more, when he was informed, by his sconts, that Ibiahim had sent Dánd Khan across the Jamma, into the Doab, with six or seven thousand horse, who were now encomped three or four kos in advance of Ibráhím's position Against this advanced body, Baber sent a defeate a strong detachment, under Chin-Taimur Sultan and detached force, Mehdi Khwaja*, with orders to closs over and attack them by surprise They accordingly did cross the river, and, about the morning twilight, reached the ground where the Afgháns lay, when, though the enemy had tune to march out to meet the assailants, Jemadi Ir and to form themselves, they were broken by the vigoni April 1 of the charge, and pursued, with great keenness, to the - verv outskirts of Ibráhím's eamp Six or seven elephants were taken, and some prisoners, several of whom were put to death, as before, to strike terror into the cnemy †

Being now near the loyal eamp, Baber made every prepares thing ready for the battle that was to decide the fate of India To prevent the irruption of the enemy's cavalry, he connected the gun-carringes by twisted bull-hides, instead of chams, and, between every two guns, placed six or seven small movable breast-works t, behind which the matchlock-men could load and fire their pieces in safety He halted five or six days to prepare this apparatus, and called a council, in which it was agreed to advance as fai as Panipat, a considerable town, at a convenient distance from the inver, which, in case of a general action, might be very advantageously employed to cover one of the flanks of the

* Chin-Táimur Sultan was a son of the younger Khan of the Moghuls, Baber s uncle.

‡ Γhe Tárikhe-Bedáuni says, bags filled with earth (f 136)

† Báber, p SO3

VOL I

for battle,

BOOK 111 vp 1526 occupies. Panipat, Jemú li 11 _n, April 12

A II 932. V p 1526 army. Báber, therefore, moved forward two matches more, and occupied that town, new which the fite of India has so often been decided. Here he took up a strong position, the town and suburbs on his right, his centre secured by his cannon and the breast-works that had been prepared, the left and various other pents were covered by ditches, and by defences made of the boughs of trees. In his line, at the distinct of every bow shot, he left a pissage large enough for a hundred or a hundred and fifty men to much ont abreast Great as was the confidence of Báber's army in their leader, apprehensions and alinin began to spread emong them. They were now two or three months' march from then own homes, surrounded by a strange people, whese language they did not understand and v ho did not understand theirs. They were comparatively few in number, and opposed to an army of a hundred thousand men, with nearly a thousand elephants. Sulthousand men, with nearly a thousand elephants Sul-tan Ibráhím had in his possession the treasures of his father and grandfather, which, had he expended them liberally, might have brought into the field is miny more. Báber acknowledges, however, that the enemies opposed to him here were very different from those veterans with whom he had had to contend in the north, and that Ibráhím was not only avarieous, but "an mexperienced yoing man, negligent in all his move ments, who marched without order, halted or refined without plan, and engaged in battle without foresight"⁵. The Túrki warnors had greatly the advantage of then enemies, not only in experience, but in reputation and self-confidence. During the seven or eight days that the army remained at Pampat, a small party of the Emperor's troops, encouraged by the mactivity of the enemy, rode up to then very camp, and insulted them by shooting arrows among them, in spite of

Skirmishes

Baber pp 504, 505

BOOK III.

л в 1526

When the approach of the Afgháns was first descried, they appeared to be directing their attack against Báber's right He, therefore, immediately sent orders to the reserve to march to its support From the very first, the enemy never halted for an instant, but came right on at a quick pace On arriving near the lines, and observing the defences that had been prepared, and the order of the troops, they were seen to stand still for a moment, as if hesitating how to act I hey could not halt, as fresh hodies were pressing on them behind, yet they were unable to advance with the same speed as before This occasioned some confusion or hesitation, of which Báber availed himself, by ordering the flankers on both extremes to wheel round and attack the enemy in rear, without loss of time, and the right and left wings to charge in front, at the same moment The Moghuls, accordingly, wheeled into the enemy's rear, harassing them from behind with showers of rear, harassing them from behind with showers of arrows Part of the Emperor's left wing, that advanced before the rest, under Mehdi Khwája, was roughly handled by the enemy, but he supported it by a strong detachment from the centre, and the Afgháns, in the end, were driven back On the right, too, the battle was obstinately contested Báber, meanwhile, ordered part of his centre to advance, and his artillery to open its fire, which was done with effect The vast masses of the enemy were hemmed in, in front and rear, by the very inferior forces of the Túrki army They were phed on all sides with arrows and artillery, and, though they made a few charges, attempting to break the adverse line, yet, in the end, they were huddled together

Advance, Khosrou Gokultash, Muhammed Alı Jeng-jeng Reserve, Abdal-azíz (Mír Akhúr)

Flank of Right, Wali Kazil, Malek Kásım, Baba Kushkeh (apparently Moghuls)

Flank of Left, Kara-kuzi, Abul Muhammed Nezeh-baz Sheikh Ali, Sheikh Jemal Barin, Mehdi, Tengrikulı Moghul

on their centre, unable to advance or even to retrie CHAP I Still, however, they fought bravely The bittle began д в 1526 in the moining, mid lasted till noon, when the Afgháns Ibrahím were thrown into mextucable confusion, and only defeated. with great thought of flight The rest was mere prismit and shughter, shughter The victors reckoned the number of shun, on the field of battle alone, at fifteen or sixteen thousand Pirties were sent out with orders to pursue the flying enemy as fir is Agir, and, in priticulit, to space no exertions to take Ibrahim That prince, however, was found the same afternoon, stretched dead in and stain the field, having five or six thousand of the slain lying in heips in a small space around him His head was ent off, and presented to Baber, who after visiting his prvilion and camp, passed the night beside a stream a . httle bevond it *

On the very day of the battle, the Emperor pushed Baber at forward two detachments, the one to Delhi, the other to Agri, both to prevent the plunder, and to seeme the public treasure in these eithes He hunself followed, and reached Delhi on the third day after the battle, Rejeh 12, where on the Friday following, his name, as Linperor, was read in the public prayers at the Grand Mosque, by Sheikh Zem ed-dui, the Sadi or chief minister of religion Having made the different treasuries at Delhi Rejeb 15 be sealed up, he hastened on to Agra †

On arriving in that eity, he found that the fort still  $\frac{1}{M_{2}}$  held out, though Humáyun, who had been sent forward  $\frac{Rejeb 22}{M_{2}}$

• The impression made on the Afghans by this disaster must have been very great They long looked back with melaneholy regret to the ruin of their empire, and to the fate of Sultan Ibrahim, whom they regarded as a martyr, and, for many years, continued to resort to his tomb as a place of pilgrimage Nisab-nima-e Afgh f 81 Sounds of wailing and of terror were long heard by night on the field of battle, which was haunted Abdal Kader, the author of the Tarikhe Bedrum, mentions (f 150) having himself heard them, while erossing it with a party, who, filled with awe, repeated the holy name of God as a preservative, and passed on

ł

s + Babers Mem pp 303-307 FF 3

for the purpose, had blockaded it in such a way that, BOOL HI even had the treasuries been broken open, nothing r 1526 could have been carried off Bikermájít, the Rajah of Gualiái, had lately been compelled to surrender his principality to Ibiáhím, after a long resistance, but had been called into his service, and had fought and fallen in his army in the late battle His wives and children, with some of his chief followers, who were now in the fort of Agra, were seized in attempting to escape Humáyun behaved generously to this ancient Hindu family, and prevented their being plundered They, in return, had shown their gratitude, by making him a present of jewels and precious stones, among which was the celebrated diamond valued, by Taveinier, a jeweller and a competent judge, at nearly 880,000/ sterling * On Báber's arrival, Humáyun presented it to his father, who returned it to him The Emperor took up his residence in the palace of Sultan Rejeb 28 May 10 Ibráhím †

Bibers reflections on his conquest

٥.

Báber now saw himself seated on the throne of Delhi, in object which had so long inflamed his ambition Ever since the conquest of Kábul, two-and-twenty years before, he had never lost sight of it, and, in the course of the last seven or eight years, he had entered India five times at the head of an army, in furtherance of this, his favourite object In the earlier portion of his residence at Kábul, his views had been thwarted,

* It weighed 8 miskals, or about 320 ratis Tavernier says, that when rough it weighed 907 ratis, or 793 carats, when cut 3191 ratis or  $279\frac{1}{17}$  carats and was worth 11 723,278 livres, which, taking the livre of the time at 18d, would make about 879,2451 sterling (Travels in India, pp 148,143, English transl.) It had belonged to Sultan Ala ed-din Khilji, of Mulwa Tavernier remarks, that the apparently trifling fraction,  $\frac{1}{10}$  adds upwards of 3,534/ to the price of the diamond

† Babers Mem p 308 Busy as Báber was with the concerns of kingdoms, he found time, with his usual activity, to visit the tombs of the saints and holy men in the vicinity of the city, as well as all the public buildings sometimes by the turbulence of his Amírs, sometimes by the cabals of his brothers As soon as these obstacles were removed, he had bent the whole powers of his mind to accomplish it With just pride he i emails, that two foreign princes, besides himself, had conquered India, Sultan Mahmúd of Ghazni, and Sultan Sheháb ed-dín Ghúri*, but that he considered his own exploit as far surpassing either of theirs That the former. a very powerful monarch, not only filled the throne of Ghazm, but that of Khonásán, and had the princes of Khwárazm subject to him, as well as the King of Samarkand, and had an army of between one and two hundred thousand men While, as to Sultan Shehábed-dín Ghún, though not himself sovereign of Khorásán, yet his elder brother was, and he himself is said, on one occasion, to have marched into India at the head of an hundred and twenty thousand cataphract horse His enemies, too, were only petty Rais and Rajas, no 5 single king governed Hindustán That he, Báber, on the contrary, possessed only Badakhshán, Kunduz, Kábul, and Kandahái, countries which hardly supported themselves, and, though threatened by the Uzbeks on the north, who could bring into the field an hundred thousand brave soldiers, he had ventured, followed by only twelve thousand men, to attack Sultan Ibráhím, the monarch of all Hindustán from Bhíra to Behái, who had resources enough to have brought into the field five hundred thonsand men, and had actually with him an aimy of an hundred thous ind men, with a thousand "In consideration of my rehance on Divine elephants aid," says the pious prince, "the Most High God did not suffer the distress and hardships that I had undergone to be thrown away, but defeated my formidable enemy, and made me conqueror of the noble country of

спар і

A D 1526

Hindustán This success I do not ascribe to my own strength, nor did this good fortune flow from my own efforts, but from the fountain of the favour and mercy of God "*

He divides the spoil

BOOK III

A p 1526

He now proceeded to examine and divide the spoil, which would appear to have been immense To Humáyun he gave about seventy laks, in money, besides a palace, with all that it contained, of which no inven-To several of his chief Amírs he tory had been taken presented sums of ten, eight, seven, and six laks†, according to their respective merits or claims On every fighting man in his army, Afghán, Hazára, Arab oi Balúch, he bestowed gratuities from the treasury Noi were even the traders and men of letters, who had accompanied the camp, forgotten, all shared his bounty Besides this, his sons and relations, even though not with the army, had magnificent presents, in gold and silver, jewels, rich cloths, and captive slaves, assigned to them Nor were his friends in Samarkand, Kho-1ásán, Káshghar, and Persia, forgotten Rich presents were sent to them, which, while they were received with delight, spread the fame of the conqueror over those distant lands The holy men of Khorásán and Samarkand, and the shrines of Mekka and Medina, participated in his prosperity Finally, to every person in the country of Kabul, male or female, slave or free, young or old, he sent a shahrukhı, as a gift, to excite emulation, and perhaps to assist in recruiting his army This magnificent distribution of the accumulated wealth of the Lodi kings, in which Baber seemed to retain nothing for himself, is said to have made him be familiarly called the Kalendar, from the name of that class

* Mem pp 309, 310

† The amount of these sums 18 doubtful See Appendix E It 18 probable, however, that the donation to Humajun was about 56,7001. and the smaller ones, 8,100*l*, 6,480L, 5,670*l*, and 4,860*l* respectively, very large sums for the age of religious mendicants who devoted themselves to vo- CHAP I luntary poverty *

At the time of Báber's conquest of Delhi, the political Kingdoms in India state of India was considerably different from what it has been in later ages Besides the kingdom of Delhi, Delhi, which reached from the Salt range and the mountains of Kashmín to Behár, and from Gualiár to the Himáláyas, - there were three kings and one Raja, noith of the Neibáda, who had very extensive power The kingdom of Juánpúr (distinguished as the Sherki or Juánpúr, Eastern, from its comprising the countries beyond the Ganges to the East of Delhi,) had indeed been subdued by the Lodis, though it was at this time in a state of revolt, under a king of its own, but Bengal, Gujrát, and Bengal, Gujrát, Malwa were three formidable and independent king- Málwa. doms, governed respectively at this period by Nasret Shah, Sekander Shah, and Sultan Mahmúd This last > kingdom, that of Málwa, had latterly been on the de-The Raja was Rána Sanga †, the brave and able Rána Sanga, cline prince of the Rájpút principality of Cheitúi, who, taking advantage of the civil wars in Málwa, had added to his heieditary dominions several of its pro-vinces, such as Rantbór, Chándéii, and others, and was daily increasing in power The princes to the south of the Nerbada were altogether independent of Delhi

But, though Báber had been victorious in the field, The popnand was in possession of the two great capitals of the tie to the kingdom, it soon appeared that his situation, far from being one of safety or ease, was surrounded with difficulty and - _ .- He and his army were strangers

* Mem p 334 , Briggs's Fer-1shta, vol 11 p 49 note For the amount of Babers revennes, see Appendix D, p 540, and, for the value of his money of account, see Appendix E, p 543

† In the translation of Báber's Memoirs, following former writers,

I gave us Prince the name of Sanka. , willingly adopt the correction of colonel Tod, whose intimate acquaintance with Rájpút history and the Rájputs, makes him an authority on such a subject See Annals of Rájasthan, vol 11 p 23. and elsewhere in aders.

441

A D 1526

BOOK III to the people whom he had subdued, and a mutual dis like soon manifested itself between his soldiers and the л р 1526 inhabitants of Agia, his head-quarters The peasantry, as well as the fighting men of the country, shunned and fled from his followers The north of Indua, at the time of Baber's conquest, still retained much of its original Hindu organisation, its system of village and district administration and government, its division into numerous little chieftainships, or petty local governments, and, in political icvolutions, the people looked much more to their own immediate rulers, than to the prince who governed in the capital Except at Delhi and Agia, the inhabitants everywhere fortified their towns, and prepared to resist The invasion was regarded as a temporary mundation, that would speedily pass off Every man in authority raised troops, and put himself in a condition to act Those who held de-legated authority or jágírs, being generilly Afgháns, -Combini tions ngainst them, were consequently hostile to the new state of things They soon came to an understanding among themselves, and took measures for mutual co-operation Raja Hasan Khan of Mewat, in the neighbourhood of Agra, was the grand instigator of the opposition, which was supported by Nizám Khan, in Biána, Muhammed Zei-In the West tún, in Dhúlpúr, Tátái Khan Saiang-khám, in Gualiái, Husein Khaii Lohani, in Raberi, Knth Khan, in Etáwa, Alım Khan Jılál Khan Jıghat, m Kalpı, Kásun Sambhah, in Sambhal, and Maighúb, a slave, in Maháwan, within twenty kos of Agra Indeed, all of these chiefs were immediately around Agra, or close upon its boiders They looked for and from Rana Sanga, the powerful chief of Cheitúr, who, on his pait, laid claim to a great part of the right bank of the Jamna These Western Afgháns wished to place Sultan Mahmúd Lodi, a biother of the late Sultan Ibráhím, on the throne of Delhi, and so to preserve the Afghán and the Lodi dynasty

In the I istein provinces of Juánpúi and Ond, the cuvra opposition presented even a more regular form There A 10 1 526 the confederacy of Afghan chiefs, who had been in open in the inst rchelhon ig unst Ibrahim for two years before his deith still continued. The revolt was originally headed by Nasu Khin Loháni Murúf Fermih, and others The Sultan Muhamm d insurgents, we have seen, had elected Baber Khan Lo-Shah han the son of Deria Khan of Behar, for their king, and proclamed hun, under the name of Sultan Muhamuned Shah They now possessed, not only Behar, but nearly the whole territories of the old Sherki monarchy, especially the country on the left bank of the Ganges, und had even exossed to the right bank of the river, and taken possession of Kanau, and advanced into the Doib Sultan Ibrahim had sent an army, under Mus Army sent t ifn Fermula and Firuz Khan Sarang-kham, to reduce by the hum the tchels to obedience. Must if i had met the revolted > clusts, and defeated them in some well contested actions On his deith, which occurred some time before the defeit of Sultan Ibrahun, he was sneeeeded in the command by Sheikh Bryezid, his younger brother. The army under his orders was formidable, and it was naturally to be expected, that, changed as eircumstances now were, the two armies opposed to each other in the field, being both Afgháns, would lay aside their mutual unmosities, and, animated by national feelings, unite to expel Báber, the common cuemy

It was clear that the Afghin chiefs, who till now Difficulties had ruled with nearly unlimited authority both in Delhi and Behár, must be runned if Bábei settled in Hindustán They, therefore, stured up, with great success, the apprehensions of the natives, whether Musulman or Hindu, by the most false and groundless reports The people of the country were told, that they had every thing to dread from their barbarous invaders, that they would be robbed of their property, that their wives and children would be dishonoured, BOOK III. their temples profaned or destroyed Báber and his army had reached Agra in May, in that climate the hottest season of the year The inhabitants, in terror, fied before them, and abandoned their dwellings, so that no grain or provender could be procured for man or beast The villagers fied to the waste, and infested the highways, plundering and robbing on every side The roads became impassable Báber's force was so small that lie was unable to send out detachments sufficient to protect the different districts To add to these difficulties, the heats that year happened to be uncommonly intense, so that many of his inen, who were from more temperate climates, unaccustomed to the burning sun of India, dropped down and died on the spot

Di-content In hisarmy The pressure of so many evils began to spread discontent even among Báber's best officers Some lost heart, and many resolved to return Murmurs rose on every hand Even Khwája Kılán was impatient to go back Amír Khwája Kılán was no cominon man He was the son of Moulána Muhamined Sadr, who had been one of the most eminent counsellors of Báber's father, both in the religious and civil affairs of his kingdom of Ferghána After Báber's accession he had continued to the son the same attachment he had shown to the father, and fell a sacrifice to his loyalty The whole family had followed their young prince from his early days through every reverse of fortune Six brothers had fallen by the Emperor's side in his various wars, and Khwája Kilán alone survived He was a learned man, a hardy veteran, a distinguished general, and a wise counsellor * The Emperor had owed much to his vigoui in the recent conquest of Hindustán, and was sincerely attached to him as a private filend Báber's situation was become peculiarly distressing He had gained the long-cherished object of his am- CHAP I bition, which had floated before his eyes ever since the A P 1526 thes of his old hostess of Dehkat had fined his youthful imagination, and, now that it was in his possession, he was on the point of being compelled to let it slip from his grasp

He called a council of his nobles, and addiessed them Ilis address to his on the present posture of his affairs IIe told them, council that after long years of toil, after many a weary march and many a bloody field, they had at last gloriously vanquished every difficulty, and were the masters of numerous rich and extensive provinces, that they nevel could expect that what was gained with toil was to be preserved by indolence, and that, to abandon their conquests and fly, though victorious, with every symptom of rout and discomfiture, from the scene of their glory, would biand them, in the eyes of all man-- kind, as mean and dastardly "Let no such proposal," he added, "come from any friend of mine But if among you there be found any one who does not wish to remain with me, let him depart, he has my full permission" The Emperor's address touched their point of honour Even such as were most cager to return were ashamed to avail themselves of his offer All declared their willingness to stand by him Báber, however, who saw that his friend Khwaja Kilán suffered, and believed that even the supposition of discontent in a man of his weight might have an unfavourable influence upon the troops, bestowed on hun the government of Ghazm, Gurdiz, and the Masaúdi Afgháns, to which he added a valuable estate in India, and, appointing him to guard the presents which he was sending to Kabul and his more distant dominions, dismissed him with every mark of honour and regard, after which, he applied humself to support the spirit of his followers, by active employment and by new successes *

* Bábers Mem pp 335, 336

BOOK III

A p 1526 Change in his prospects,

he is joined by Sheikh Kurcn,

by Ali Khan Fermuli,

by the Afghán army under Sheikh Ba Jezid

١

He was speedily rewarded for his heroic firmness It was no sooner known that his invasion was not to be a temporary inioad, like those of Mahmúd of Ghazni and the great Taimur, but that he was to remain permanently in the country, and to govern it on the spot, than new fears and new hopes began to operate, both on the natives and the Afghans His generous policy, his manly deportment, and known valour, inspired his friends with confidence, and struck terror into his enemies The consequence was soon visible His affairs began to brighten Sheikh Kuren, an Afghán officer", joined him, with two or three thousand Terkish-bend followers from Kol, in the Doáb Two sons of Alı Khan Fermulı were accidentally taken, between Delhi and Agra, in a skirmish Báber sent one of them back to their father, which led to that nobleman's now submitting and waiting on the Emperor, by whom he was glaciously received But a more important. accession of strength speedily followed, when he was acknowledged by the Afghau army of Sultan Ibiáhím, which, under Sheikh Bayezid Ferinuli and Firúz Klian, had been successfully employed, as already mentioned, against Sultan Muhammed Shah, of Behár, and the revolted chiefs of the East † Both Bayezid Fermuli and Firúz Khan now submitted to Báber, who bestowed on them, and the leading officers of their army, large assignments, chiefly in Juánpúr and Oudh, out of the revenues of the territories that were still in the hands of the insurgents, to whom they were opposed This event added much to the security of Babci's government 1

* Second in music to none, says the Tárikhe Bedáum

† Báber calls the Juánpur provinces indiscriminately Sherki and Purabi Indeed, Sherk and Purab are only the Persian or Arabic and Hindu names for the East They are, therefore, equally applicable to that country and to Bengal, though historians seem generally to apply Sherki, the Musulman term, to Juánpur and Behar, and Purabi, the Hindu form, to the Bengal kingdom

‡ Báber's Memoirs, p 337 I may here take an opportunity of Baber's first active operation, in the field, was to CHAP L dispitch a force to the relict of Sambhal, a district lying beyond the Ganges, in what is now called Róhilkund It was held by Kásım Sambhalı, who had formuly shown himself hostile to Bábei, but was glad to solut his aid, when, at this time, besieged in his chief town, by Malek Baban Jilwáni This powerful and netive Atghán chief had, as we have seen, joined Báber after he had passed Sirhund, but subsequently left hun under cneumstances which me not mentioned, but he probably was not satisfied with his reception, as Baber complains, with bitterness, of his presumption and pretensions, and of the rudeness and stupid forwardness of the Afgháns in general However that may be, Baban had withdrawn himself from Bábei's camp, had collected an army, and now besieged Kásim in Sambhal, which he had discovered was ill-garrisoned - Kasım, reduced to the last extremity, applied to Báber for assistance The Emperor dispatched Hindú Beg, Mindá Beg sent to his with a body of Túiks and Moghuls, along with Sheikh relier. Kuten and his Doab Terkish-bends, to his succour Hindú Beg marched with all possible expedition till he reached the Ganges, and, while busily employed in conveying his other troops across that river, sent on in ndvance a Moghul officer with a body of his countrymen Though the party did not exceed a hundred and fifty men, they rode for word till they reached the town, and such was the superiority which the invaders from the correcting wl at seems to be a mistake in the translation of Baber's Memours, p 337 The assignment there made to Mahmud Khan, the third in command, following the two copies of the original which I rossessed, was only nine lacs, thirtytive thousand In the Persian translation of a portion of the Me mours already referred to, the assignments are stated as under, and apparendy more correctly -"To Firuz Ishan, one kror, forty-six lak and five thousand tankas, from Juinpur, to Bayezid, one kror, forty eight laks, and fifty thousand tankas, from Oud, to Mahmud Khan, ninety laks, thirty thousand tankas from Gházipur, and to Kazı Jıa, twenty laks' Here, it will be observed, the computation is by tankas

447

х D 1526 Kasim besleged in Sambhal

north had acquired over the troops of the country, that BOOK III the Moghuls had no sooner got between the town and л в 1526 the besiegers than they resolutely turned and charged them, though already the alarm had been given, and Baban had had time to draw out his force The attack was so vigorous, and probably the panic produced by the expected approach of the rest of the detachment so great, that Baban's whole army was routed and dispersed, several elephants taken, and a number of heads brought in Next day Hindú Beg arrived with raises the slege, the rest of the troops, and had an interview with Kásım Sambhalı, who made some difficulty about giving up the place IIe had asked for suecour, not for a master or successor He was soon, however, seized but seizes by stratagem, and the fort itself taken possession of His family and followers were allowed to retire to Bเลกล *

> Báber's success did not end here The fortress of ~. Ráberi on the Jamna, was soon after abandoned by its garrison, and occupied by his troops, and lie sent detachments to besiege Etáwa and Dhúlpúr, two places of the greatest importance, from their vicinity to Agra Meanwhile, Rána Sanga, the victorious chief of Cheitúr, and the most powerful and warlike plince of the West, had advanced from Rantbór, and taken the strong hill-fort of Kandai from Hasan Makan, who had applied to Báber for assistance, though probably not till he saw that he possessed no means, in his own icsources, of making a successful defence The Ráput chief had exactly the same views with Báber,---to inake the most of the 1 um of the Afghán monarchy

> The events that have been mentioned took place during the rainy monsoon, which was now nearly over, . and the season for action in the field was at hand Báber, therefore, held a grand council, to decide which the place

448

Ráberi taken

.

Rána Sanga takes Rantb6r

> Council held.

way he should turn his arins On the west, Rana CHAP I. Sánga was fast advancing the limits of his already ex-tensive dominions On the east, the confederate Af-ghán chiefs, who acknowledged Sultan Muhammed of Behár, — after recovering the country beyond the Ganges and occupying Kanaul, — led by Násii Khan Lohani, and Maarúf Fermuli, had made two or three Resolution to attack inarches within the Doáb, with forty or fifty thousand the sherkis. As the Eastern, or Sherki, confederates were the men enemy not only nearest at hand, but, from their connection with the country, most to be dreaded, it was agreed that the first attack should be directed against them The Emperor's Amirs recommended that he should himself remain at Agra, to superintend the general system of affairs, while he sent his son Humá- Humárun yun, at the head of an army, to meet the advancing sent in command, enemy This arrangement was agreed to, and Báber, fully aware that, if he was successful in the field, the various forts that now held out would rapidly fall, recalled the troops that he had sent to invest Etawa and Dhúlpúr-a force chiefly composed of the followers of Sheikh Bayezíd, Firóz Khan, and the other Afghán chiefs, who had lately been opposed to the very army rgainst which they were once more to march, — and ordered them to join Humáyun at head-quarters, at Chandwár on the Jamna

The young prince, having collected his forces, and being attended by Mehdi Khwája and Muhammed Sultan Mírza, marched straight against the enemy, who, under Násir Khan and Maarúf, instead of advancing on Agra, seem to have marched down the Doab to Jajmou When he had arrived within twenty They remiles of them, he sent out parties to ascertain their cross the Ganges position, intending to beat up their quarters by a sud-den attack But he could get no accurate account of their movements, and the Afghán army, on discovering his approach, bloke up, and, retleating in disorder, re-VOL I G G crossed the Ganges Ilumáyun, upon this, advanced BOOK III. and occupied the ground they had left As he pro-ceeded to Dilmou, farther down, he was met by Fateh л р 1526 He is joined Khan Sırwánı (the son of the late Azím Ilumáyun, by Fatch and who had been the minister, first of the unfortunate Jilál Khan, and afterwards of the late Sultan Ibráhím,) who tendered his submission This was an important acquisition, as he was a nobleman who had a perfect knowledge of the state of parties, as well as great personal influence He was, therefore, sent without delay to attend the Emperor Báber, highly pleased with his submission, confirmed him in all the estates that had been held by his father, and made considerable additions to them He also seems to have borne the title of Azím Humáyun, but, as the Emperor did not mean that that style should in future belong to any one but his own son, he honoured Fateh Khan with the title of Khan-Jehán *

>

Takes Juánpúr, and Kalpi

Humáyun, after putting to flight the Afghán army, crossed the Ganges and took possession of Juánpúr He next marched to Gházipúr, intending to attack Násır Khan's army, which had retired into that neighbourhood But the Afghans, on his approach, retired behind the Gogra, as it would appear, into the territory of Bengal, and a detachment that he sent to pursue them returned, after plundering the country of Kherid and Behár Having thus expelled them from the Juánpúr territory, he left Shah Mir Husein †, in the city of Juánpúr, supported by Sultan Juneid Bulás with some of his best troops, and Sheikh Bayezid in Oud, with every means of maintaining the country, and then, in

* Báber's Mem pp 342, 343 Khan-Jehán signifies Lord of the World Báber remarks, p 344, that it was the custom of the kings of Hindustán to bestow on the Amírs in highest favour high-sounding titles, such as Azím Humayun (the magnificently propitious), Khan-Jehan, and Khan-Khánán (Lord of Lords) Báber and his successors continued the practice

† The Tabakátı Akberi, f 142, and Tárikhe Bedáum f 137, call him Khwaja Amir Shah Hasan compliance with orders which he received from his CHAP I father, recrossed into the Doáb, and marching back by Kalpi, of which he gained possession by the submission * " 933, of Alim Khan, rejoined the Emperor at Agra, bringing Rejoins Alım Khan along with him *

Khan

When Báber, after despatching Humáyun to the Jan 6 eastward, remained behind in Agra, he was not idle He devoted his chief attention to restoring the finances. and the military resources of the kingdom, to a healthy state Influenced, not merely by his taste for all the fine arts, but by an earnest desire to reassure the minds and to confirm the confidence of his new subjects, he began to build a palace, and to lay out a garden, on the left bank of the Jamna, opposite to Agra, and encouraged his chief nobility to imitate his These improvements soon grew into the fine example suburb which got the name of Kabul But such peaceful occupations, much as he always delighted in them, did not absorb his attention He was justly alarmed) The Rana's at the progress of Rana Sánga, who was in active correspondence with Hasan Khan Mewáti, the chief of the Afghan confederacy of the West, and had acknowledged as King of Delhi, Sultan Mahmúd, the brother of the late Sultan Ibráhím, whom the western Afgháns had proclaimed King, after his brother's death Báber, Humáyun therefore, sent orders to Humáyun to lose no time in recalled returning to Agra with the bulk of his troops, as soon A D 1526 as he had settled Juanpur, and the eastern provinces Before his return, however, Báber despatched a small Expedition expedition against Biana, which was held by Nizam Biana, Khan, who refused to acknowledge him From its vicinity to Agra, from its position between that town and the Rájpúts, and from its strength, Biána was a place of the utmost consequence Desirous to gain possession of it, he sent a force under Terdi Beg, ac-

A D 1527 Báber, Rebl II 3 Ráber builds a palace progress,

Nov 28

^{*} Biber's Mem pp 342-44, Tabakáti Akberi, f 142

companied by some chosen officers, and instructed him BOOK III

to invite the garrison, by every assurance of indemnity and favour, to yield the place, but, if his efforts were fruitless, then he was to plunder and lay waste the whole country around, and to do all in his power to A D 1526 reduce those who held the fortress to the last extremity

At this time, Alim Khan of Tehenger, an elder brother of Nizám Khan, the chief of Biána, offered to Báber to procure the surrender of the place, if he were entrusted with the direction of the troops sent against As he was possessed of a considerable jágír in the 1t neighbourhood, had great local knowledge, and professed to be in correspondence with officers in the fort, Báber accepted of his services "Though the men of Hindustán," says Báber, "are often brave swordsmen, yet they are extremely ignorant of the art of war, and of the disposition and conduct of troops as command ers" Alim seems to have been a man of this descrip tion He would listen to nobody, and, in spite of the remonstrances of Báber's veteran officers, carried the which fails, detachment close up to the walls of Biana The whole force did not consist of more than two or three hundred Túrks, and two thousand men of Hindustán and other countries Nizám Khan had, within the place, a garrison of above four thousand cavalry and ten thousand foot, composed of Afgháns and others Taking advan-tage of the error which Alim Khan had committed, he made a sally with his whole troops, charged him and his detachment furiously, threw them into confusion at the first onset, and pursued them in their retreat Alım Khan himself was taken prisoner But it was not long before the advance of Rana Sánga from Rant-bór, showed Nizám Khan that he must choose between two masters He preferred the Musulman Báber, to whom the important fortress of Biána was soon after but Biána surrenders. suirendeied^{*}, Nizám Khan being provided for by a CHAF L jagír in the Doáb And, about the same time, Mu- $\frac{1}{100}$  In  $\frac{1}{100}$  hammed Zeitun was induced, from similar motives, to suirender Dhúlpúr, which hes on the Chambal, be- and Dhul-tween Agia and Gualiár, and which Baber converted into an imperial domain †

But his good-foitune did not terminate here The Baber inimpregnable hill-fort of Gualiár has always been held Gualiár, by the natives of India to be of the greatest conse-quence Tátái Khan Sarangkháni, — who held it, though he had repettedly conveyed to Báber profes-sions of his attachment and submission, had always refused to admit the imperial tioops into his territories After Rana Sánga had taken Kándár, and when he was advancing to Biána, the hopes of the Hindus being revived, Raja Mankat Rái, who was of the an-cient race of the hereditary Rajas of Gualiár, Khan Jehán Bandéh, and other Hindu chiefs, entered the province, the inhabitants of which they attempted to raise in support of their clauns, so that they might expel the Musulman intruders, and recover possession of the fortress Tátár Khan, finding himself hard pushed, and of two evils, wishing rather to submit to a Musulman, though an enemy to his race, than to a Pagan, the enemy of his religion, wrote once more to Báber with his usual professions, offering to give up the place In consequence of the numerous demands for troops in different quarters, and the small number of which his army was composed, Báber happened at this time to have none of his superior Begs or more con-fidential servants near him Eager, however, to avail himself of so favourable an opportunity, he dispatched Rahímdád, one of his adherents, with a party of Bhíra and Láhúr men, to his assistance, with Sheikh Kuren

* The Tabakati Akberi says, by the intervention of Syed Rafia-edthe intervention of Syed Rafia-ed- † Báber 3 Mem, f 3-din, a holy man who had many dis- kati Akberi, f 141, 142

ciples in that age (f 141) † Báber s Mem, f S45, Taba CG3

воок пі

A n 1526 which is taken by stratagem and some Afgháns, who, on reaching Gualiár, found that Tátár Khan would not admit them into the fort*

There lived at this time in the place, one Sheikh Muhammed Ghus, a Derwish, celebrated for his sanctity, who had a number of disciples and adherents This man sent a private message to Rahimdád, to advise him to get into the fort, no matter how, and then to watch events, for, that Tátár Khan had changed his mind, and did not intend to give up the place In compliance with this suggestion Rahimdad, affecting a dread of being attacked by the common enemy, who hovered around, begged that he himself, with a few of his immediate servants, might be admitted into the fort, and that his troops should be suffered to he close under the walls for security This was imprudently allowed He next got permission to have certain of his followers stationed at the gate, along with Tátár's guard, to prevent quarrels and to point out who really were his servants, that they might be permitted to come and go without interruption. That same night, so many men were introduced, that Tátár Khan, seeing lumself entirely in their power, gave up the fort and repaired to Agra, where Báber assigned him a different district as a provision for his support +

* The Tabakati Akberi calls him Ixhwaja Rahimdad It calls the Derwish, Sheikh Muhammed Ghazah Ghus

† Babers Mem pp 345, 346, Briggss Ferishta, vol 11 pp 51, 52 Ferishta and Khifi Ixhan add several eircumstances to the details of this stratagem, but the simple account is contained in Babers Commentaries, from which all borrow Biber s account of the covered doolies, said to contain women, by which armed men were introduced into the fort, does not suit a hasty expedition like Rahimdad s, on which ladies never go. The author of the Tabakati Akberi (f 142), who seems to have been well acquainted with the holy man's character, relates, that Sheikh Muhammed, being thoroughly versed in the science of the attributes and mysterious names of God, offered to utter a prayer in one of these names for the taking of the castle, which he doubted not would find acceptance, an offer that was gladly accepted This is probably true, being quite in accordance with the mixture of superstition and artifice that characterises many of these Musulman saints See also Taril hi Bedaum, f. 137

About this time the Emperor had a narrow escape CHAP I from a dangerous attempt upon his life It happened  $_{A \ D} 1526$ that, when the late King's establishment was broken up,  $_{A \ D} 1526$ Báber had retained in his service four out of the nu-  $_{Báber \ S}$ merous cooks of Sultan Ibráhím, for the purpose of preparing such dishes as were peculiai to the country This had reached the ears of Ibráhím's mother, to whom Báber had assigned an estate for her maintenance She sent for one Ahmed, who had been her son's taster, or bekáwal, and, communicating with him through a female slave, gained him over, and sent him some poison folded up in a paper Ahmed, by the promise of great 1ewards, seduced one of the cooks, who had formerly been under him, delivered to him the poison, and instructed him to sprinkle it on some part of the food sent up to the Emperor The cook, being watched by the tasters who attend for that purpose in the imperial kitchen, was not able to throw it into the cooking-pots, but, while dishing the meat, contrived unperceived to scatter a portion of it over some slices of bread on which the different meats were to be placed Half of it, in the hurry, fortunately fell into the fire On this bread he placed some meats fried in butter The Emperor ate a piece of hare, and a good deal of fried carrot, without being sensible of any disagreeable taste He next ate a morsel or two of smoked meat, and felt nausea He thought little of it, at first, but by-and-by was seized with a violent retching, while the tray was still before him, and the usual effects of sickness followed Never before having been sick after eating, nor even after the deep drinking bouts, in which the galety of his character had so often led him to indulge, the circumstance excited his suspicions The cooks were placed in custody, and some of the meat was given to a dog, which swelled and became much distressed Two young men, who had eaten part of the food, were also violently affected An examination of the cooks GG4

BOOK 111. ensued, followed by that of the other persons con-A. D 1526 cerned, when the whole conspiracy was brought to light The guilty were subjected to the cruel punish-ments which even in polished times have continued to be inflicted on such crimes The bekawal was hewn in pieces, the cook flayed alive, of two female slaves who were implicated, one was shot, another was trampled to death by an elephant With the necessary medical assistance, Báber, in a short time, was restored to health The guilty queen was placed under custody, and her property confiscated *

Multán submits

л н 931 ар 1520

٦

Hardly twelve months had passed since Baber entered India, and only eight since the defeat of Sultan Ibráhím, yet the Emperor's sway now extended from Attok to Behar, and, from Kalpi and Guahar, to the mountains of Himála It was about this time, too, as is clsewhere mentioned, that Multán was added to his empire When, on a previous occasion, he invaded the -Penjáb, he had encouraged Shah Hasan Aighún, who was then in possession of Bheker, to attack that province This he willingly did, ravaged the country, and invested the capital On this first occasion, the Arghún retired, on getting a cession of that part of the Multán territory which lay below the Ghara But having not long after renewed his invasion, he once more sat down before the city of Multán, which, after a siege of fifteen months, he took by storm and plundered An end was thus put to the Langa dynasty in Multán, for, though Shah Hasan's troops were afterwards expelled by an insurrection of the inhabi-A D 1526 tants, the country submitted to the Emperor, and was annexed to the empire of Delhi †

This important year was still farther distinguished by the operations of the Uzbeks against the Persians,

* Báber's Mem pp $47, $48 Briggs's Ferishta, vol 11 pp 396 + Tarikhe Sind, f 145-7, 400, and 435, 436 Tabakatı Akberı, f 140-142,

The Uzbeks invade Kherásán

л п 932,

both in Khorás in and Bilkh That brave and hardy CHAP I people had now had time to recover from the alarm A D 1526 occasioned by their defeat near Merv, and the death of Shah Ismael, who some time before this period had been succeeded by his son Shih Tahmásp, then a boy, had relieved them from then dread of his talents and fortune * All were eiger to avail themselves of the fivourable opportunity thus offered, to recover the country and reputation which they had lost, and Obcid A # 930. AD 1523 Khan of Bokhurn, neting with the authority of his grand uncle, Kuchum Khan, then the great Kh m of the Uzbeks summoned all the Uzbek chiefs, on both sides of the Siri, to an invasion of Khorásan They accordingly entered that country, Durmish Khan Shámlu, the At ihk of Sam Mirzh, Shah Tahmásp's son, Begleibeg or governor of the province, retiring into Herát, where the Uzbeks besieged him for several months, but were finally compelled to raise the siege

In the course of the following year, Durinish Khan (1931) having died, and the governor of Meshhud having been  152 A D 1524 killed in a civil feud, there was no one left to take the elucif management of affurs in the province, and, quarrels having arisen among the Amirs, the army and the country of Khorasán fell into complete confusion This encouraged Obeid Khan to renew his invasion Crossing the Amu, at Charjú, he took Merv and Sirakhs, and, proceeding to the holy city of Meshhud, A. 1525 made hunself master of it, after a sharp resistance Tus also fell into his hands, after sustaining a siege of and Tus cight months, when, in spite of the capitulation entered into, all the men in the place were massacied by the Uzbeks, and the females carried off into slavery †

* Towards the end of this year, an envoy from Shah Tahmusp reached Baber s court, bringing, we are told, among other presents, two Circassian slaves for the Emperors haram Babers Mem p 346 † Tar Alim-Arai Abaso, f 22 -23, Baber's Mem pp 342, $15

Take Meshhíð л н 932.

The hostilities between the Persians and Uzbeks were BOOK III. not confined to Khorásán We have seen that, before A D 1526 Báber left Kábul, they had laid siege to Balkh, and, that Desertion of Báber was apprehensive of danger to his dominions beyond the mountains The decline of the Persian, and rise of the Uzbek, power, roused such unquiet Bishágheri and his brother spirits, even in Báber's court, as hoped to rise by disorder and change When Humáyun was on his way from Badakhshán to join Báber, then on his march from Kábul to the Indus, two of his officers, Múlla Bába Beshágheri, and Bába Sheikh, his younger brother, deserted, and went over to Kar Kitin, the Uzbek chief, who was besieging Balkh. It was not the first occasion on which these officers had proved faithless to Báber Múlla Bába had been his particular favourite, and intrusted with the most distinguished commands Yet both of them had formerly joined the Moghuls of Ghazni in their revolt under Shiram Ali Taghái When that rebellion was quelled, they had been pardoned and placed in offices of trust in the Kunduz territory, which did not prevent them from now deserting again Not long after they had joined the Uzbeks, Balkh surren-Balkh dered, upon which an expedition was sent, under the two deserters, against Báber's northern dominions, which reduced Eibák, Sárabágh, and Khuram, places situated in the valley of the Khúlm river, among the mountains between Khúlm and Kahmerd The garritaken, also Eibák, Ghurl, &c. son of Ghuri, an important town on the river of that name, panic-struck at the fall of Balkh, also surrendered to the Uzbeks Mír Hámeh, who had a stronghold m Affair of the neighbourhood, saw nothing left for it but in like Mir Hámanner to declare for them As soon as this was known, the Mír and his garrison were ordered to Balkh, and Bába Sheikh, one of the traitors, arrived with a party to take possession of the castle The Mír received Bába within its walls, and artfully assigned to the rest of the party quarters for the night in meh.

houses rather remote from each other He then availed CHAF Lhumself of the unsuspecting security in which they all were, attacked Bába Sheikh, whom he wounded, made hum and several of his followers prisoners, and dispatched an express to Báber's general in Kunduz, to inform hum how matters stood A detachment of troops was instantly hurried off to his rehef, who, on their approach, found that a fresh party of Uzbeks had arrived to invest the castle They succeeded, however, in bringing off Mír Hámeh and his men As Baba Sheikh's wound did not admit of his accompanying them, they cut off his head, not to leave him behind alive Báber, who was much, and justly, incensed against the brothers for their repeated treachery, rewarded Mír Hámeh with many marks of his favour *

• Baber's Mem p S50

CHAPTER II

WAR OF RÁNA SÁNGA, AND OF CHÁNDÉRI

RÁNA SÁNGA - HIS DOMINIONS - OHARACTER - PREVIOUS TRANS \C-TIONS WITH BABER - MUTUAL RECRIMINATION - HIS VIEWS OF AMBITION - SUPPORTS THE WESTERN AFGHANS - IS JOINFD BY HASAN KHAN --- MARCHES TO BIÁNA. --- ADVANCE OF BÁBER TO SIKRI, TO OPPOSE HIM - PROWESS OF THE RAJPUTS - SKIRMISH. --- HIS MEASURES TO REANIMATE HIS ARMY --- HE RENOUNCES THE USE OF WINE --- REMITS THE TEMGUA. --- ADDRESS TO HIS COUNCIL --- ITS SUCCESS --- PROGRESS OF THE AFGHANS IN VARIOUS OUARTERS -BABER MOVES ONWARDS - PREPARES FOR BATTLE -RÁJPÚT FORCES - BATTLE OF KANWA. - BÁBER VICTORIOUS. -ASSUMES THE TITLE OF GHÁZI - ROEL RETAKEN - MEWÁT RE-DUCID - HUMÁYUN SENT BACK TO BADAKHSHÁN - THE LOST TOWNS IN THE DOAB, AND COUNTRY BELOND THE GANGES, RE-COVERED - CAMPAIGN OF CHÁNDÉRI - MEDÍNI RAO - HIS HISTORY - REVOLUTIONS OF MALWA. - RÁNA SÁNGA CALLED IN - HIS VICTORY AND GENEROSITY - BABER'S PROPOSALS TO MEDINI RE-JECTED - HE TAKES THE OUTER TOWN AND FORT OF CHANDLEI -MASSAGRE OF THE RÁJPÚTS - DEATH OF RÁNA SÁNGA

BOOK III. BUT a formidable rival was now advancing to contest with Báber the sovereignty of India Rána Sánga was Rána the head of the Rájpút principality of Cheitúr, now Sánga. known as Udipúr, and the representative of a family which, by the universal consent of the Rájpúts, is allowed the pre-eminence among all the Rájpút tribes as the most ancient and the noblest Like Báber, he had been educated in the school of adveisity After overcoming the many difficulties and dangers of his His domiearly life, when he at length mounted the throne, he nions, carried on successful wars with his neighbours on every side, and added largely to his own extensive hereditary dominions From Sultan Mahmuid Khilp, the king of CHAF II Malwa, - whom he defeated in battle, took prisoner, and honourably entert mued, in a spirit worthy of the best, days of chivalry,-he had wrested the wide and valuable provinces of Bhilsa, Sárángpúr, Chándéri, and Rantbór * He had engaged in hostilities with Sultan Ibráhim of Delhi and twice had met the Sultan himself in pitched bittles To use the words of the lustorian of the Ráppúts, "Eighty thousand horse, seven Raps of the highest rink, nine Raos, and one hundred and four chieftains bearing the titles of Rawul and Rawut with five hundred war elephants, followed him into the field The princes of Mirwar and Amber did lum homage, and the Ruos of Gualiár, Ajmér, Sikri, Rnesen, Kilpee, Chanders, Boonds, Gigrown, Rampoor1, and Aboo, served hun as tributanes, or held of hum in eluef" His personal figure corresponded with reter his deeds "Ile exhibited at his death but the fragments of a warrior, one eye was lost in the broil with his brother, an arm in an action with the Lodi King of Delhi, and he was a eripple owing to a hund being broken with a cannon-ball in another, while he counted eighty wounds from the sword or the lance on various parts of his boly" And his rival, Baber, who loved in an enemy the qualities he himself possessed, pays hun only a just tribute of respect when he says, that the high enumence he then held he had attained but recently by his valour and his sword †

* Ferishta, vol 11 p 262

† Tod's Annals and Antiquities of Rajasthan, vol 11 pp 229 and 307, and Baber's Mem p 512 It is a general belief in Hindustan that the Rana's family is descended from Nushirwán the Just, and there are many legends on the subject. Khafi Khan, in mentioning the report, adds, "The author of this work, when he was in the Rajput country, ascertained from the Rana's divan or minister, and from other officers of his government, that the Ranas by no means considered themselves to be deseended from Nushirwan, and that, on the contrary, in consequence of diffurence of religion, they being Hindus and he a fire-worshipper, they viewed his seet with abhorrence.' This passage is curious, Rána Sánga was not now for the first time known to BOOK III Báber Before the Emperor had set out from Kábul on his last Indian expedition, he had received from the Rána an embassy conveying expressions of regard, His previous transactions with and it seems to have been arranged, that, while Báber attacked Sultan Ibráhím by marching upon Delhi, Rána Sánga was to attack him on the side of Agra Baber, on his part, complains, that, while he advanced Mutual recriminaand occupied these two capitals, the Rána did not make a single movement On the other hand the Rána complained of broken faith, and, in particular, claimed Kálpi, Dhúlpúr, and Biána, as his by agreement, all of which had been occupied by Baber And, as Agra itself had, till recent times, been considered as only a dependency of Biana, that city might also have been understood to accompany it But to an ambitious nan no great excuse was required for marching to conquest The empire of Delhi was in confusion, it ad become the prey of the strongest, and the forner successes and mighty power of the Rána might seem to justify at once his hopes of seating himself on the vacant throne of the Lodis, and his more reasonable and glorious ambition of expelling both the views of ambition Afghan and Túrki invaders from India, and restoring her own Hindu race of kings, and her native insti-tutions In the meanwhile, however, he acknowledged (Sultan Mahmúd Lodi, the son of Sultan Sekander Lodi, who had been set up by the Western Afgháns as the legal successor of Sultan Ibráhím *

л п. 933, л D 1527 Headvances to Biána.

The preparations made by Rána Sánga, evidently with the intention of marching towards Biána, had induced Báber not only to collect a strong force near though not very decisive for settling the question It is not in every copy of Kháfi Khan Indeed, the different manuscripts of that writer's history vary considerably from each other, there being, besides verbal alterations in the text, passages of considerable extent in some copies that are not in others These were probably added on a revision of the work

* Báber's Mem p 339

Báber

tion .

-1

t i

Agra for the purpose of repelling his attack, but CHAP II hastily to recal Humáyun from Juánpúr Soon after  $_{A,P,1527}$ that prince's return, the Emperor received intelligence Rebins, from Mehdi Khwája, the governor of Biána, that Rána  $J_{an 6}$ Sánga was certainly on his march towards that place, that Hasán Khan of Mewát had declared for him, and that it was necessary that reinforcements should ! be sent to his assistance without loss of time A light force was therefore instantly dispatched towards Biána, under Muhamined Sultan Mirza, and other officers of experience, who were instructed to hang upon the skirts of the approaching army, and to harass it in its movements Part of them, accordingly, pushed on towards the enemy, and brought back some heads and a few prisoners, from whom they got authentic information "folned by that Hasan Khan had actually arrived in the Ráma's han camp

This news was particularly unwelcome to the Emperor The Khan was a chief of great power and influence At the battle of Panipat, his son, Náher Khan, had been made prisoner, and he had ever since kept up a friendly correspondence with the Emperor, and a negociation for his release Báber, hoping that if he set the son at liberty he would attach the father by the strongest ties of gratitude, invested Náher Khan with a dress of honour, and sent him back to his father But though the son had made the fairest promises, no sooner did the old man hear that he was out of Báber's hands, and on his way to join him, than, without even waiting to see him, he marched from Alúr*, his capital, and joined the Rána

On the 11th of February, 1527, the Emperor marched Baber out of Agra to proceed against Rána Sánga, but halted  $\frac{\text{marches}}{\text{Jemadi I}}$ a few days near the city to collect and icview his  $\frac{9}{\text{Feb 11}}$ troops, and to get in order his train of artillery, the baggage, and camp followers As, in this warfare, he had little reliance on the Afghán chiefs or the men of Hindustán who had joined hun, he sent several of them to strengthen his various garrisons He then marched westward to Medhákúr, where he had previously caused wells to be dug, and thence next day to Sikri, the present Fatehpúr, which, from its having plenty of water, he considered as a good situation for a camp, but being apprehensive that the Rána, who was now near at hand, might attempt to occupy the ground before his arrival, he marched out with his troops in order of battle, ready to attack the enemy should they appear, and took possession of the place which had been chosen for his encampment, close by a tank He was now joined by Mehdi Khwája, and the troops from Biána, which he had called in, as well as by the detachment which had been sent out towards that place They had had some sharp rencounters with the-BOOK III detachment which had been sent out towards that place They had had some sharp rencounters with the Rájpúts, in which they had been severely handled, and taught to respect their new enemy A party from the garrison had some days before incautiously advanced too far from the fort, when the Rájpúts in great force fell upon them, and drove them in All the troops that had been engaged in this affair united in bestowing unbounded praise on the gallantry and prowess of the enemy Indeed, the Jaghatái Túrks found that they, had now to contend with a foe more formidable than either the Afgháns, or any of the network of Indee to had now to contend with a foe more formidable than either the Afgháns, or any of the natives of India, to whom they had yet been opposed The Rájpúts, ener-getic, chivalrous, fond of battle and bloodshed, animated by a strong national spirit, and led on by a hero, were ready to meet, face to face, the boldest veterans of the camp, and were at all times prepared to lay down their life for their honour A small party being sent out to get notice of their motions, discovered that they were encamped at Bisáwer *

A D 1527 to Sikri, Jemádi I. 14 Fcb 16 Encamps Prowess of the Rajpúts

* Báber s Mem pp 351, 352

}

The Emperor was accustomed to commit to his prin- cusp in cipil Begs in turn the charge of the advance and A p 1.27 pakets When it wis Mir Abdal aziz's day, that rish skimia and impetions youth pushed on seven or eight miles from Sikri The Rapits hearing of this inclutious torward movement dispatched to meet hum a body of four or five thou- and horse, who, without hesitation, charged the metant they came up - The force did not exceed a thousand or fifteen hundred. Many of his men were killed others taken prisoners and carried off the field on the very first onset. The moment the news of what was going on reached the camp, Mohib Ali Khehita, the muster's son, and his followers were pushed forwird to their assistance and there being no room for delay, numbers of separate horsemen as fast as they were campped were sent off at the best of their speed, while a regular detachment under Muhammed Ah Jengjung moved forward to support them Molub Ali, who arrived first, found every thing in disorder, Abdalizirs horse tail stundard taken and many excellent officers shun. Not only was he unable to turn the tide of success, but was himself unhor-ed, though finally brought off hy a desperate charge of his followers. The I imperor's troops were then pursued for about two nules, and it was only the arrival of the regular detichment, under Muhammed Ah, that checked the enciny Meanwhile, when the alarm reached the camp, the whole troops were called out and marshalled in bittle order to meet the hostile army, which was thought to be approaching But ifter the imperial line had advinced a nule or two, with all its artillery, it was found that the enciny, satisfied with their snecess, had returned back to their camp

These repeated successes of the Rapputs, the unex-more pected valour and good conduct they displayed, and twost dis their numbers, for they are sud to have amounted to an hundred and twenty thousand horse *, had begun to spread a visible discouragement among the troops Every precaution was employed by the Emperor, at once to strengthen his position and to give his men time to recover their confidence The guns were now placed in battery, and connected by chains, ditches were run, and other means adopted, to fortify the camp These operations were continued for three or four weeks, during which time the army kept within the trenches Báber, at this crisis, received a small but acceptable reinforcement of five hundred volunteers from Kábul Along with it arrived a long line of eamels loaded with wine from Ghazni, and Muhammed Sherif, a noted astrologer This soothsayer, instead of assisting the Emperor, as was the duty of his eraft, added to the depression and panic which prevailed in the eamp by publishing, at a most unseasonable moment, his opinion, that as Mars was now in the west, whoever engaged. coming from the opposite quarter, would be defeated † To divert the attention of the enemy, and to revenge

VOL 1

BOOK III

Mewát wasted ' Jemádi I 22 Feb 24

Báber renounces wine. To divert the attention of the enemy, and to revenge himself on Hasan Khan for joining the Rájpúts, Báber sent a predatory force into Mewát, with orders to plunder the country, to carry off the inhabitants into eaptivity, and to leave nothing undone to ruin the province The ravages were extended into many of the neighbouring districts, but the result of this diversion did not answer his expectations.

Báber was now in some measure cooped up in his eamp, while the enemy were in possession of the open country. The uneasiness which he, in consequence, experienced in this state of inaction appears, very naturally, to have excited feelings of religious compunction in his mind When he reviewed his past life, he keenly felt that he had long and openly violated one of the strictest injunctions of his faith, by the use of wine

+ Mem of Baber p 353

Like other habitual offenders, he had all along firmly CHAP II resolved to give up the evil custom at some future _____ 1527 time, but that time had been constantly deferred He now resolved to perform his vows "Having sent for the gold and silver goblets and cups," says he, " with all the other vessels used at drinking parties, I directed them to be broken up, and renounced the use of wine, purifying my mind The fragments of the goblets, and other gold and silver drinking vessels, I directed to be divided among derwishes and the poor The first peison who followed me in my repentance was Asás, who also accompanied me in my resolution of ceasing to cut the beard, and of allowing it to grow "* This was a visible sign commonly adopted by such as were under the influence of a vow Many nobles and others, to the number of three hundled, followed the example of their sovereign Salt was thrown into the ample store of wine just arrived from Ghazni, all the rest found in the camp was poured upon the ground, and a well was ordered to be dug and an almshouse built on the spot, to commemorate this great religious event As a boon Remits the to his Muhammedan followers and subjects, he gave up Jemádi I the Temgha or Stamp-tax in all his dominions, so far as  $\frac{24}{Feb}$  26 concerned Musulmans, and published a firman to that effect †

Temgha.

The dejection and alaim of Báber's troops had at this Address to time reached their extreme point The contagion had cil infected even his highest officers He excepts only Mír Alı Khalífa, hıs prime minister, who, he says, all along behaved admirably Báber, whose bold and elastic mind never gave admittance to despair, but, even in the lowest depths of danger, turned to any gleam of hope, saw that matters were fast advancing to a crisis, and that some stirring and energetic measures were in-dispensably required He determined to make a bold exertion to infuse a portion of his own heroic ardour BOOK III into the drooping spirits of his followers; and, for that A p 1527 purpose, he addressed himself to the religious feelings so powerful with all Moslems, but especially with such as are engaged in a holy war against infidels. "At length," says he, "observing the universal discouragement of my troops, and their total want of spirit, I came to a resolution Having called a general assembly of my Amírs and officers*, I addressed them - 'Noblemen and soldiers! Every man that comes into the world is subject to dissolution When we are passed away and gone, God survives, One and Unchangeable Whoever sits down to the feast of life must, before it is over, drink of the cup of death He who arrives at the inn of mortality, the world, must one day, without fail, take his departure from that mansion of sorrow How much better, then, is it to die with honour, than to live with infamy,

* Baber's Mem, p 354

> "'Give me but fame, and if I die I am contented If fame be mine, let Death claim my body'[†]

"'The most High God has been propitious to us He has now placed us in such a crisis that if we fall in the field, we die the death of martyrs, if we survive, we rise victorious, the avengers of his sacred cause Let us, therefore, with one accord swear on God's Holy Word, that none of us will for a moment think of turning his face from this warfare, or shrink from the battle and slaughter that ensue, till his soul is separated from his body' Master and servant, small and great, all with emulation seizing the blessed Korán in their hands, swore in the form that I had given My attempt was completely successful, and the effects

Its effici.

* The Tabakáti Akberi, f 142, asserts that, at this council, the grandees advised that Baber, having fortified and provisioned some castles and places of strength in Hindustan, should himself retire for a time into the Penjab

† A couplet from the Shahnáma of Ferdausi were instantly visible far and near, on friend and foe " Baber, to improve this spirit, ordered an immediate advance from the entrenchments in which the army had so long been cooped up *

In truth he had no time to lose, the danger was Success of thickening around him Since he had left Agra, insurrection and revolt appeared on every hand The towns and forts, of which with so much labour he had gained possession, were fast changing masters Rábere and Chandwar on the Jamna, Koel in the Doab, and Sambhal beyond the Ganges, but of all of them near Agra, had been retaken by the Afgháns His troops had been obliged to abandon Kanáuj Gualiár was blockaded by the Rájpúts of the vicinity Alem Khan[†], who was sent to relieve it, instead of executing his orders, had marched off to his own country Many Hindu chiefs deserted the cause of the Emperor Indeed, the previous conquests and recent success of Rána Sánga, a Hindu, had inspired all his countrymen with hopes that a change of dynasty was about to take place, and they hailed with joy the prospect of a native government

It was on the 12th of March that Baber drew for- Baber moves his ward his guns, and a kind of defensive cover that comp, moved on wheels, and which served as a breastwork, Jemidi II. supporting them by his matchlock-men and all his March 12 army He himself galloped along the line, animating his troops and officers, and giving them instructions how to conduct themselves in every emergency that could occur The army having advanced a mile or two. halted to encamp As soon as the Rájpúts heard that they were in motion, several bodies of them galloped close up to the guns Báber, not intending to engage in a general action that day, quietly finished his in-trenchments and ditches, and then sent out a few

* Báber's Mem p 357

5

† This seems to be Alem Khan Jılal Khan Jıghat of Kalpı, already mentioned See Baber's Mem pp 849, 851, 858

the Afthe Doáb BOOK III. horsemen to skirmish with them, and try the temper of his men They took several prisoners, and returned with a number of heads elevated on their spears, or dangling from their saddle-bows, which had a wonderful effect in restoring the confidence of the troops.

and again advances.

Jemádi II. 13 March 16 Prepares for a general battle

He now threw up other trenches, in a position about a mile or two farther in advance, near the spot which he had pitched upon as favourable for a general engagement, and, when they were finished, advanced to occupy them, dragging forward his guns. His people, having reached their ground, were still busy in pitching their tents, when news was brought that the enemy was in sight All were instantly ordered to their posts Báber mounted, and drew up his troops, riding cheerfully along the ranks, and confidently assuring them of victory The centre he took to himself, assisted by Chin Taimur Sultán*, the right wing he committed to Hu-máyun, who had under him Kásim Husein Sultan, -Hındu Beg, and Khosrou Kokıltásh, the left he en-trusted to Syed Mehdı Khwájeh, hıs son-ın-law, with Muhammed Sultan Mírza, Abdal-azíz, and Muhammed Alı Jeng-jeng He appointed strong reserves to carry succour wherever it was required, and, on the right and left, placed two flanking columns, chiefly composed of Moghul troops, who formed what is called the Tulúghma, and were, on a signal given, to wheel round on the enemy's flank and rear in the heat of battle This arrangement he had learned, to his cost, in his carly wars with the Uzbeks, and he had practised it, as we have seen, in his later wars with brilliant success His Hindustáni troops appear to have been stationed chiefly in the left His artillery, under Ustád Ali Kuli, was placed in the centre, in front, connected by chains,

* Chin Taimur Sultan was a Moghul, son of the younger Khan of the Moghuls, and consequently Baber's cousin, Muhammed Sultan Mírza was, by his mother, a grandson of the great Sultan Husein Mirza, of Herat, Kásim Husein Sultan was an Uzbek of high rank and protected by the moverble defences or breastworks cuvr n which he had constructed, behind which were placed Ap 1527 matchlock-men, and, in their rear, a body of chosen troops, ready either to repel any attack from behind, or themselves to rush forward and charge the enemy, whenever the chains that connected the gains were dropped to permit their passage. The army abounded with veteran commanders, who had learned the art of war under the Emperor hunself

In the Rapput army, the commanders under R ina Resput Singh were generally great chieftains, who, from their force territorial possessions, could bring a large force into the field Thus Sil cheddin *, the Clucf of Bhilsh, is rated at thirty thousand horse, Hasan Khan Mewati, twelve thousand, Rahl Udi Sing Nagari, of Dongerphr, ten thonsand, Medim Rio, the Chief of Chauderi, ten thousand The first and last of these had acted an unportant part in the history of Malwa Sultan Mahmúd Lodi 1 son of Sultan Sek inder Lodi of Dellii, who was acknowledged by the Afghans of the Dellu kingdom ind by the Rana, as the successor of his brother Ibrahim, though he possessed no territory, yet had with hun a body of ten thousand adventurers, who hoped to be liberally rewarded should fortune raise hun to the throne There were other chiefs, who could command each from four to seven thousand men, and all were munated by the most exalted hopes, and by hatred of the common enemy A more gallant army could not be brought into the field +

No sooner was the array of the Emperors army

* Silalicidiu, the Pagan, as he is called in the official account of the victory, is the Silbadi of Ferislita. who occupied Bhilsa, Raisen, and Sarangpur Briggs 5 Ferishta, vol iv p 264 In one manuscript of the Akbernama, A = f = 32 r, the name Sil ilicidin is corrected in the inargin, Silliadi The former, however, is the correct title given by one of the Sultans of Milwa to this great Hundu chief, the latter is the popular corruption of it.

† The official account (Mcm p 361) estimates the numbers which the different chiefs did or could bring into the field at two hundred and ten thousand men completed, than, to guard against the evils that might BOOK III be occasioned through the over-ardent forwardness of his troops, he sent strict commands on every side, that no man should move from his place, or dare to engage the enemy in any shape, till orders were given The battle began about half-past nine in the morning, by a desperate charge made by the Rájputs on Báber's right Bodies of the reserve were pushed on to its assistance, and Mustafa Rúmi, who commanded one portion of the artillery on the right of the centre, opened a fire upon the assailants Still, new bodies of the enemy poured on undauntedly, and new detachments from the reserve were sent to resist them The battle was no less desperate on the left, to which, also, it was found necessary to despatch repeated parties from the reserve When the battle had lasted several hours, and still continued to rage, Báber sent orders to the flanking columns to wheel round and -charge, and he soon after ordered the guns to advance, and, by a simultaneous movement, the household troops and cavalry stationed behind the cannon were ordered to gallop out on right and left of the matchlockmen in the centre, who also moved forward and continued their fire, hastening to fling themselves with all their fury on the enemy's centre When this was observed in the wings, they also advanced These unexpected movements, made at the same moment, threw the enemy into confusion Their centre was shaken, the men who were displaced by the attack made in flank, on the wings and rear, were forced upon the centre and crowded together Still the gallant Rájpúts centre and crowded together Still the gallant Rapputs were not appalled They made repeated desperate attacks on the Emperor's centre, in hopes of recovering . the day, but were bravely and steadily received, and swept away in great numbers Towards evening, the confusion was complete, and the slaughter was con-sequently dicadful The fate of the battle was decided Nothing remained for the Ráiphits, but to char n force their way through the bodies of the enemy that Ap 1/27 were now in their rear, and to effect a retreat. The Emperor pursued them as far as their camp, which was about three or four miles from his own On reaching it, he halted, but detached a strong body of horse, with orders to pursue the broken troops of the con-Biber vie torious federates without halting, to cut up all they met, and to prevent them from reassembling "In this," says he, "I neted wrong I should myself have gone forwird, and ought not to have entrusted the business to another I had got about a kos beyond the enemy's camp when I turned brek, the dry being spent, and reached my own head quarters at bed-time prayers" He idds a charicteristic meedote "Muhammed Sherif, the astrologer, whose perverse and seditions prictices I have mentioned, came to congratulate me on my victory, I poured forth upon him a torrent of abuse, but, when I had reheved my heart by it, although he was a self-concerted fellow, herthemship inclined, and an intolerable evil speaker, yct, as he was my old servant, I gave him a lak in a present *, and dismissed linn, comm inding linn to depart out of my dominions "

A.D. 1527

Battle of Kanwa.

No victory could be more complete The enemy were quite broken and dispersed The whole fields around were strewed with the dead, as well as the roads to Biana and Alwar Among the slam were Hasan Khan Mewáti, who fell by a matchlock shot, Ríul Udi Sing, of Dongerpír†, Rai Chanderbhan

• The transactions against Runa Singa are given in detail by Baber linnself, Mein p 349-368, and by Abulfazl, Akbernaina, f S1-53 The donation to the astrologer was probably a lak of tingas, or about 8507 See Appendix L

† In the translation of the offierd account of the victory (Baber's Mem p 367), this prince is called the Wah of Udipur Colonel Tod, to whom Indian history, but particularly that of the Rupputs, owes so much (his valuable work having shed a new light on the manners of that remarkable people), remarked the error (Hist and Antiq of Rajasthan, vol 1 p 306 note) On examining the manuscripts of Baber, I find that though the

Chohan; Manikchand Chohan, and many other chiefs BOOK UL Báber directed a tower of heads to be erected, ofnote A D 1527 on a rising ground near the camp, and henceforth Takes the assumed the proud title of Gházi, Victorious in a Holy War Rána Sánga himself escaped, it is said, by the devotion of some of his followers, who threw themselves in the way of the pursuers, and sacrificed their lives for his safety, and the regret expressed by Báber for not having urged the pursuit in person has reference probably to the escape of his illustrious rival It is remarkable that, since this defeat of Rána Sánga, no Rána of Cheitúr has ever taken the field in person against any of the princes of the House of Taimur When these princes were along with their armies, the Rána's troops have been entrusted to some eminent Rápút chief, the Rána himself withdrawing to some one of the hill-forts of his country

Sultan Mahmúd Lodi, deprived by the event of thisbattle of all immediate hope of filling the throne of Delhi, fled to Sultan Behåder Shah, the King of Guzrát *

Koel retaken, Jemadi II 14 March 17

On the very day after the battle, Báber detached a strong force to chastise the insurgents in the Doáb, who had surprised Koel and made his governor prisoner The fame of the victory preceded them, and, as they approached, the insurgents fled in all directions Elías Khan, their leader, was taken some time after and flayed alive, with a barbarity which disgraced the age and country

Three marches now brought the Emperor to Biána, through fields all the way strewed with the bodies of Here, being on the borders of the enemy's the slain country, he called a council of his nobles, and consulted about invading it. But, as their march must have lain .

manuscript which I generally followed as most correct has Udipur, the Metcalfe MS has Dongerpur, confirming the Colonel's correction

* Khafi Khan In Báber's army, at the battle, we find an envoy from Persia, and Husein, ambassador from Sistan

title of Gházi

through a barren waste, deficient in water, and, as the CHAP IL heat had already become excessive, it was resolved to  $\frac{1}{A-P-1527}$  defer this enterprise to a more favourable time

Resolved, however, to improve his victory to the Mewat utmost, he increded into Mewát That country had H always hitherto yielded but an imperfect obedience to the kings of Dellin, though it lies close upon their capital Whether from the hilly nature of the country and the bravery of the hardy inhabitants, from the constant diversions occusioned by the extent of the Delhi dominions, which distracted and drew off the attention of the kings, or from that principle, fortunate m many respects in some castern countries, which leads the kings to govern rather by means of secondary princes and delegated authority, than directly and by their immediate servants, they had never fully subdued it It had been in the possession of Hasan Khan's family for two hundred years The Khan, as we have seen, had been able to bring twelve thousand horse into the field, and was at the head of the opposition made to Báber by the old dependents of the Lodi kings, for the Rána of Cheitúr, who led the grand confederation, was not in the rink of a dependent, never having owned the yoke of these princes It would seem that the Khan, even for some time before this grand invasion, had begun to entertain appreliensions from the success of Baber's arms, and, in the year when that monarch conquered Lahúr und Dibálpúr, had left Tajura, the old capital, and built and fortified Alwar, in a stronger situation The great defeat which the confederate army received at Kanwa, and in which he fell, crippled the stiength, and still more had broken , the confidence of the Mewsitis As the Emperor approached Alwar, he was met by a mission from Náher Khan, who had lately been his prisoner, and who had sneeceded his father, deprecating the Emperoi's re-sentment The young prince was induced to visit the camp, on the promise of security to his person, was graciously received, and allowed a Pergana for his support, an intimation that he had lost his hereditary dominions It is probable that he had expected to be continued in the principality of his forefathers, for he soon after embraced an opportunity of withdrawing from the custody in which he was placed, and effected his escape from the camp The Emperor appointed governors to the province and its chief forts, with ample allowances, and bestowed on Humáyun the whole treasure and property found in Alwar. He soon after dispatched him to Kábul, accompanied by the mountaineers of Badakhshán whom the prince had led BOOK III. A p 1527 Humáyun sent back to Badakhshan mountaineers of Badakhshán, whom the prince had led from their country, and who now longed for home, they, therefore, gladly availed themselves of a promise given by the Emperor before the great battle, that, after beating the enemy, he would discharge as many after beating the enemy, he would discharge as many as chose to go Báber accompanied his son a march or-two on his route, and took an affectionate leave of him, but the young prince, soon after, in passing through Delhi, with an unpardonable levity, opened some of the chambers that contained the Emperor's treasure, and seized the contents by force, — a conduct that gave great pain to the Emperor, and led him to write in severe terms to his son Báber, having made a slight circuit in Mewát, again visited Biáni and Sikri, and returned to Agra * Rejeb 23 to Agra * April 25

The lost towns reco vered Being now disengaged of his most formidable enemies, he was enabled to send a force to recover Chándwár and Ráberi, places not far distant from Agra, of which the insurgents had made themselves masters, during his operations against Rána Sánga The consternation occasioned by his success was such that this object was effected with little difficulty, and, even Etáwa, lower down the Jamna, which had never yet

* Baber's Mem, pp 368, 371

submitted to his power, was surrendered by Kutb Khan, CHAP II who held it л d 1527

It has already been remarked, that the spirit of in- Success besurrection had not been confined to the neighbourhood Ganges of Agra, but had extended to the eastward Beyond the Ganges, the restless Baban, ever on the watch, had availed himself of the difficulty in which the Emperor's affairs placed him, to occupy Laknáu, and Sultan Muhammed Duldái, Báber's governor, had been forced to abandon Kanáuj Determined to regain what had been thus lost, the Emperor bestowed the government of these countries on Muhammed Sultan Mírza,---a grandson of the great Sultan Husein Mírza of Khorásán, and one of the Emperor's favourite officers,-and sent him, with a strong army, to recover the lost territory ban no sooner heard that Muhammed Sultan had crossed the Ganges, than he deserted Laknáu, and retired once .-- more into the upper country.

The territories immediately around Agra being thus recovered, and the greater part of his former conquests regained, the Emperor had now leisure to make a distribution, among his faithful followers, of the various provinces and districts of which they were composed, and, as the rainy season was at hand, during which an army could not keep the field, he granted permission to his chiefs and officers to repair with their followers to their respective governments and jágírs, that they might be the better able to regulate their affairs, and to make the necessary preparations for rejoining him, when the rains were over * A twelvemonth only had passed since the battle of Panipat, but his condition was already much improved That battle had broken, the power of the Afghans in India, as that of Kanwa had since broken that of the Hindu confederacy He had evinced, to every class of men in the country, the decided superiority of his arms, and, with his mental BOOK III resources, the awe inspired by his hardy northern troops, and his own bravery and conduct, the conquest of every part of India second to he open to his arms

It affords a curious proof of the active and unsettled life of Báber, that, as he hunself informs us, he had never since his eleventh year, spent the grand festival observed on the termination of the Rúmzan twice at one place "Last year's festival," says he, "I spint at Agra. In order to keep up the usage, on Sunday the 30th, I proceeded to Sikri to keep the feist there "*

During the rams he visited Sikri, Dhúlpúr, and Bari, proceeding as far as the Chambil, he thence returned to Agra, and went to Kol or Koel in the Doab, and on to Sambhal, beyond the Gauges, returning by a diffe-1 cnt route

/ When the rainy monsoon was over, Biber's mind was divided between two plans of operation, which suggested themselves for the following campaign the one, to march against the Afglians of the East, who still held out, in considerable force, beyond the Ganges and in Behár, the other, to march against some of those Hindu chiefs in the West whose confederacy he had felt to be so formidable IIc decided on the latter, not only thinking, probably, that under the guidance of such a leader as Rána Sánga they were most to be feared, but influenced by a vow which he had made, during his difficulties, that he would prosecute, to a prosperous termination, the holy war which he had begun, against the infidels Medim Rao, the chief of Chanderi, and one of the most formidable of them, was the first object of his vengeauce. Chanden, that chieftam's principal stronghold, hes on the sonth-east of Malwa, and towards it Baber bent Tus course

A 11 934 - Leaving Agra early in December, he marched down Rebl I 14 Dec. 9

June 30

Rámzán 30

Campaign against Chanderl

A D 1527

Baber's Mem, p 373

the left bank of the Jamna, and afterwards crossed that cusr n river below its junction with the Chambal Having  $_{A \approx 1527-6}$  reason to entertain violent suspicions of the fidehity of Red II 3 Sheikh Bayezid, - who had joined him after Sultan Ibrahm's death, with the army which that prince had sent against the revolted Afghan chiefs of the East,-Báber detached from his army Muhammed Ah Jeng- Jeng jeng leng, a veteran officer, with directions to proceed to the est-Kanauj, and to call upon Muhammed Sultan Mirza, ward the governor of the farther province, and the other generals and chiefs who were in that quarter, to meet hun there, and, in conjunction with them, to march against the hostile Sherki Afgháns, who acknowledged Sultan Muhammed Shah of Behar Daber, at the same time, instructed Jeng-jeng to summon Sheikh Bayezid to join him in the expedition If he came frankly when invited, they were all to proceed against the common enemy, but, if he did not, Muhainmed Ah was instructed to consider him as ill-affected, and to take measures recordingly for bringing limit to reason

Having made these arrangements, the Emperor con- nitters tinued his route down the Jainna, he himself generally proceeding by water He reached Kalpi on the first day of January, A D 1528, and thence struck off, in Reb II.8 the direction of Irej and Kechwa. Here, the country  $\int_{an.1}^{a.1528}$ , being little frequented was covered with jungle, so that it was necessary to send on pioneers to cut down the wood before them, and to form a road for the pas- He reaches sage of cannon and waggons On the 20th he reached ChanderL Chander, the unmediate object of his expedition *

Medini Rao, who at this time possessed the town, Medini was a Rájpút chief of great power Chándéri had ori- Rao ginally been subject to the Sultans of Málwa, but, during the civil wars that followed the accession of Sultan Mahmud Khily (the present King of Málwa), march.

Dec 27

Rebi 11 27 Jan 20

Muhammed Shah, one of his brothers, who aspired to BOOK III the crown, had seized upon it, and made it the seat of A D 1528 his government This pretender was supported by Sultan Sekander Lodi of Delhi, who sent several armies to his aid On his death, in the reign of Sultan Ibráhím of Delhi, leaving a younger son named Ahmed Shah, Ibráhím carried off the young prince, his ally, and placed a dependent of his own in the government Rána Sánga, in the course of his wars with Delhi, having given Sultan Ibráhím a great defeat at Dhúlpúr, many of the neighbouring Hindu chiefs, who till then -had adhered to the King of Delhi, deserted him, Chándéri was one of several important places which fell into the hands of the Rána, who bestowed it on the present occupant, Medíni Rao

His bistory

Rána Sánga called in

His bistory Medíni Rao was a very distinguished personage in his time He had been the means of placing and con-firming the reigning King, Sultan Mahmúd Khilji, on Revolutions, the chirolie of Mandu, and, Eupported by his Rájpúts, had defeated various pretenders to the crown, in bloody He had, for several years, the entue direction battles of Mahmúd's affairs, till the jealousy of the Musulman chiefs, whose pride was hurt at the supremacy of a Rájpút and a heathen, and probably disgusted by the overbearing habits often acquired by an all-powerful minister, produced intrigues at court; which, in the end, wrought upon the Sultan to escape from his thraldom, and take refuge in Gujrát Here Mozaffer Shah, the sovereign of the country, received him honourably, and, at the head of a powerful army, restored Mahmúd to the throne of Mandu But, as many districts, especially those held by Hindus, adhered to the minister, and refused to acknowledge a prince thus imposed on them by foreign force, and by a Musulman, a civil war was the consequence, and such of the Rájpút chiefs of Malwa as were hostile to Sultan Mahmud called in His victory Rána Sánga to their assistance The restless impatience of the Sultan led prematurely to a battle, in which the CHAP II Gurát auxiliary cavalry were destroyed by the Rájpút _ 1528 horse, and the Sultan hunself wounded and taken prisoner The conduct of Rána Sánga may illustrate the chivalrous character of the Rapputs "" His enemy Rána Sánga of Cheitúr," says Ferishta, " caused him to be brought into his own tent, dressed his wounds, attended him in person, and showed him every mark of attention, and, after his recovery, furnished him with and senean escort of one thousand Ráphit horse, who conducted rosity him back to Mando, where he resumed the reins of government"* The consequence, however, was, that the power of the kingdom of Malwa was broken, and a , variety of nearly independent principalities rose, or rather revived, on its ruins Besides Chanderi, Medini Rao held also Gagrown, and several other districts He was present with his troops in the Rána's army at the battle of Kanwa †

When the Emperor's army approached Chanders, Ribers Medini Rao was himself in the place, with four or five thousand of his Rápúts Báber sent a friend of the Rao into the fort, to urge him to surrender, and to offer him Shemsábád in the Doib in exchange for Chándéri / This negociation failing, the Einperor pro- rejected. ceeded to construct his batteries, and to make preparations for an escalade When every thing was in readiness, he gave orders for the camp to be moved nearer to the town, preparatory to making the attempt Jemadi J That very morning, just as the army had reached its Jan 28 ground, Nizám-ed-din Ali Khalífa, Báber's prime minis- Alarming news from ter, brought him some letters which had that instant the East

* Briggs's Ferishta, vol iv p 263.

+ Briggs's Ferishta, vol iv pp 245-264, Babers Mem, pp 375, 376 Baber mentions the captivity of Mahmud, p 385 Ferishta does not mention the defeat of Ibrahim, and fixes Medini's possession of Chanders from the former event, Báber from the latter There can be no comparison between the weight of the two authorities proposals

arrived They contained the disagreeable information BOOK III that his army in the East, while marching in disorder, had been attacked and defeated, that his generals had A D. 1028 been forced to abandon Laknáu, to recross the Ganges, and fall back upon Kanáuj Báber, who saw that his minister was extremely agitated, preserving his own presence of mind, calmly remarked that all events were in the hands of Providence; desired him to conceal the I resence of intelligence, and to push on every preparation for making a grand attack on the citadel next morning That night, the outer town, which was inadequately garrisoned, fell into his hands, the walls being escaladed he takes the enter by his troops, who entered it at the same moment on different sides and the f et town

Next morning, accordingly, the troops were ordered to their posts, and commanded to wait in readiness to make a general assault, the moment the royal standard should be raised and the sound of the kettle-dium hard The Emperor then repaired to his battery, where the chief engineer discharged two or three shots, in that age a todious operation The citadel stands on the top of a hill; the outer fort and the town, which was built cutirely of stone, he below on the slope of the hill The defences being strong, and cut out of the rock, the effect was trifling There was a covered way, the wall of which ran from the citadel to connect it with a large tank at the bottom of the hill, and this was the point where the fort was judged to be most assailable To distract the enemy, an attack was made on every part of the citadel at once; but against that point was the main assault directed, and, though the Rapputs excrted themselves with the utmost bravery and vigour, hurling down rocks from above, and throw-' the storning parties persevered, and one of them at length succeeded in mounting where the wall of the outer fort was knit to the projecting works. Nearly at mind,

Laber 3

the same time the wall was scaled in two or three other CHAF IL places The garrison stationed in the covered way fled, _ D. 1528 and that part of the works was occupied The upper fort was less obstinately defended The assailants scaled and entered it by storin This success was followed by self seri-a dreadful sacrifice made to Rájpút honour "In a fice of the short time," says the royal historian, "the Pagans ushed out, completely naked, to attack us, put numbers of my men to flight, and leaped over the ramparts Some of our troops were attacked furiously, and put to the sword The reason of this desperate sally from the works was, that, on giving up the place for lost, they had put to death all their wives and women, and being resolved not to survive, had stripped themselves naked, in which condition they rushed out to the fight, and engaging with ungovernable desperation, drove our people along the ramparts Two or three hundred Pagans had entered Medíni Rao's palace, where numbers of them slew cach other, one person taking his stand with a sabre in his hand, while the others pressed in one by one in succession, and stictched out their necks, eager to die In this way many went to hell, and by the favour of God, in the space of two or three geris*, I gained this celebrated fort, without rusing my standard or beating my kettle-dium, and without exerting the whole strength of my arms " †

It had been Báber's intention, after reducing Chándéri, to proceed against the neighbouring countries of Raisen, Bhilsa and Sarangpúr, which were part of the

* About an hour, the geri being twenty-four minutes.

† Baber s Mem, p 377 Khafi Khan gives (f 36) rather a different account of this affair He affirms that the outer fort, which includes the town, was given up on condition that the lives of the in habitants and garrison were to be spared, that, however, the Rájputs, on leaving the place, had been guilty of some acts of hostility, in consequence of which Baber's troops cut three or four thousand of them in pieces, that upon this Medíni Rao and his followers took refuge in the citadel, where, after putting to death all the women and children, they slew each other, after the manner of Rajputs BOOK III territories of Siláh-ed-dín, also a Rájpút, and, after he had conquered them, to complete his operations by marching at once against Rána Sánga himself by Cheitúr But the unfavourable news from the East interfered with these intentions He therefore resolved to leave Ahmed Shah (the prince whose claims to Malwa had been supported by Sultan Ibráhím, and whom Báber now found it convenient to patronise,) in possession of Chándéri, with an auxiliary force of two or three thousand Chaghatáis and Hindustánis to maintain the country, and himself to direct his march without delay, to restore his affairs beyond the Ganges *

7

Death of Rána Sánga It must have been soon after these events that the life of Báber's great opponent Rána Sánga came to a close. The account given of his death, like the story of his life, is mixed with something of the romantic and marvellous It is said, that, having laid siege to Irej†, a town which had declared for Báber, one of the sages of ancient days ‡ appeared to him in a dream, under a terrific form, and with a menacing demeanour, that the Rána arose from his troubled sleep, trembling and shivering, that a violent fever succeeded, that he raised the siege, but died in his retreat, having survived the vision but a few days His death, and the internal feuds that followed in Cheitúr, relieved Báber from any apprehensions of danger from that quarter §

* Briggs's Ferishta, vol 11 p 60 It is at this period that Ferishta and Kháfi Khan (f 36) place the surrender of the important fortresses of Raisen, Sarangpur, and Rantambór to Báber, who, it is said, gave them over to Ahmed Shah The real history of the acquisition of Rantambór, which, at this time, was in the occupation of Rána Sánga, is given in a future page It does not appear that Bíber ever possessed either of the others

† Or Erich

2 Perhaps one of the Rishis

¿ Akbernáma, f 33 v Abulfazl makes Runa Sanga's death precede the fail of Chánderi, which does not agree with Baber's narrative It probably took place soon after he had marched to the eastward. Báber, in his diary, 14 Moharrem, A II 935 (29 Sept. 1528), mentions that Rána Ruttonsi had succeeded his father, and that Bikermájit, his next brother, was in Rantambor Mein, p 385

CHAPTER III

BABER'S CAMPAIGNS ON THE GANGES

BABER MARCHES TO THE EAST - PASSES THE GANGES AT LANAUJ - DISPERSES THE ARMY OF BABAN AND BAYEZID - RETURNS TO AGRA -TRANSACTIONS IN KHORASAN -INVASION OF THE UZBERS -OBEID MHAN BESIEGES HERÁT - THE SHAH DEFEATS AN UZBIK ARMY-RAISES THE SIEGE OF HERAT-ADVANCES TO MESHIID-DEFEATS THE UZBERS WITH GREAT SLAUGHTER --- TEMPORARY REVIVAL OF BABER'S DESIGNS ON SAMARKAND - BALUCH INROADS -THE EASTERN AFGHANS ACKNOWLEDGE SULTAN MAILMUD LODI - RAPID INCREASE OF HIS POWER. - THREE COMPETITORS FOR THE EASTLEN KINGDOM - BABER TAKES THE FIELD - DISPLESES THE AFGHANS - OVERRUNS BEILAR - AFFAIRS OF BENGAL - NE-GOTIATIONS WITH THAT POWER. - BABER ATTACKS AND DEFEATS THE BENGAL ARMY - SUBMISSION OF THE AFGHANS - PEACE WITH BENGAL -BABER RETURNS TO AGRA.

BABER, having brought the war of Chandein to a con- CHAP III clusion, lost no time in marching to meet the danger that threatened him in the East Having repassed the Baber Jamna, he proceeded without intermission towards the East. Kanáuj On the road, he learned that his suspicions An 934 of Sheikh Bayezid's fidelity had not been unfounded That chief had joined Baban and Maarúf, the leaders of the revolt, with his whole army, so that Báber's troops had been compelled to retreat across the Ganges, to evacuate even Kanáuj, and to fall back on Ráberi, --movements that had enabled the enemy to take Shemsábád, a rich town in the Doáb, by storm The Emperor, having passed the Jamna, sent a light force in advance to gain intelligence of the motions of the Afgháns, but, while he was yet several marches off, the confederates having got notice of his approach, in alarm

A D 1528 marches to Jemádi I 11 Feb 2

BOOK III

A p 1528

abandoned Kanáuj, and, retreating across the Ganges, took up a position on its left bank, opposite to that city, determined to dispute the passage of the river On the 27th of February, the imperial army having marched past Kanáuj, encamped on the right bank of the Ganges Báber had resolved to force a passage, the Ganges Baber had resolved to force a passage, and ordered a bridge to be constructed across the river About thirty or forty boats were collected, by means of which several skirmishing parties passed over The chief engineer, Ustád Ah Kuh, planted a great gun to cover the workmen employed on the bridge, while a number of matchlockmen kept up a fire from a breast-work a little above, and others from an island somework a little above, and others from an island some-what below The account given by Báber illustrates the nature of the clumsy massy guns of that age "For several days," says he, "while the bridge was construct-ing, Ustád Ah Kuh played his gun remarkably well. The first day, he discharged it eight times, the second day, sixteen times, and for three or four days, he continued sixteen times, and for three or four days, he continued firing at the same rate The gun which he fired was that ealled Dig Gházi (the vietorious gun) It was the same that had been employed in the war with Rána Sánga, whence it got its name Another gun," he adds, "larger than this, had been planted, but it burst at the first fire"* Such ponderous pieces of artillery must, in the open field, have produced effect chiefly by their novelty, and by the alarm they excited in minds not accustomed to the terrific effects of their explo-sions sions

Insies the ( vn es, Jemadi II March 10

The Afgháns treated Báber's attempt to throw a bridge over the Ganges with ridicule Yet, such was his success, that, on the 13th of March, it was com-pleted; when part of his troops passed over, and had a skirmish with the enemy He next marched over a considerable body of his best soldiers These, the enemy advancing in all their force attacked with great CHAP III vigour, while thus divided from the rest of the army,  $_{A \ P}$  1528. and succeeded, at one time, in driving the left from its position; but the centre and right, standing firm, repulsed that portion of the enemy to whom they were opposed The action continued till late in the evening, and the night was employed in bringing the troops back to the right bank Báber blames himself for not having rather carried over the rest of his army to join them on the other bank, but says that he was deterred from doing so by some superstitious fancy as to lucky times Next day, however, he carried over his artillery, and the day following, all his army had orders to cross. But the enemy, in the meantime, had marched The enemy off The Emperor sending Sultan Chin Taimur, with a strong force to pursue them, himself advanced and occupied Laknáu on the 21st, and passed the Gumti He takes Moving again in pursuit of the retreating enemy, he Jemidi IL encamped, on the 28th, four or five miles above Oud, March 21 at the junction of the Gogra and Sirwu Till then, ^{Rejeb 7} Sheikh Báyezíd had maintained his ground beyond the Sirwu, and had prevented Sultan Chín Taimur, Baber's general, from crossing Being now reinforced, how-Bayezids ever, Chin Taimur effected a passage, and found the perced. Afgháns in full retreat He followed them with great alacrity, slew numbers of them, and dispersed their army Sheikh Báyezid threw himself into a jungle and army Sheikh Báyezid threw himself into a jungle and escaped Chín Taimui, after a pursuit of sixty miles, reached a spot which the families of the fugitives had left but a short time before The light force was now divided into several parties, who followed the flying enemy in different directions Their baggage and fa-milies were overtaken and seized, and several Afgháns brought in as prisoners The success was complete But, as the heat was now become oppressive and the rainy season approaching, Báber, after making the ne-

Constructs a bridge at hanhui Jemadi II 6 Feb 27

487

BOOK III cessary arrangements for the government of the country,  $\overline{A \ D \ 1628}$ . returned to Agra *

Acquires Rantambór A H 935 Moharrem 5 to 24 Sept. 20 to Oct. 9

During all these operations, Báber's health had been considerably impaired, but his activity remained undiminished. At the close of the monsoon, he made a progress to Dhulpúr, Guáhár and Sikri His rival, Rána Sánga, had been succeeded by his eldest son Ruttonsi, but his second son, Bikerinájít, assisted by the intrigues of his mother Padmáwati, aspired to the throne, and possessed the strong fort of Rantambór He sent, at this time, to court the assistance of Báber, in pursuing his pretensions; and, after some negotiation, it was settled that he should give up Rantambór to Báber, in exchange for Shemsábád in the Doáb, and that Báber should support his claims, and establish him as Rána in Cheitúr, in his father's room It was in the course of these transactions that Bikermájít sent to the Emperor the crown † and rich girdle of Sultan Mahmúd Khilji of Málwa, which Rána Sánga had retained, when he released that king after his captivity.

Increase of taxes

bór, in pursuance of the treaty ‡ The Emperor's liberality, and the necessary expenses of supporting a large establishment, had now so completely exhausted the magnificent treasures of Sultan Sekander and Ibráhím Lodi, which he had found on his arrival at the capital, that he was at this time obliged to add about thirty per cent to the ordinary taxes, in order to meet the great expenditure of his armies His giving up the tamgha or stamp-tax on Musulman property, however popular that act may have been among those of his own religion, could not fail to make a large diminution in the amount of the ordinary revenue §

Báber dispatched a force to take possession of Rantam-

- * Mem, pp 379-381
- † Táj-kulah
- ‡ Baber s Mem pp 385-387

2 Báber's Mem, p 387 Báber's expressions, in stating this fact, show that, on taking possession of Delhi

Important events, and deeply interesting to Báber, curr in were in the meanwhile passing in Ahorasán We have an 1/28 seen that the Uzbeks, after the death of Shah Ismael, Tranae and during the minority of his son Shith Tahmasp, had this in hora an twice entered that country, had even advanced to Herát, and were in possession of Meshhud and This After An 932 this success. Obeid Khan, who, though second to his grand-uncle Kuchum, the Grand Khon, in reality directed the affurs of the Uzbeks, advinced and took Asterabid, defeating the Persian generals who opposed him Leiving his son, Abdal-aziz Sult in, to defend that province, he marched for Balkh but soon after, large * " "" reinforcements from Azerbaijan having joined the Persinns, Abdal-nziz was forced to fall bick, and, his father joining him, they turned on the Persian generals and totally defeated them near Bostam Oberd, having recovered Asterabid, committed the government of the city and province to Remsh* Bchader Khan, an officer of rank, and humself moved towards Herit, sending out detuchments in different directions, and took up lns winter quarters at Ghurian

Next year, he land suge to Herát, which was brayely obta defended by Husem Khim Shamin, who had succeeded than is-Dermish Khan as governor of Sun Mirza, the young rat prince, and of the province When the siege had lasted seven months, provisions began to full Husein being in the greatest distress, seized, for the use of his garrison, whatever grun was left in the place. He was, however, reduced to the last extremity, when news arrived of the defeat of Renish Behåder

The Persians had collected a large force, which was shah Tah placed under their governors of Sebzáwár and Aster- may de feats - abad, who attacked Renish near Dainghan, and at first Renish, defeated hun, but he, having recovered the day, gained and Agra, he did not distribute among his troops all the treasures of these princes, as is affirmed by

Ferishta and other historians Or Zunsh

A 31 934

a complete victory, in which both the Persian leaders BOOK III fell. While Obeid was elated with this news, messen-А р 1528. gers arrived, bringing intelligence that the young King, ~with an army of forty thousand men, was on his march for Herát, that the advance had besieged Renish m Damghán, had defeated and put to the sword most of his army, and had slain himself, while attempting to escape In their sweeping course, they routed a second Uzbek detachment, which, in consequence, hastily fell back on Obeid Khan, who was still employed in the siege of Herát The approaching danger compelled raises the him to decamp from Púl-Málán, and retreat by hasty siege of Herát, marches to Merv, whither he invited the whole Uzbek chiefs to hasten to his aid They, accordingly, repaired to his standard from Samarkand, Andeján, Táshkend, Hissár, and Balkh, to the number, according to the Uzbeks, of one hundred and five thousand men * So great an army, say the Persians, had never crossed the-Amu since the days of Chengiz Khan advances to Meshbid, attacked by

Meanwhile, Tahmasp had advanced to Meshhid, hoping to cut off Obeid's retreat from Herát When he found that the Uzbeks had made good their way to Merv, after a short stay in Meshhid, to visit the holy places, he proceeded to Jám, on his route to Herát Hearing that the Uzbeks were fast assembling from all quarters, he intrenched himself strongly in the Auleng-Zingán †, where he then happened to be The Uzbeks, when informed of this, concluded that the Kezelbashes were afraid, and despising their enemy, resolved to march for Meshhid Their plan of campaign is singu-larly illustrative of the superstition of their age and the Uzbeks, tribe They proposed, that the main body of their

> * Mír Yahía Saifi, the author of the Leb-al-Towárikh, gives them one hundred and twenty-one thousand The Alım-arái Abási says eighty thousand veterans, exclusive of other troops According to the Persian reports of the time, as brought to Baber, they were three hundred thousand

† Or Zadegán, or perhaps Zaghán

490

army should encamp at Meshhid, while a force of CHAP III twenty thousand cavalry was to be pushed forward to _____ scour the country round the enemy's camp, and not to suffer a man to show his head beyond the trenches They were then to let their magicians work their enchantments, so that the enemy being, by that means, shut up spell-bound, and reduced to extremity, not a man of them was to be allowed to escape out of their hands But they had not lessure to carry into effect this hopeful arrangement As soon as Shah Tahmasp heard that the Uzbeks were fairly in motion, and approaching by Zorábád, he joyfully advanced to meet The two armies came in sight of each other, on them the 25th September, near Jám, a town lying between Meshhid and Herát The Persians did not exceed forty or fifty thousand men*, but they were veterans, disciplined troops, trained to service in the Ottoman wars, and they possessed a fine artillery, a body of two thousand artillerymen to work the guns, and six thousand ruatchlockmen

The battle began on the morning of the 26th Sep- whom he tember The guns of the Persians were in their centre, defeats, protected behind by twenty thousand chosen troops, Moharrem under the personal command of the King The Uzbeks, Sept. 26 following their usual tactics, made use of their flanking columns, which, as they moved on, drove in all the enemy's advanced posts, broke the extremities of their line, and wheeled round into their rear Here they found the baggage and camels of the army, which soon became the prey of the robbers of the desert, and probably delayed their hostile operations To common eyes the day was their own, but the Persian centre > had stood unshaken, and, when the moment seemed favourable, the chains that connected the Kezelbash guns being dropped, the troops stationed behind them

* The author of the Alım-árái four thousand regular troops Abisi gives them only twenty-views and sound sense, and, at the same time, indicates CHAP III. an elegant and refined critical taste Húmáyun, meanwhile, had not neglected the favourable oceasion He collected an army of forty or fifty thousand men, and marched for Samarkand, accompanied by Sultan Weis, whose younger brother advanced and occupied Hissár, (which the Uzbek Sultan, who held it, had abandoned after the battle of Jam, leaving only a garrison behind), while another of IIúmáyun's officers, marching from Turmez, occupied Kabádián, an important town in the same quarter * In the course of these operations, various irregularities had been committed in the territories of Balkh, which belonged to Kitin Kara Sultan, an Uzbek, who at this time was on friendly terms with Báber, and had an envoy at his court As, through this envoy, Kitin Kara sent strong remonstrances on the conduct and proceedings of Báber's Amírs, who had permitted much robbery and pillage to be committed on his frontiers, Báber, in return, dispatched instant orders to his officers to use every exertion to seize and punish all such pillagers and robbers, and to comport themselves towards the neighbouring friendly powers with perfect amity and good faith † About this time he intimated an intention of marching in person to Kabul in the spring, to be near these movements, —an intention which the state of his affairs in Hindustán afterwards prevented his carrying into effect The Uzbeks, who were numerous and brave, soon after recovered all that they had lost j But his wish to revisit the countries beyond the mountains never forsook him, and, in writing, at a later period, to his friend Khwaja Kilán, Jemádi II he informs him, that, as things were becoming more  $\frac{1}{A_{D}}$  1529 - settled in India, he yet expected to be soon able to set Feb 11 out for his northern dominions, his desire to visit which, he says, was unbounded §

	Báber's Mem	pp	390	399	‡	Ibid	р	388
+	The 109				ż	Thul	-	401

† Ibid p 403

§ 1bid p 401

BOOK III.

A. D 1528 Decline of Báber s health

Rebi I 19 Dec. 2 For some time past Báber's health had shown evident symptoms of decline About this period he had frequent attacks of fever, which at each return lasted a month or six weeks In addition to the usual remedies, he attempted, he tells us, to remove it by composing verses in honour of an eminent Musulman saint

The rains' being over, he once more summoned his army to join him Early in December he held a council to deliberate in what direction he should march It was arranged that his son Askeri Mírza should take the command of the army in the eastern provinces; and letters were addressed to Sultan Juneid Birlás, to whom had been committed the chief direction of affairs in that quarter, to inquire if the Emperor's presence was necessary, as, if not, he would turn his arms another way The interval before an answer was received, Báber employed in giving a grand feast to his nobles and to the foreign ambassadors at his court *,~', and he then visited the improvements going on at

* Báber gives a particular account of this feast (Mem p S94-396) It was held in a garden He himself was seated in a temporary pavilion that was covered with khas-grass, for coolness On his right were his cousin (Tokhtah) Bugha Sultan, a son of the younger khau of the Moghuls, his own son Askeri, and the family and dependents of Hazret Khwaja, readers of the Koran, and Mullas, on his left were Muhammed Zeman Mírza, his son-in-law, Autenk Itmish Sultan (apparently a Moghul, chief) with a number of Syeds Thirty or forty yards to the right were the Persian ambassadors There were also ambassadors from various Hindu chiefs Before dinner, all the Amirs and grandees made their offerings of money, rich clothes, or other valuables Fights of furious camels and elephants were succeeded by ram-fights and wrestling matches. During the dinner, numerous dresses of honour and presents of gold and silver, swords, richly embroidered sword-belts, and enamelled daggers were bestowed on the Khwajas, Mullas, and ambassadors, who were present, as well as on the courtiers and distinguished officers, and especially on all such of the Emperor's old servants as had accompanied him from Ferghána The feats of skill of Hindustani jugglers succeeded, with rope-dancing and tumbling, after which, dancinggirls were introduced The whole was concluded, towards evening prayers, by scattering among the bystanders a quantity of gold, silver, and copper money When the party broke up, Baber detained five or six of the most distinguished guests, who sat conversing with him till the end of the first watch of the night.

Dhilpir, where he was building a palace, laying out CHAP II a griden and sinking wells. The return of the messenger issured him that all was quiet in the East, that rebild r

Baber now, therefore, resolved to march to the West, He resolves where, since he was not to attack Bengal, he expected to march to the richest booty and the best means of supporting his army Before he set out, and to put his mind quite at ease respecting affairs to the eastward, he sent a confidential officer to the principal chiefs and Amirs in the provinces beyond the Ganges, to enjoin them to attend Askeri Mírza, wherever he should lead This envoy was to lose no opportunity of reporting on the spot every kind of intelligence that could in any degree influence the Emperor's conduct  $\ddagger$ At this crisis, news reached him that the Balúches Baluch in-

At this crisis, news reached him that the Balúches Baluch inhad made an mroad into his territories and committed great devastation That brave but barbarous race at that time possessed most of the country from Bheker in Sind to Multán and Samana Báber entrusted the task of repressing and punishing these freebooters to his cousin Chín Taimur Sultan, Governor of Mewát; and, for that purpose placed under him some of his ablest generals, with all the forces of Sirhind, Samana and the adjoining provinces, commanding them to take BOOK III stores and provisions for six months' service, that they might do the business effectually *

Sultan Mahmud acknowledged by the Eastern Afgháns The Emperor then hastened to Dhúlpúr; that, before taking the field, he might enjoy some short relaxation, in superintending the extensive improvements he was himself carrying on at that place, where several of his nobles were also laying out grounds, and building country houses But he had been there only four days, when intelligence reached him that Sultan Mahmúd, the brother of the late Sultan Ibráhím Lodi, who, as we have seen, had, after his brother's death, been acknowledged by the Western Afgháns and Rána Sánga as his lawful successor, —having now been invited from Gujrát by the Eastern Afgháns, — had arrived among them, assumed the crown, was at the head of an army, and already master of Behár

Affairs of Behár The affairs of Behár will be better understood from the history of Shír Shah, with the events of whose  $4 \approx$ early life they are intimately connected Suffice it, at present, to remark that, on the death of Sultan Muhammed Shah Loháni, the Afghán king of Behár, of the new dynasty (an event which occurred some time

* Báber's Memoirs, p 399 Ferishta (vol 11 p 62) tells us that Askeri Mirza, who governed Multan, was ordered to court this year (A H 935) when Baber was about to march to the East. He adds, that towards the close of the year Baber received advice that the Baluches in Multán had rused the standard of revolt. Now, Báber mentions, that, before setting out against Chándéri, which was 14th Rebi I A 11 934 (Dec 9, A D 1527), he had recalled Askeri, to confer with him on the affairs of Multan, and that that prince joined him in Moharrem 3, being the third day of the year 935, (Sept. 18 1528), that Askeri took leave of him to proceed to the eastward on 8 Rebi II of the same year (Dec 21), and that news of the mroads of the Balúches reached him on the 28th of that month (Jan 10, 1529) Báber's Mem pp 382 396 398 Askeri must, therefore, have been recalled from Multán, л н 934, and must have gone to that country either in A H 933 or early in 934, a fact of some consequence in settling the chronology of the reduction of Multán by Báber The preparations for Chin Taimur's campaign are more like those for the conquest of a province, than for repelling an invasion To secure the repose of Multán, which they had long governed, it was necessary to break the power of the Balúch tribes -

after Biber's expedition to Chaudén), he was succurrent ceeded by his son Sultan Julal-ed din Lohám, a minor  $\mathcal{D}$ , that the chief minagement of afturs, at least in Behín, then devolved on that prince's mother Dudú, and on Shir khim who had ilready risen into distinction, that the country was distracted by the rival claims of the Loham nobles related to the young King, of Baban, and Bayezid, whose influence was very extensive, of Shir khim, and of other chiefs, and that these factions added to the effects of the discomfiture which the Afghans received, in the preceding campingus, from the armies of Biber, at length induced the young prince to take refinge in the territories of the King of Bengal

In this state of things, the Afghans of Juanpin, and Eastern indeed of Hundustan in general, in order to avert the all in tot il 1 um of them iff mr-, and to unite all interests as Sultan Nahmud for as was pricticable, resolved to call in Sultan Muhmuid Lodi, who had already, with the support of Rina Sanga, mide an effort to mount the throne of Della When defeated in that attempt, he had retired to Cheitur, whence he afterwards proceeded to Paná in Bhandelkind, where he icm uned waiting for some fi vourable change of iflans, and now accepted the invita-tion to ascend the throne of Behár and Juanpur He was speedily joined by his countrymen from every quarter, and seems to have taken possession of nearly the whole of Behin without opposition What excites most surprise is the secresy and success with which intrigues and movements so extensive appear to have been conducted, a fact to be explained, perhaps, by the deep interest which every Afghán felt in the national suc-cess, and the fidelity which trabesmen show to their chiefs and to each other

The very day after receiving this news, Báber 1e- Báber takes turned to Agra, where he intimated to his council his the field.

• He is generally styled Jelal- the Chaghatai interest Khan Behar Khan, by writers in resolution immediately to assume the command of the BOOK III eastern army, and accordingly, taking with him such A D 1529 troops as were at hand, he set out on the second day Jemádi I 3 of February, and, crossing the Doab, reached the right Jan 14 Jemádi I bank of the Ganges, at Dakdakı, on the twenty-seventh Feb 2 Here he was met by his son, Askeri, and several Jemádi II generals, who came from the other side. He arranged Feb 27 with them, that, while his army marched down the right bank of the river, theirs should march down the left, and should always encamp over against his

VOL I

Rapid increase of Mahmúd's power

The information which he here received was but little satisfactory He found that the Afgháns, who were straining every nerve to recover their military and political ascendency, had gathered round Sultan Mahmúd Lodi to the number of a hundred thousand men, that the Sultan had detached Baban and Sheikh Bayezíd with a large force to Sirwár, while he himself, with Fateh Khan Sirwáni - the minister of Sultan Jiláled-dín Lodi, and of Sultan Ibráhím, in succession, by whom Mahmúd had been joined, and who had now deserted Báber as he had done his first master-kept along the Behár bank of the Ganges, and was marching on Chunár, that Shír Khan, whom Báber had distinguished by marks of his favour, having given him several perganas and entrusted him with a command, had joined the insurgents, had erossed the Ganges and occupied Benáres, from which the officers of Sultan Jılál ed-dín Sherkı (a descendant of the older dynasty of the country), who held the city under the Emperoi's authority, had fled on his approach *

Three rival competitors

There were, therefore, at this time, three competitors for the Eastern or Sherka kingdom 1 Sultan Jiláled-dín Sherkit, the representative of the older kings,

* Bábers Mem p 405

+ Called by Ferishta, Jilal-eddın Nuzrat Shah Sherkı, ex-king of Juánpur (vol 11 p 68) He entertained Baber at Karra, and nominally commanded the second division of Baber's army at the passage of the Gogra Baber's Mem pp 404, 405 414 428 He was also sent to oppose Baban, p 419

7

22

17

who juled the country before it was conquered by cure m Sultan Schander Lodi He had lately submitted to A p 1529 Baber and sought his protection His claims had become rather obsolete, but seemed to have been revived at this period and acknowledged by the Emperor. evidently to serve an immediate purpose 2 Sultan Julid ed dur Behu-Khin Loham*, whose father and grundfuther had heided the revolt against Sultan Ibiáhim He wis supported by many Afghán nobles in Behn but had lately been forced to seek refuge with the King of Bengal Instilly And, 3 Sultan Mahmúd I odi the brother of the life Sultan Ibi ihim, and the representative of the Lodi dynisty of Dellu, whom the great body of the Afghans had now united to support in his claims, not on Behar mercly, but on Delhi itself

Biber, informed of the real state of affiirs, continued on Babers his much down the banks of the Ganges In passing Mahmud knir he was magnificently entertained by Sultan Jilál- retreats ed-din Sherki, the prince whose pretensions he fix outed, and on whom he be-towed the nominal command of a division of his army. When he had made a match or two below that city, the effects of his activity became visible He learned that Sultan Mahanud Lodi, Jemidin. who had recently advanced to Chunán, and even made  $\frac{24}{March 6}$ an assault upon it, had no sooner received certain information of the Emperor's approach, than, filled with consternation, he taised the siege and retreated in contusion, and that Shir Khan had, in like manner, abandoned Benáres, and recrossed the river with such

* He was, as we have seen, the son of Behar Ishan Deria Khan Loham of Behar, who assumed the name of Sultan Muhammed Shah Baber's Mem p 335 He seems to have been under the tutclage of lus mother Dudu Pp 411, 412 On his submission, Buber granted him an allowance of fifty laks ayear P 418 Shir Khan was for some time his minister and protector

BOOK III

а в 1529 Sultan Jilal eddin Behárl submits

Rejeb 21 April 1

precipitation that two of his boats were lost in the passage *

The imperial army having reached Allahabad, where the Ganges and Jamna unite their streams, began on the 10th of March to cross the latter river to Pliag, whence Báber proceeded by Chunái, Benáres, and Gházipúr, hastening to attack Sultan Mahmúd, who had now taken a position behind the Són At Gházipúr, Mahmúd Khan Lohán, an Afghán of influence, came and submitted to him, and, while yet near the same place, Sultan Jılál-ed-dín Behár-Khan Behárı,-the expelled prince, and still one of the competitors for the thione of Behár,—Shír Khan Súr, the future sovereign of Delhi, and other Afghans of influence, sent to tender their submission This amounted to a breaking up of the new or Loháni dynasty of Behár, leaving only Sultan Malımúd Lodi and his adherents to be combated Báber now proceeded to cross the Kermnás, and encamped beyond Chousa, that was to become celebrated

Baber occuples Behár

by the calamity of his son, and Baksara (or Buxai) memorable in our own history Marching thence, he found that Sultan Mahmúd, whose army had been daily suffering from defection, and who had been lying not far off attended by only two thousand men, had retued with precipitation on the approach of an advanced party of the imperial army, had been pursued, and several of his men slain He also now took refuge with the army of Bengal, which had crossed the Ganges, probably in the intention of co-operating with him Báber proceeded to the district of Arit, in Behár, lying between the Ganges and the Són at their confluence, where he invested Muhammed Zemán Mírza, his sonm-law, with the government of Behár, and fixed the 3 revenue to be paid out of that province 1

Two Sul tans of

Shabán 2 April 11

The Emperor had now arrived opposite to where

* Bubers Mem p 405

† The Arrah of Rennell

‡ Báber's Mem pp 406-410

the Gogra joins the Ganges from the north-east, and enar m where, upparently, the kingdom of Bengal commenced,  $_{A D} _{1529}$  on the left bink of that river Here he learned that Behár In Sult in Mihmud I odi was in the Bengal camp at the the Bengal camp punction of the two rivers, with a body of Afgháns, and that when he and his followers wished to remove their families and biggage, they were not permitted. the Bengulis probably wishing to retain them as hostiges Sultan Julil ed-din Lohim, his rival, who had litely sent his submission to Biber, was in like manner hundered from departing, in consequence of which he had come to blows with the Bengalis, had effected n passage over the Gauges into Behár with his followers, and was on his march to join the imperial The Imperor, therefore, who considered that 1rms the position of the army of Bengal, and the conduct of its leiders, hind violated their neutrality, prepared to call them to recount

The transactions between Biber and Nasrat Shah, Affairs of Bengal, the King of Bengal®, are hinted at, but not explained, in the Emperor's commentaries When Sultan Schander A # 905 I odi overrin the Sheiki kingdom of Juánpúr, the reigning king took refuge with the King of Bengal Sckunder, having subdued Behai, entered Bengal, and his advance was stayed only by a convention, by which he was allowed to retrun Behái, Tirhút, Sirkíi, Sáran, and all that he had subdued, but was not to invade Bengil, and neither prince was to support the enemies of the other The confusion occasioned by Báber's A # 930-2. approach against Ibrahum Lodi, presented a favourable opportunity to the King of Bengal for recovering the ceded provinces Nasrat Shah accordingly invaded and took possession of Tirhút, subdued Hájipúr, and,

• The complete title of Nasrat, according to Stewart, History of Bengal, p. 118, was "Sultan Nasrat Shah hin Sultan Ala ed-din Husein

ьь 3

Shah" By many historians he is called Nasib, a name by which he appears to have been familiarly known

BOOK III crossing the Ganges, took the fort and district of Mongeir, which he entrusted to Kuth Khan, one of his best generals After the defeat and death of Sultan Ibnáhím, many Afgháns fled to Bengal, and Nasiat even maried a daughter of that prince * He now afforded a refuge to her unele, Sultan Mahmúd, when driven from his dominions

Báber s negotlation with Ben gal

Báber found the army of Kheríd, as the Bengal army was called, lying in what is at present the territory of Sáran, which Nasrat had recovered from the Afgháns It was encamped near the junction of the Ganges and the Gogra †, so as to be able to defend both the course of the Gogra, and the left bank of the Ganges, after the umon of the two rivers Ile discovered, too, that the Bengal generals had collected about an hundred or an hundred and fifty vessels, on then side of the stream, by means of which they were able, at once to hinder the passage of an enemy and to facilitate their own Such an army he could not safely leave behind, especially as the troops of Baban and Bayezid had also taken refuge upon, and in strength occupied, the upper course of the Gogia IIe was, indeed, at peace with Bengal, but the shelter afforded to his flying enemy, the position of the Kherid army, and the equivocal conduct of its leaders, made it indispensable that he should have a categorical declaration as to the disposition and intention of the Bengal government He,

* Stewart's History of Bengal, pp 113-116

⁺ Some confusion arises from the various names given to this river, Gogar or Gogra, Siru or Sirju, and Dewah The principal branch rises in the Himaláya mountains, where it is named Kah At Swarga dwára it meets and unites with the Saryu, Sirju or Sirjew, after which it is indiscriminately named Gogra, Siru, or Dewa There is another Surju or Surju, which, from the map, appears to run parallel to it, and to branch off from it, and, pissing Azimgar and Mow, falls into the Ganges

It would appear that Kherid, a division not now known by that name, included the country on both sides of the Gogra, near Sekanderpur, and thence on its left bank down to the Gauges therefore dispatched an envoy to Nusrat Shili, the King cust in of Bengal and sent along with him an unbassidor of A p 1529 that james who was in his emip, to remind the King that he had always carefully cultivated his friendship and preserved the relations of price and annity that sub-isted between them, but that these relations, as matters now stood, could be preserved only by his neeeding to three conditions already sent him, but to which the 1 mper or had received no inswer, that they should ag an bellud before the Kmg, for his acceptance, that in the meanwhile Baber, until he acceived the King's answer, must follow his flying enemies wherever they went, that he would engage, however, that the subjects of Bengal should suffer no inputy from his troops, either by lund or water but that the army of Marid must leave the track in which he was marching, and return from its present position that he was ready to afford site conducts to the Afghans who had been in erms against him, to send troops to protect them on their much, and to cllow them to return home with assurances of indemnity that at the road was not left open for the advance of his timy, he could not be inswerable for the consequences *

Liber vis now joined by Sult in Juneid Bul is, from Shabin 10 In mpúr, with about twenty thousand men. The tardy army if of these troops subjected then commander to a rangements temporary disgrace. Not having received a satisfactory the Bengal mover to his demands, the I inperior resolved to compel the army beyond the Gogia to quit its strong position He made the accessivy an angements for the intended attack. Ile formed his army into six divisions. Four of these, consisting of Asken's army, which was already on the left bank of the Ganges, and of Sult in Juneids which had recently joined on the same side, were ordeted to be prepared to cross the Gogra, either in boats

April 29 Bilmrsnr to attack army, at Haldı, or by fording still farther up that river The BOOK IIJ other two divisions were still on the right bank of the Ganges One of these, under the Emperor's personal direction, was to effect the passage of that river, and then to cover the operations of Ustad Alı Kulı, his chief engineer, who was directed to plant a battery on the banks of the Siru or Gogra, above its union with the Ganges, directly opposite to the Bengal camp, which it would be able to cannonade, - and afterwards to cover the passage of the Emperor's division when it crossed the Gogra to attack the enemy Mustafa, another engineer, who had a party of musqueteers and artillery, supported by Muhammed Zemán Mírza, and the sixth division, was to open a cannonade on the flank of the enemy's camp, from the Behár bank of the Ganges, below the junction of the rivers The main body of the army, which was that under Askeri, after passing the Gogra at Haldı, was ordered to march down upon the -enemy, so as to draw them from their camp, and induce them to march up that river, and, by this diversion, to keep them occupied until the two divisions of Bábei and Muhammed Zemán, under cover of the fire of the artillery and matchlockmen, could be transported across

The whole army was accordingly put in motion. Askeni's four divisions marched for Haldi The batteries, both on the Gogra and Ganges, were constructed and commenced their fire The Bengal army behaved with great bravery and pushed parties across to attack the Emperor's troops, both above and below the junction of the rivers At length, after various movements, Báber received notice that Askeri had effected a passage over the Gogra at the Hald1-Ghát, and was now ready for action; and that he had been strengthened by the defection of Shah Muhammed Maarúf, an Afghán nobleman of the highest rank and consequence, who had deserted the confederacy with his followers, and now joined his camp The general attack was, therefore, fixed for next morning, but in the mean- CHAP IIL while, there was some fighting between the vessels in  $A_{p}$  1259 the river

A p 1529

On the morning of the 6th of May, as soon as which he Askeri's army was known to be in motion, the Bengal  $\frac{defeats}{habin 27}$  troops moved up to meet him, wheneupon Báber ordered both his division and that of Muhammed Zemán to cross over without delay This was effected bravely, though not without sharp resistance The troops got across, some in boats, some by swimming, some floating on reeds They were met with equal gallantry on lunding, but kept together, formed, and made repeated vigorous charges As Askeri advanced downwards, the encmy, finding themselves surrounded and driven in on three sides, finally quitted the field in confusion *

This victory was decisive in its consequences Num- Many Afbeis of the Afgháns, who till now had been refractory, mit. having lost all hope of re establishing an Afghán government in the East, submitted, and Sultan Jilál-eddin Lohám, the late King of Behár, whose escape from the Bengal camp has been mentioned, airived, with Ramzan 8 many of his principal Amírs, and acknowledged Báber May 17 Other chiefs, imitating their example, petitioned to be neccived into the Emperor's service Seven or eight thousand Loháni Afghans had already joined him, and were now rewarded and employed The feuds between the Loháni and Lodi factions in the Eastern provinces were fatal to the national interest

The success of Báber's arms hastened the accept-Peace with ance of the three propositions which had been sent to Nasrat Shah for his acceptance or refusal, for, the prince of Mongeir, a son of the King, and Hasan Khan Ramzan 10 Leshker, his minister, now took it upon them to write to Bábei agreeing to them on his part "As this ex-pedition had been undertaken," says Bábei, "for the Bengal.

* Baber's Mem pp 412-417

BOOK III. purpose of punishing the rebellious Afgháns, of whom many had gone off and disappeared, many had come in and entered my service, while the few that remained had taken shelter among the Bengális, who undertook to answer for their conduct, and as, besides, the rainy season was now close at hand, I wrote an answer in return, and sent my ratification of the terms of pacification" A few days after, the Emperor set out to chastise Baban and Bayezíd, the only Afghán chiefs of any consequence who were still in arms, and who were probably at this time in the Bharech country ^{*} No sooner was it known that a treaty was finally con-

Baban and Bayczid fiee to Mohóba.

Ramzán 13 May 22

probably at this time in the Bharech country * No sooner was it known that a treaty was finally con-cluded with Bengal, and that the great Afghán leaders had submitted to Báber, than these two chiefs, who seem in general to have had more power and influence than the King whom they served, especially in the pro-vinces to the east of the Ganges, no longer finding shelter in the Bengal territory, and seeing Behár oc-cupied by the Emperor's troops, recrossed the Gogra and Siru, and marched upon Laknáu, in hopes of carry-ing it by a coup-de-main, in the absence of the regular army On their arrival at that city, they made an as-sault and were repulsed, but some hay or straw that had been collected in the fort having been set on fire by combustible missiles, the heat became so intense that by combustible missiles, the heat became so intense that by combustible missiles, the neat became so intense that the garrison could not stand on the works, so that the assailants were enabled to enter and take possession of the place As soon, however, as the Afgháns heard that Báber was on his return back, they abandoned it, and crossed the Ganges into the Doáb, near Dilmáu Being pursued by a detachment sent after them, they next crossed the Jamna also Part of their troops were overtaken and cut off, the remainder were followed as ~ far as the borders of Bandélkand to Mahóba, which also they left hastily on the advance of the pursuing force †

* Babers Mcm pp 418, 419

† Ibid ff 421-429

The Emperor meanwhile, after this successful cam- cuar in pugn, huving set out on his ieturn, had reached a ghát A P 1529 on the Gogra, opposite to Schanderpin , and the troops Baber rewere busily employed in passing the river, when, on the dara night of the 26th of Mix, the runs set in with one of Bamzan 17 those violent tempests which often mark the opening of the monsoon and so suddenly, that the Linperor's pivilion and the screens surrounding it were blown down over him as he was writing, and his life endangered In 1 few days however, he was able to cross the Gogra, and, having sent out the mann body of his army to Ghizipur himself marched up to Oud, whence, by way Shawal 17 June 24 of Kornh, he once more returned to Agra

This is the last comparing of which we have the history from the pen of Biber hunself and of the military events of the next fifteen months, we know hardly my thing. The only occurrence transmitted to us is the distification and intended revolt of Rahim did, the governor of (milling, who was however, prevailed upon by the influence and remonstrances of Sheikh Multimined tilus, the celebrated Musulman sunt, who wis still in thit neighbourhood -to restore that strong Moharrem and import unt fortress into the hunds of Baber *

* Bibers Mem p 121

May 26

Sept. 7

CHAPTER IV

BÁBER'S ILLNESS AND DEATH.

BABEP'S HEAITH DECLINES — HUMÁYUN LEAVES BADAKHSHÁN — ALARM OF THE INHABITANTS — SULTAN SAÍD CALLED IN — BESIEGLS KIL \-ZEFER — MARLS PEACE AND RETIRES — SULEIMÁN MÍRZA SENT TO BADAKHSHÁN — HUMÁYUN AT COURT — HIS ILLNESS — BÁBER'S SELF-DEVOTION — BÁBER'S DANGFROUS II LNESS — INTRIGUES IN FAYOUR OF MEHDI KHWÁJA — HIS ARROGANCE AND FALL — BÁBER'S DVING ADVICE TO HIS SONS AND AMÍRS — HIS DEATH — TOMB — CHARACTER.—COMMENTARIES — PERSON — CHILDREN — DOMINIONS — THEIR POLITICAL SITUATION — TAXES — LANDED PROPERTY — REVENUE — CUSTOMS — JEZÍA — POST-HOUSES — MEN OF LETTERS

BOOK III A D. 1529 Decline of Baber 5 health

Fnd of A 11 935 Humayan Jeaves Badakhshán

THE decline in the Emperor's health, which for some time past had become evident to all about him, excited in his eldest son, Humáyun Mírza, who had now resided for the greater part of nine years * in the distant govennment of Badakhshán, a natural anxiety to be near lus father, for the purpose of counteracting the intrigues so common in the harams and the courts of all Eastern plinces, under such circumstances He accordingly set out, without leave, as it would appear, to proceed to Agra Mírza Harder, indeed, affirms that Báber, at the same time that he placed Kámián Mírza in Kandahár, recalled Humáyun into India, that, if any thing adverse happened, he might be at hand, to assume the reins of government But, in this instance, the opposite assertion of other historians is more probable, as we cannot suppose that a prince of Báber's talents and experience would have recalled his son from so important a station as Badakhshán then was,

* I rom A 11 926 to 935, ex- on the conquest of India Tar cepturg when he attended his father Resh f 293

CHAPTER IV

BABER'S ILLNESS AND DEATH.

RANFI'S HEATTH DECLINES — HUN (YUN I EAVES BADAKHSHÁN — ALALM OF THE INHABITANTS — SULTAN SAÍD CALLED IN — BESHGI S KHA-ZI II R — MAKES I LACE AND PETIRES — SULLIMÁN MÍRZA SLAF TO PADAKHSHÁN — HUN (YUN AT COURT — HIS ILLNESS — BÁBER'S SEIF-DEVOTION — BÉRER'S DANCEROUS HINESS — INTPIGUES IN I ANOLP OF MEHDI KHW (JA — HIS ARROGANCE AND FALL — BÁBI R'S DAING ADVICE TO HIS SONS AND AMÍRS — HIS DLATH — TOMB — CHARACTER.—COMMENTARIES — I ERSON — CHILDREN — DOMINIONS — THE IR I OF HEAT SITUATION — TAXES — JANDED PROPLREY — FEVENCE — CUSTOMS — JEZÍA — POST-HOUSES — MEN OF LETTI RS

A B 1:29 Decline of L d 75 Feith

BOOK III

Infef 2 11 975 Humisons Insteel ideast bin 'I'll decline in the Emperor's health, which for sometime past had become evident to all about him, excited in his cldest son, Humáyun Múza, who had now re sided for the greater part of mine years * in the distant government of Badakhshán, a natural anxiety to be near his father, for the purpose of counteracting the intrigues so common in the harams and the courts of all I istern pinices, under such encumstances He accordingly set out, without leave, as it would appear, to proceed to Agra Mirza Haider, indeed, affirms that Baber, at the same time that he placed Kámián Mírza in Kaudahár, recalled Humáyun into India, that, if any thing adverse happened, he might be at hand, to assume the rems of government But, in this instance, the opposite assertion of other historians is more probible, as we cannot suppose that a prince of Báber's talents and experience would have recalled his son from so important a station as Badaklishán then was,

* From A if 926 to 935, ex- on the conquest of India. The copies when he attended his father. Reals f. 293

The Khan lent a willing ear to these representations, BOOK IIL so much in accordance with his wishes, and, in Mohar-A.D 1529rem A H 936*, set out to conquer a new kingdom On arriving at Sárigh-Juián, he despatched Mírza He sends on Mírza Haider in advance, into the lower country of Badakh-shán Humáyun, on his arrival at Kábul, had unex-pectedly met in the Idgáh there, his brother Kámrán Mírza, who had that very day arrived from Kandahár, and had sufficient address to prevail upon their youngest Haider brother, Hındál Mırza, to repair to Badakhshán to Hindál arsupply his place, though that prince had received the rives at Kila-Zefer, Emperor's orders to return to Agra Mírza Haider accordingly found, on his arrival at Kila-Zefer, that Hindál had entered it sixteen days before Winter was at hand, when, in that rude climate, it was necessary to be under cover, and Haider made overtures to Hindál, asking him to cede some district of Badakhshán for winter-quarters to the Káshghar army, undertakingthat, when the winter was over, the Khan should re-turn home The proposal was not listened to for a moment, being regarded as a mere artifice, upon which the invaders laid waste all the environs of Kila-Zefer, which is becarrying off man and beast, and whatever fell in their way. In a few days the Khan humself appeared, and besieged the castle for three months, in the course of sieged by the Khan. which time his followers cleared the whole neighbouring country of what little had previously been left who makes peace and retires

When the winter was well over, most of the Amírs who had called in the Khan, but who had changed their views with the change of circumstances, excused themselves for not joining him, as they assured him they would have done, had not a son of Babei's arrived and assumed the government Sultan Said, who saw 7 that the temper of the country was adverse to him, declared that it never had been his wish to come into collision with the 1 mpcror Baber, he reminded them cuvring that they had invited him, from apprehension that they  $\frac{1}{A(B-1)}$  might tall into the hands of the Uzbeks,—an event which would have been equally imprivities to all parties. After some mutual explanations the siege was raised, and the lyber r turned to ly ishgh in the news of this my ison was particularly impleasing replector of Raber, to l'éter modents encumisances - Besides lins disrecisive with 11nm concision having left his government without love and his disappointment at the infriendly my ision of Sultan Sud, he vas anxious not to lose a country which might be of so much consequence, in the event of any finture operations on the Oxus - It is said this in this emergency he was induced to ask. Mir Ah Midita his chief minister, to visit, Badaklishan, and to settle the aflans of the province. That minister, who probably sim in the requisition only the result of some intriac to remove him it an important moment from the presence contrived to exense hunself. Humayin was next asked to resume his government, but declined, nuless commanded percuptority and on his duty - Baher, thus dis uppointed and perplexed, resolved to confer who apthe province on Sulem in Mirzi, the son of his consin, "olitic that Ishan Mirza, who had governed it for so many emission vens, and who, on the mother's side, was descended that from the ancient knigs of the country, who gloried in being spring from Mexinder the Great Sulemán Mirzi wis the son-in-law of Sultin Weis, who had miniged Bidikhshan under Humayun, and his apponitment, it was thought, might be the means of restoring that powerful chief to his allegiance. The Luperor sent Sulem in off without del iy IIe carried with him an order recilling Hindál, and also a letter to Sultan Sud Khan, in which Báber told that prince, that whatever might be his hereditary claims, he felt surprise at what hid occurred, that he had, however, recalled Hundal and sent Sulemán, whom, if the Khan

30

ŀ

wished to favour the claims of hereditary right, he would cordially support, since both of them looked upon him as their son; he trusted, therefore, that the Khan would yield to the Mírza the possession of A D 1530 Badakhshán, if not, that the Emperor, having resigned to him his own claims, would know how to support him against the pretensions of others

He assumes the govern ment.

When Suleimán Mírza reached Kábul, he found that the Khan had retreated from Badakhshán some time before Hindál, on the Mírza's arrival in that kingdom, resigned to him the government, as he had been or-dered, and set out for Hindustán The new governor, or rather King of Badakhshán, assumed the direction of affairs, and, his hands being strengthened by the confusion in Hindustán, which followed Báber's death, fixed himself permanently as Suleimán Sháh, in the country, which he transmitted to his descendants with nearly independent authority *

Πumáyun at court

Humáyun, on leaving Kábul, had posted on to Agra He arrived at the palace, as we are told by the courtly Abulfazl, at the very moment when his mother and the Emperor were sitting together conversing about him, and was most affectionately welcomed It must be acknowledged that the whole course of his proceed-ings has much the air of a plan concerted between Humáyun and his mother, who saw the decline of her husband's health, and wished her son to be upon the spot, as there was a strong party, headed by Mír Ah Khalífa, the prime minister, who wished to set him aside from the succession Humáyun, who had a cul tivated mind, a sprightly wit, and polite and refined manners, rendered himself very agreeable in society to his father, who acknowledged that there could not be a  $\neg$ more acceptable companion Báber had just lost a young son, Alwer†, and the depression of spirits under

• Taríkhe Reshudu, f 293-295, rishta, vol 11 p 63, 64 Akbernáma, f 33, Briggs 5 Fe † Or, Anwar

воок ш

which he laboured, gave him the more lively relish for CHAP IV the company of Humáyum When the prince had been A P 1530 some months at court, he was sent to his jágír or sent to government of Sambal, beyond the Ganges, but at no Sambal, great distance from Delhi There he enjoyed himself л н 936 for about six months, when he fell dangerously ill His Falls dangerously ill father, who was deeply affected by the news, directed that he should be removed to Delhi, and from thence by water to Agra On his arrival there, the violence of the disease was such that his life was despaired of No symptom of amendment appeared to result from the medical treatment, and the worst was apprehended At this time, as the Emperor was one day sitting in the palace, which he had built beyond the Janna, conversing with his Amirs, and some learned and pious men, on the subject that was nearest his thoughts, Mir Abul Baká, one of the personages then most eelebrated for sanctity, happened to remark, that it was an observation handed down from olden times, that, in cases like the present, where all human assistance had failed, an offering made to the Almighty of the most valuable thing belonging to the person who laboured under the affliction, had been accepted, and the sufferer restored to health Báber, excited by the hopeless situation of Babersselfdevotion his son, and perhaps by his own increasing malady, exclaimed, that of all things, his life was what was dearest to Humáyun, as Humáyun's was to him, that his life, therefore, he cheerfully devoted as a sacrifice for his son's, and prayed the Most High to vouchsafe to accept it Khwaja Khalífa and his other friends attempted to divert his thoughts from the gloomy channel in which they flowed, and to comfort him by the hope that through the mercy of God, Humáyun had yet many happy years before him, they suggested that the offering made in such cases was not of life, but of some worldly goods, and that the diamond acquired some years before, being of immense value, might be sold ъъ VOL I

BOOK III. and the price devoted to charitable and pious uses But Báber repelled the idea; affirming, that no earthly possession could be a suitable exchange for a life so precious as his son's, that he could not endure to witness his sufferings, and was resolved to devote himself in his stead. He then, we are told, retried into the piivate apartments, and having piayed earnestly, walked thrice round the dying prince, a solemnity corresponding to that used in waive offerings, and when, after a time, he fancied that he felt the influence of his vow visibly affecting both hun and the prince, he was heard to call out, — "I have pievailed 'I have saved hun" Humáyun recovered, and was able to return to his government of Sambal, while the Emperor daily grew worse

Intrigues in favour of Mehdi Isl wáya,

But though Humáyun was restored to health, his succession to his father was still by no means secure The prine minister, Khwája Khalífa, had, for some un-known cause, conceived a dislike or apprehension of him, and, it is asserted, had resolved to exclude all the sons of Báber from the succession, and, in their room, to set up Mehdi Khwája, a young nobleman of high rank, piobably a relation of his own, who had married a daughter of Bábei's Mehdi was brave, highspirited, and generous, but wild and extravagant Khalífa, his supporter, possessed the highest influence with all the older Túrki nobles, who had the chief authority at court, and in the army, and there was much reason to believe that the cause which he espoused must be successful The ambitious youth entered eagerly into the intrigues that were to exalt him so high, and, while the Emperor lay at the last extremity, Khalifa, having given some intimation of his intentions, many of the puncipal men of the army, influenced by hım, and cager to salute the rising sun, waited on Mehdi Khwája, as their future sovereign, to pay him their court by anticipation, and to secure his favour

These brilliant prospects, and these attentions, seem to case is have turned his heid. He toolishly begin already to A p 1030 assume the deportment of a monarch, and though he continued to frequent the Derbir, the growing irro gince and overweiging presumption that he discovered disgusted even his most attached partizins so that Whalify we are told was influenced by their remon struces to liter his views, to return to his allegamento his old mu ters family, and to transfer his interest to Humayin, hefore his purposes had been numfested by any overt set. The consequence was that Mehdi Khwaji vais ordered into custody "

Such is nearly the account given by Abulfizh, but interno an incedete related by a contemporary instorian throws issue further light on this change of fortune 7 "It so hap pened says he " that Ma khalita had gone to see Mehdi Khy, ga, whom he found in his paython Nobody was present but Achilita Medi Khwan, and my fither, Muhanmed Mokan - Whahf's had hardly sit down an instant when Baber who was it the point of death, sent for him When he left the payihon, Mehch khy graccompanied him to the door to do him honour, and to take here of han, and stood in the middle of the doorway so that my father, who followed, but out of respect did not push by him, was immediately behind The young man, who was rather flighty and hurbrund forgetting that my father was present, as soon as khahta was furly gone, stroking his beard, mattered to hunself, ' Please God, I will soon flay off your hide, old boy, ' and turning round at the same instant, saw my fither. He was quite confounded, but mmedi-

* Albernann, f. St. Ahola etnl Towarikh fl 251 255

† Niz miled dur Ahmed Bikhshi, the author of the Labal att Akberr, or I aril he Niz ini, was the son of Muhammed Mokim Hirvi, who was at this time Diwan Bint it to B der

See Tabaliui Akhen, f 131 v Nizam ed din himself rose to the highest offices of the state under Aklar, he held the chief command in Gujrat, and was for some time munister of finance

515

ately seizing my father's ear, twisted it round, and said BOOK III hurriedly, 'You Tájík, the red tongue often gives the green head to the winds ' My father, having taken his leave and left the tent, called upon Khalífa, and remonар 1530 strated with him on his line of conduct, telling him that, in violation of his allegiance, he was taking away the sovereignty from Muhammed Humáyun and his brothers, who were accomplished princes, to bestow it on the son of a stranger And yet, how did this favoured man behave? He then repeated what had passed, just as it happened Khalifa, on the spot, sent off an express to call Humáyun, and, at the same time, dispatched a body of yesáwels or special messengers to Mehdı Khwája, to inform him that the Emperor's orders were, that he should instantly retire to his own He is placed in The young man by this time had sat down to house custody dinner, which was still before him The yesáwels communicated their orders, and forced him away to his house, reluctant as he was to go Mír Khalífa then issued a proclamation, prohibiting all persons from resorting to Mehdi Khwaja's house or waiting upon him, while Mehdi Khwája himself received orders foibidding hun to appear at court "*

B ther s dying advice In the inidst of these intrigues, with which he was probably unacquainted, Báber, finding his strength fast declining, directed a council of his ministers and friends to be called, to receive his dying injunctions Among those who were present were his minister Nizám-ed-dín Khwája Ali Khalífa, Kamber Alí Beg, Terdi Beg and Hindu Beg, who had attended him in all the many changes of his fortune Taking in his own the hand of Humáyun, who had now returned, he formally declared him to be his lieutenant and successor in all his dominions, and commanded him to take his seat on the imperial throne, at the foot of which the Emperor lim-

• Tabakáti Akberi, f 144 See also Tar Bedauni, f 139

self has stretched on his couch. He then proceeded, cusp w with all the authority of a dying monarch, and of a man A p 1570 who had seen so much, and taken so large a share in the great events of his time to recommend to them all a conscientions discharge of their duties to God and to done all, how stly and assidnon-ly to administer m m justice to those over whom they were placed, but, while they punished the guilty to extend their fenderness and mercy to the ignorant and the penitent, and their protection to the poor and the defenceless, and, addressing hunselt particularly to Humayun, he besought hum as his most cirnest and dving request. above all things to deal kindly and affection ifely with his brothers and whatever their offences might be, never to permit his resentment to lead him to the last extremity is unstant of them ?

He soon after breathed his last in his palace at the international the international of the source o while yet only forty-cight T, having reigned, in all, up- Dec 26 wirds of thirty six years, - and, of that time twenty-six over Ivibil and about five over part of India Ilis body, at his own desne, was curred to Kabul, and new buried in a be uniful spot marked out by humself, on a buried at kabul "I lost hill near the city, which still bears his nameno time," sixs a distinguished traveller, to whom the geography of all the kingdoms of Baber owes so much, ind whose talents and misfortunes have rendered him connect, "I lost no true in making excussions nen Cabool, and chose the callest opportunity to visit the tomb of the Luperor Baber, which is about a mile from the city, and situated in the sweetest spot of the neighbourhood " "I have a profound respect for the memory of Baber, which had been mereased by a late perusal of his most interesting Commentaties. He had directed

Ills tomb

^{*} Albernuma, f 31 MS A . putation he lived fifty, and reigned Larikhe Bedauni, f. 139 thirty-eight years

[?] Reckoning by the Arab com

BOOK III his body to be interred in this place, to him the choicest in his wide dominious These are his own words regarding Cabool — 'The climate is extremely delightful, and there is no such place in the known world 'Drink wine in the citadel of Cabool, and send round the cup without stopping, for it is at once mountain and stream, town and desert ' "The grave is marked by two erect slabs of white marble, and, as is common in the East, the different letters of a part of the inscription indicate the number of the year of the Hegina in which the Emperor died The device in the present instance seems to me happy 'When in heaven Roozvan asked the date of his death I told him that heaven is the eternal abode of Baber Badshah' Near the Emperor many of his wives and children have been interred, and the garden, which is small, has been once surrounded with a wall of marble A running and clear stream yet waters the fragrant – flowers of this cemetery, which is the great holiday re-sort of the people of Cabool In front of the grave there is a small but chaste mosque of marble, and an inscription upon it sets forth that it was built in the year 1640, by order of the Emperor Shah Jehán, after defeating Mahommed Nuzzur Khan in Balkh and Badakhshán, that poor Mahommedans might here offer up then prayers It is pleasing to see the tomb of so great a man as Báber honoured by his posterity "There is a noble prospect from the hill which over-looks Bábei's tomb, and a summer-house has been

"There is a noble prospect from the hill which overlooks Bábei's tomb, and a summer-house has been erected upon it by Shah Zemán from which it may be admired. If my reader can imagine a plain, about twenty miles in circumference, laid out with gardens and fields in pleasing irregularity, intersected by three invulets which wind through it in a serpentine course, and wash innumerable little forts and villages, he will have before him one of the meadows of Cabool. To the north he the hills of Pughman, covered half way down with snow, and separated from the eye by a sheet of CHAP IV the nichest verdure On the other side the mountains, which are bleak and locky, mark the hunting preserves of the kings, and the galdens of this city, so celebrated for fruit, he beneath, the water being conducted to them with great ingenuity I do not wonder at the hearts of the people being captivated with the landscape, and of Bábei's admiration, for, in his own words, 'its verdure and flowers render Cabool, in spring, a heaven'"*

Báber was certainly one of the most illustrious sove- Hischaric reigns that ever filled an eastern throne His character ter was happily compounded of most of the qualities that go to form a great prince and a good man He was bold, enterprising, full of ardour, and possessed of the commanding tilents that sway and lead the minds of His temper was fiank, confiding, and gay, and men maintained through life the freshness of youth He liad strong affections, the warmest domestic feelings, was devotedly attached to his relations and friends, and ready to sympathise with the pleasures and the sufferings of human beings of every class Keenly alive to whatever was grand or beautiful, he cultivated knowledge of every kind with unwearied assiduity and with proportional success Glory in every shape inflamed his imagination, and he attained to a lare eminence of power and renown Yet no man's success could be more entirely his own When, as a boy, he mounted the throne of Feighána, the neighbouring kingdoms were all held by sultans and sovereigns of his own While he was still only a youth, not one of race them was left, they had all either fallen by domestic treason, or been swept away by foleign invasion, the torient of which overwhelmed him also, and bore him into distant lands, but, by his native energy, he emei ged

* Burness Travels into Bokhara, vol 11 pp 121-123 Lond 1835 2d ed

гг4

from the sweeping inundation, and raised himself above BOOK III it, the only remnant of the House of Taimur. Before the age of twenty he had experienced every diversity of fortune, having been by turns a petty prince, the conqueror of a renowned kingdom, and a houseless and hunted fugitive, but under no circumstances did lus sanguine temper, and his determined resolution, forsake him, and, when in the lowest pitch of misery, expelled from his hereditary dominions, and wandering with a few ragged followers, the fame of his valour brought to his standard many thousand bold adventurers, aided by whom he conquered new and extensive kingdoms In that age of confusion, to be able to reign it was necessary to be a soldier, and he became the first of his time

> His fondness for war did not lead him to neglect the aits of peace The few intervals of repose from military operations which he enjoyed in his troubled life, he devoted, with his habitual ardour, to examining into and improving the state of his kingdom, and to bettering the condition of his subjects His natural genius made him fond of all the fine arts, and among others of architecture^{*} and gardening He built palaces and

* The author of the Tárikhe-Sind, in enumerating the curiosities of Kábul and Kandahár, in which latter country he was stationed for three years, after mentioning some caves near Baba Hasan Abdal, describes (f 120, 121) the mansion (imarat) of Pustak, excavated by Baber's orders in the hill of Biserlurch, out of the solid rock It has a very lofty dome (or arch) Seventy stone-cutters were constantly employed on it for three years It is described as a curious and beautiful work, commanding an extensive, rich and magnificent view over the water Azanderi (Ab-Azaanderi, guære, Ab-Arehandabi, the river Arghandab?), and numerous gardens and cultivated fields It 15, we are told, much frequented in the spring, though many, from the height of its situation, and the great difficulty of access, are prevented from reaching it. Our author informs us that there were tablets in it, containing the names of Baber, Kámrán, Askeri, and Hindal, but not of Humayun, who had never been there, but, he adds, that he employed stone-cutters from Bheker to add the names of Humáyun and Akber, and a list of the numerous provinces of the wide empire of the latter I know not if any British officer, during the late wars, has visited these exeavations land out gardens in several parts of his dominions, he CHAP IV delighted in flowers and in beautiful prospects He was a horticulturist, and succeeded in naturalising some valuable fruits and plants in provinces to which they had formerly been strangers, and where they still flourish, and was as proud of his success, as of a victory in the field of battle All this he did in the midst of turmoil and war In the course of his most important expeditions, we find him inquiring after the progress of his improvements, and expressing an earnest longing to be restored to the scenes and friends that he loved It is not surprising that, with so inherent a love of knowledge, he should have been a patron of learning and of learned men, or that, by his liberality, he should have drawn many of them around him, but the fact that, in a life so full of agitation and bustle as his, having from boyhood to age been in constant motion, he should himself have found time to cultivate the learning and knowledge of the age, is a proof how strong was the natural bias of his mind to useful and liberal studies "He was," says "Haider Mírza, who knew him well, "a prince adoined with various excellences, and distinguished for his adminable qualities Of all these qualities his generosity and humanity took the lead In Túiki poetry, after Mír Ali Shír, none equalled him He has composed a Túrki Diwán (or collection of Odes) of extreme elegance and vigour He wrote an useful treatise on Law and Religion, which has met with general approbation He also composed a tract on Túrki Prosody, superior in merit to any written before on the subject The Resáleh e Walidieh of Hazret Ishan, he versified * His Commentaries, which he composed in Túrki, are remaikable for their easy and unaffected manner, and great purity of style He was also skilled in music, and other arts None of ^{*} This is probably the Matiin, said to be a work of inystical divinity

BOOK III. his family before him exceeded him in talents and accomplishments, and, in wonderful exploits and adventures, none of his descendants is soon likely to equal him "*

> He was not only fond of music, but was himself a composer, and several of his airs are said to have been in a pleasing style, and to have survived him

> Besides his Túrki, he composed some Persian poetry, but, in the revolutions to which India has been subject since his time, little more than the names of his poetical productions have been preserved, though by the invariable consent of his countrymen, he still retains his place as the second Túrki poet

As an appendage to literature, he had acquired great skill in penmanship,—an art held in high estimation in the East, where literary works are diffused only by the pen, and where it is generally considered as one of the fine arts, — a distinction which may seem to be justified by the uncommon style of elegance in which its productions are sometimes executed Báber, we are told, wrote in great perfection the different hands then in use, and invented one which was distinguished by his name

His Commentaries. But of all his literary works, his Commentaries are by much the most remarkable The first part contains a continuous narrative of his early life and troubles, the latter portions consist of fragments of a journal, written from time to time, and often from day to day, some comprising accounts of his most celebrated exploits, others being merely short entries or jottings, as if to assist his future recollection, and frequently referring to the incidents of his private life "His Memoirs," says the historian of India, "are almost singular in  $\searrow$ their own nature, and perfectly so if we consider the circumstances of the writer They contain a minute account of the life of a great Tartar monarch, along curr w with a natural effusion of his opinions and feelings, free from disguise and reserve, and no less free from all affeet ition of extreme frankness and candour The style is plum and manly, as well as lively and picturesque, and, being the work of a man of genius and observation, it presents his countrymen and contemporaries in their appearance, manners, pursuits, and actions, as elearly is in a minior. In this respect, it is almost the only specimen of real history in Asia, for the ordinary writers, though they give pompons accounts of the deeds and ceremonies of the great, are apt to omit the hycs and manners even of that class, while everything bencith then level is left entirely out of sight Biber, the figmes, diess, tastes, and habits, of each mdividual introduced are described with such minuteness and reality, that we seem to live among them, and to know their persons as well as we do their characters His description of the countries he visited, their seenery, climate, productions, and works of art and industry are more full and accurate than will, perhaps, be found, m equal space, in any modern traveller, and, considering the encumstances in which they were compiled, are tiuly surprising

"But the great chain of the work is in the character of the author, whom we find, after all the trials of a long life, retaining the same kind and affectionate heart, and the same easy and soeiable temper, with which he set out on his career, and in whom the possession of power and grandem had neither blunted the deheaey of his taste, nor diminished his sensibility to the enjoyments of nature and imagination 'It is a rehef,' says his translator, 'in the midst of the pompous coldness of Asiatic history, to find a king who can weep for days, and tell us that he wept, for the playmate of his boyhood' He speaks with as much interest of his mother and female relations, as if he had never quitted BOOK III. their fireside, and his friends make almost as great a figure in the personal part of his nairative as he does himself. He repeats their sayings, records their accidents and illnesses, relates their adventures, and sometimes jokes on their eccentricities *

"It would have been fortunate if Bábei had left off wine sooner, for there seems good reason to think his indulgence in it tended to shorten his days Many a drinking party is recorded in his Memoirs, with at least as much interest as his battles or negotiations, and, unsuitable as they are to his station, they are not the least agreeable scenes in Báber's history The perfect case and familiarity among the company makes one forget the prince in the man, and the temptations that generally lead to those excesses, - a shady wood, a hill with a fine prospect, or the idleness of a boat floating down a river, - together with the amusements with which they are accompanied, extemporary verses, recitations in Turki and Persian, with sometimes a song, and often a contest of repartee, take away all the coarseness that might attach to such scenes of dissipation " †

No part of his character is more admirable than his uniform humanity and kindhness of disposition If, in the course of his Memoirs, some cruel executions appear, they belong to the age, not to the man The historians of his reign remark, that, whenever any either of his nobles or brothers had revolted, or entered into

* Elphinstone's History of India, vol 11 pp 117-119

† Ibid p 120 His commentaries were translated into Persian, in the reign and by command of his grandson Akber, by Mirza Abdal Rahim, the son of the celebrated Biram Khan, in the thirty-fourth year of Akber s reign, as the court returned from an expedition to Káshmir and Kabul There seems to have been a previous version by Sheikh Zein Khuni, who, Abdal Kádir tells us, translated them in an eloquent style Perhaps the fragment of the paraphrastic translation already quoted may be a portion of that production Tar Bedáuni, f 138 They have also been translated into English under the title of "Memoirs of Zehír-ed din Muhammed Báber, translated partly by John Leyden, M D, partly by Wm Erskine, Esq Lond 1826 4to" cabals against hun, no sooner did they acknowledge CHAP IV their offence and return to their duty than, to use the words of Kháfi Khan, " contrary to the custom of the princes of Persia, Arabia, or India, he not only forgave them, but never retained towards them any feeling of resentment"

In stature, he is represented as having been above His person the middle size, he was of great vigour of body, fond of field sports and athletic exercises, a skilful archer, and an excellent swordsman On numerous occasions he distinguished himself by his prowess, in several instances by engaging and slaving his adversary hand to hand, in single combat Such, indeed, was his bodily strength, that he is said at times to have run along the battlements of a fort, having a man under each arm, and, though thus encumbered, to have kept on, leaping over the embrasures that he met in his way *

He left four sons 1 Muhammed Humáyun Mírza, nis family who succeeded him, born 4 Zikada, A H 913 (April 5, AD 1508) 2 Kámrán Mírza 3 Hindál Mírza, born Sefer, A H S25 (February, A D 1525), and, 4, Askeri Mírza He had another son, Anwar, who died young, not long before his father

He had several daughters, some of whom married the leading nobles of his court, their ages are not well ascertained Among them were,

1 A daughter by his cousin Aisha Sultán Begum, who lived only a few days

2 Maasúma Sultán Begum, by his cousin Maasúma Sultán Begum, who died in childbed of her This daughter married Muhammed Zemán Mírza, the son of Badi-ez-zemán Mírza, and grandson of the great Sultan Husein Mírza Backra of Herát

3 Gúlbadan Begum, a sister of Humáyun, who mar-

* Akbernama, Tabak Akberi, f 143

BOOK III. ried Khwája Khizei, a Sultan or Khan of the race of the Moghul Sultans

4. Gúliang Begum, another of Humáyun's sisters, who married Núr-ed dín Muhammed Mírza Their daughter, Selima Sultán Begum, married first the celebrated Biram Khan, and, after his death, her cousin the Emperor Akbei

5 Gülchahreh Begum, Humáyun's youngest full sıster, who, in her biother's reign, married Abás Sultán, one of the Sultans of the Uzbeks

6 Shehei-bánu Begum, who married her cousin Yádgár Násir Míiza, the son of Báber's youngest brothei Násir Mírza She seems to have had a son, Mírza Sanjer

There were probably some others, and among them one whose name is unknown, that married the Syed Mehdi Khwája, who aspired to the kingdom on the Emperor's death *

Domiaions.

The dominions of Báber at the time of his death were -very extensive, stretching from the liver Amu to Behár Beyond the Hindú-kúsh range he possessed Badakhshán, with Kundúz, and all the districts to the south of the

* We have not a very distinct account of the wives or haram of Baber The following are, however, mentioned as of the number

1 Aisha Sultán Begum, daughter of his uncle Sultan Ahmed Mirza of Samarkand She was betrothed to him when he was but five (A  $\pi$ S93) He had by her a daughter who hved only a few days Mem p 22

2 Zeinab Sultan Begum, fifth daughter of Sultan Mahmud Mirza of Hissar, his uncle He married her when he took Kabul Two or three years after, she died of the small-pox Mem p SO

3 Maasuma Sultán Begum, the youngest sister of his first wife, Aisha Baber saw her in Khorásan, after her sister's death, asked her in marriage, and married her at Kabul She had a daughter Maasuma, mentioned above, of whom she died in child-bed. Mem pp 22 208

4 Maham Begum, a relation of Sultan Husein Mirza of Herát Albernama f 35 She was the mother of Humayun Mirza, and of Gulrang, Gulbadan, and Gulchebreh Begums

5 Dildár Aghácha Begum, the mother of Hindál Mirza Akbernáma

6 Ráika Begum appears as one of Babers widows She lived at Kabul Jouher, p 82

7 A daughter of Malek-shah Mansur, a chief of the Yusef-zais Mem p 250 Oxus, as low down as the borders of Balkh To the CHAP W south of the mountains he had the kingdoms of Kábul, Gházm, and Kandahár, and much of the mountainous country of the Hundú-kúsh and Ghúri or Parapamisan ranges, inhabited by Afgháns, Aimáks, and other tribes, some of them inigratory, as well as the hilly and desert tracts to the south as far as the borders of Balúchistán, in all of which the tribes, though self-governed, acknowledged his authority To the east of Ghazm and Kábul, below the passes, the low lands of Jılálábád, Pesháwer, the Kohdáman, as well as Swád and Bajour, and in general the more extensive and cultivated plains or accessible country, had submitted, but, over a great portion of what we now denominate Afghánistán, especially the more inaccessible hills and secluded valleys, his sway was hardly admitted by the jude tribes that traversed them, and prudence was satisfied with some casy acknowledgment which was treated as tribute Occasional inroads were made into the territories of such as were refractory, or offered a tempting booty in cattle or other property, they, on their part, infested the roads, plundered the merchants or caravans, drove off the flocks, or carried away the harvests of then neighbours in the lower grounds In Upper and Lower Sind the khutba was read in his name, but, though his supremacy was acknowledged, he had little direct power To the east of the Indus all the Penjáb, including Multán, - and to the south and east of the Satlej the rich provinces of Hindustán lying between that river and Behár on the one side, and the Himaláya mountains and the countries of the Rájputs and of Málwa on the other, --- were subject to hum, the western boundary being nearly a line marked by the fortresses of Biána, Rantambór, Guahár, and Chándéri On the south towards Bengal, the limits of his authority are not well defined Though he possessed the greater part of Behar, some portions of it, especially the hilly or

BOOK III wooded parts of the country, were still held by the remains of the Afgháns or by native chiefs. On the frontier of his empire, the Rájpút principalities, the shattered kingdoin of Malwa, Bandélkand, and Bengal were still independent states, though the Linguage of overweening superiority used by Indian anthors, who treat even foreign war as a rebellion, might often betray an meautious reader into the erroneous conclusion, that they were subject to Delhi

Their polltical sltuation

There was little uniformity in the political situation of the different parts of this vast empire Hardly any law could be regarded as universal, but that of the unrestrained power of the prince Each kingdom, unrestrained power of the prince Each kingdom, each province, each district, and (we may almost say) every village, was governed, in ordinary matters, by its peculiar customs There were no regular courts of law spread over the kingdom for the administration of justice Such disputes as occurred in the Hindu parts of the country were settled by the village or district officers of the vienity, or by a kind of conventional arbitration, subject to an megular appeal of complaint to the superior chief or governor Where Musulmans were concerned, though the Kázi was nominally a judge, his active junisdiction appears to have been chiefly confined, in practice, to cases of marriage and divorce, claims arising out of marriage contracts, and to questions considered as properly religious All dif-ferences relating to land where they were not settled by the village officers, were decided by the district authorities, the collectors, the zemindárs or jagítdárs The higher officers of government excressed not only civil, but criminal jurisdiction, even in capital cases, with httle form and under little restraint with little form and under little restiaint

Taxes.

We have very imperfect means of knowing what were the taxes then levied The chief revenue of the state has always in India been a kind of land-tax, which, in the fully settled and quiet provinces, was raised directly on the land, but where the country remained under its char iv native chiefs, or was not fully subdued, was drawn by the Emperor in the shape of an annual tribute The rights of landed property were considerably Landed different from those that prevail in the west. There india were two separate and legal rights in the land, that of the ryot or cultivator, who held it by hereditary suc-cession, and that of the government, which could justly claim a fixed share of the produce. Both of these were permanent

We frequently see the officers of the army or govern-ment rewarded by jagirs or estates But these jigirs were not like our territorial possessions or landed estates in l'urope Though the larger ones implied a purisdiction both civil and criminal, very much re-sembling that emoyed by the greater fendul chiefs during the middle ages, or by barons holding of the crown in Scotland down to the abolition of the heritible jurisdictions in the last century, yet their legal power over the 1 md itself did not extend to a property in the soil, but to the exercise of all such rights as belonged to the government, for instance, that of levying the government's share of the produce, and the govern-ment tixes Though the Musulman conquerors claimed, in theory, an absolute right of property in the soil, the right was in practice restinued, in conformity with the incient liw and usage, to some fixed portion of the produce collected from villages, or smaller zemindars, or separate ryots. Their exactions were indeed often oppressively increased, but the ryot was rarely ic-moved, and he considered the land as his by right, subject to the payment of a certain share of the pro-duce, varying according to circumstances The Ja- Zemíndurs gu dár or holder of the jágír, was properly, in Musulman taries tunce, mercly an officer of government, and removable at pleasure, except where the grant had been made hereditary The term zemindár, or hudholder, is ap-VOL I M M

plied by Musulman writers not only to persons who held lands granted by the Crown, but even to the great воок пі Hindu chiefs and rajas, who had possessed their lands unrestricted from the remotest times, though the more powerful of these chiefs considered themselves as of right independent, and yielded obedience, not to a law, the existence of which they denied, but to fear or the pressure of a superior foice India, in reality, was rather a congeries of little states under one prince, than one regular and uniformly-governed kingdom Many of the hill and frontier districts yielded little more than a nominal submission. Besides the land-tax, or government share in the produce, there were other sources of revenue

the duties was ascertained

Musulmen

a duty levied, on the frontier, on goods imported by caravans or otherwise The tampha, or stamp, was the mark by which, on cattle and in goods, the payment of on merchandise transported from one part of the country to another, there was a shop-tax, chiefly in towns, and, in those parts of the country where the

Muhammedans had a confirmed and safe ascendency, the jezía, or poll-tax, was levied on all who were not

It may be remarked that Báber was the first prince who ordered all his marches to be regularly measured, as well as his journeys and hunting excursions, an operation which must have tended to improve the geo-

There was

There were transit duties

Revenue,

Customs.

Jezin

Measurement of marches

Posthouses.

Men of letters

graphy of a country then very imperfectly surveyed He also established a regular series of post-houses from Agra to Kábul, at the distance of about fifteen miles from each other, and stationed relays of six horses and proper officers at each * In spite of the migratory nature of his court, during the greater part of his reign, several of his nobles cul-

* Baber's Mem pp 393, 394

tivited letters with success, and several authors of emi- CHAP IV nence flourished there. Of these, the best known, at least in the present day, is Mn-Khánd (the son of Khand emir, the author of the Rozet-es Sefa), himself the inthor of two historicil works of uncommon ment, the Habibles Syan, and the Kholásd-al-Akhbar, as well as of some other literary productions. Abulfazl has given i list of the chief men of letters who adorned his court, but most of them, whitever may have been their real ment, are now nearly forgotten *

• Akbernama, end of Biber's reign 1 or a masterly view of the state of the Hindu, see Fiphinstone's III tory of India, vol 1, and for the internal state of India under the Musulman rulers, vol 11 pp 230-250

APPENDICES.

APPENDIX $\Lambda$ (p 8)

1111 TARTAR TRIBES-THLIR RACLS AND ORIGIN

It is only of lite years, and chiefly nided by the observations of modern travellers, that we have acquired any correct knowledge of the different rices inhibiting the north of Asia, which were so long confounded under the general name of Tartars The most vulnable work on the subject is that of the late M Abel-Remuent, " Recherches sur les Langues Tartares," (Paris, 1820, ito), a production of emgular industry, ingenuity and talent, in which he investigates the origin of the various races, not only from the authority of the Chinese writers, but, as far as his means allowed, from the more certain and enduring evidence of the structure and genius of their own languages The view of the divisions of these rices, taken in the Introduction to the "Memoirs of Baber," (London, 1826, 4to) and derived from a comparison of the instorical accounts of the writers of Southern Asia, especially of Baber, with those of the earlier European trivellers, corresponds nearly, in the most important respects, with that taken by M Abel-Remusit, who pursued a more sure and solid course of inquiry It is much to be regretted that that learned writer did not possess ampler material- for examining the different dialects of the Túrki, an opportunity which he could have turned to so good account, and which would have led him to many important conclusions in his own peenhar line of research, and it is still deeper subject of regret, that an early death removed him in the midst of his successful carcer

The origin of the name of Tartar, or more properly Tátár, is involved in some obscurity There were unluckily no general names, by which the different great a new which inhabited the wide regions of the north of Asia were distinguished, either by themselves or by their neighbours. The numerous smaller tribes of which they consisted had each its separate name. APPENDIX Tátár, as a general appellation, 14 unknown to the Fartur tribes of the present day. In carly times it distinguished one of the tribes of that rice which Luropeurs generally den amounte as Mongol, that inhabited the country on their custern frontier. round the Buyur Loke, next to the tribes of Lungus or Munchu extraction This tribe, called Tatars, which had distinguished itself and acquired a name previous to the func of Chengiz Khan, meannich that several other tribes were proud to be ranked under it and called by the same name, was subdued by that great conqueror, who belonged to a different tribe (properly enlicit Mongols) of the same race These ancient Mongols in-liabited the high grounds at the upper course of the Kerula, the Onon, and the Tuln. (D'Ohsson, Hist des Mongols, tom pp 7 62 67, and the curious note from Rushid's Januant Towarikh, p 680) After his time the desire of being called Tutars, after what was then a conquered and subordinite tribe, of course ceased, and the inferior tribe-, and even men belonging to no tribe at all, were in like inhiner enger to be called Mongols, after the tribe now become the dominant one

Arrendix A

Chengiz Khan's grand army was a mixed assemblage of many tribes and races We are told that the Tatar tribe, after it was conquered, having accompanied him in his invasion and formed the advance, was consequently the first part of his unmense army that entered the territories which he invaded, and being thus the earliest portion of the invading force known to strangers, their name of Tátár was applied to all the numerous bands that followed, and in Europe or to Europeans, from its similarity in sound to Tart irus, and the detestation and horror which the invaders everywhere inspired, was readily perverted into that of Tartari or Taitars (See Introduction to Biber, pp 22 and 23, and authors there quoted) The trueller Carpun (A D 1246) gives the name of Tartar as the peculiar distinctive title of the Su-Mongols, or river Mongols, in which he seems to he correct, and Rubriquis (A D 1254) speaks of it as rejected by Chengiz Khun's grundson, as being the appellation of an inferior tribe, he limself elanning to be of the race of pure Mongols (Hakluyt's Voyages, vol 1 pp 30 and 93)

The whole confusion has arisen, as already observed, from the want of general names known to the tribes themselves, by which to mark their division into great classes, according to their extraction IIence it has happened that different nations give them different appellations, and that, while Europeans in general designate the whole northern races as Tartars, from the name of one of the tubes of the race called Mongols, the writers of Persia — who e-country not only borders on that occupied by the tribes of Lurki race, but is itself traversed in all directions by the links or tribes of windering Turks, — have adopted the name of Lurk is the general uppellation, and extend the name of Turkistan over a great part of the northern regions comprehending Mongol and other tribes in its bounds

Λ

In like minner, in the grand Genealogues of the Turks and Per mus deduced from Adam, which contain their theories of the connection and adhipation of nations, and which present the names of their earliest patriarches as marking out the various ruce supposed to be derived from them, Lark the son of Yufith (Juplict) the son of Nuli (Norh) is mide the progenitor of all the northern nations from the Sea of Clum to the remotest west Y afith is made the chief of Null's sons, and his progeny are Turk Khozar, Siklab, Rus, Munsik, Chun, Kaurin Kaunal, and Mirikh, apparently the ancestor of the Turks, Khozars, Slavomans, Russians, Ghaz or Lurkomans, Chinese and Komms*, with two unknown tribes one of which seems to have lived on the border- of China – Turk is declared to be the elitef of all Y thith a sons, and his legiturate successor From Turk, ifter some generations comes Manna or Almehana Khan. generally called the fifth in descent from linn, who had twin sons 1 it ir mid Maghul between whom his dominions were From the latter are descended the Moghul tubes, divided while the different Turki tribes are descended from the former. ind thus both Turks and Mogluds are represented as having their decent from Lurk. The whole genealogy evidently betray- the hand of a Mu-alman and a Lurk, and is consequently of a comparatively late age. It is probably subsequent to the time of Taunur (See Abulghazi, Hist General pt 1 c. 2 and 3 , Shiprat-al Atrik, pp 22-29 , Khih Khan, Ke) The Shiprit-ul-Atrik, or "Genealogy of the Lurks," is t work which contrins the gene dogs of the Moghinls even more thim the Jurk-

As an additional proof of the confusion that prevails on this subject, it may be noted that many European writers, especially the Russian, perhaps misled by the above generology of Tatar and Moghul, confine the name of Tatár to the Tarka rice, though there can be little doubt that originally and properly it belonged to one of the trabes of Mongols

The subject of the origin and changes of lunguage has, of late years, excited much and currous research, which the importance

• One might be tempted to sup- assigned to them in the Shijrat, po e that the learnari were the they appear rather to have been the (imbri, but, from the habitation learnams (Comam) AFFENDIX of the subject well ments If the wide and early conquests of the Tartar nations be considered, it should seem that a better knowledge than we yet possess of the structure of the Mongol and Túrki tongues and of their influence on the languages of the south, as well as of the degree in which they have themselves been modified by these languages, is a very essential part of the general inquiry The Persian and Hindustáni languages have, in particular, felt their influence, especially in terms of government and war One can hardly say in how early times the influence of the Túrki on the Persian began M. Quatremére has already done much to facilitate our acquaintance with the ancient Túrki tongue, and still more is expected from his learned labours in the same department.

Δ

It may be here remarked that the Genealogical History of the Túrks by Abulgházi Beháder Khan of Khwárazm, 18 unfortunately very imperfectly translated We owe it to some Swedish officers of Charles XII, prisoners at Tobolzk, who purchased the original manuscript, had it translated into Russian "et le traduisirent ensuite eux-mêmes en diverses autres langues" (Avertissement au Lecteur) These languages weie probably Swedish or French or German A whole year, we are told, was required to reconcile the various translations Having gone through this process, the only wonder is that their meritorious labour is so distinct and intelligible as it is It is said to be translated from the Moghul language, but is probably written in the Túrki of Khwarazm Abulgházi is made to say, "The reason why I have written this book in the Moghul or Turk language, is that it is everywhere in use" No Moghul of Túrk would have confounded these two languages, and the reason given, which in Khwárazm is true of the Túrki, is not so of the Moghul (Pt II c v f) The names, as might have been expected, are more particularly corrupt.*

* Since writing these remarks I find that Count Nicolas de Romanzow has published the original at

Casan, in Russia (1825, folio), and that the work is in the Turki, not the Mongol tongue

APPENDIX

Δ

APPLNDIX B (p 43)

(The following Lists of the Klinns of the Moghuls and of the Amirs of Kishgar which D'Herbelot and Degingnes were not able to produce, are chiefly extracted from the Faril he-Reshidi of Mirza Haider who was hims if descended from these princes, and who collected the materials for their history, which he wrote with much ability and research.)

KHANS OF MOGHULISTAN

Is in-hugher Khen scenes to have been called into Moghuhist in from Mawerannaher about  $\sqrt{11}$  721, and to have reigned till  $\sqrt{11}$  750

An interregnum

Loghluk-Lammir Khin, son of Isun-Inglut, born about A H 730 came to the throne about A H 748, died A H 764

Ihis Khwaja Khan, his son, murdered by Kamreddin, v 11 766

Usurption of Amir Kumreddin. It was against him that the expeditions of Mir Tammr into the Jettch country were directed,  $\sqrt{11.768-794}$

Kluzer Kluw ga Klan, son of Toghlak-Tumur, rused to the throne in  $\Lambda$  H 791, before Kamreddin's death. He reigned thirty years, and was succeeded by his son,

Muhammed Khan, who was succeeded by his son,

Shir Muhammed Khan, who was succeeded by Ins nephew, Sultan Weis Khan, the son of Shir-Kuh, the brother of Shir-Muhammed Sultan Weis was killed, A II 832

On his death there was a division among the Moghuls, some adhering to Yuma Khan, the eldest son of Sultan Weis, others to Isin bugha, the voninger son

Yúms Khun, who wis expelled A H 832, returned A H 860, and regained the western part of Moghnhstán Hostihties were maint ined between the Eastern and Western Moghuls, till the death of his grandnephew, Kepek Sult in, when he reigned without a rival.

In the latter part of his life the remoter tribes of the desert, displeased with his fondness for towns, separated from him, Isan-bugha Khan rused to the throne in  $\Lambda$  II 832, and through hife supported by the Eastern Moghuls, died  $\Lambda$  II 866 succeeded by his son,

Dost Multimmed Khim, who ruled to the castword, died A II 873

Kepck Sultan Ughlan, has son, ruled for a time, about Teifin, where he was murdered Arrenoix B APPFNDIX B and acknowledged his second son, Sultan Ahmed, or Iláchi Khan, as their Khan—so that the empire was again severed in two in his lifetime, he died  $\Lambda$  H 892

Sultan Mahmúd Khan, Yunis's eldest son, succeeded his father in Tashkend and the Western Tribes He was defeated by Sheibáni Khan, in A H 908, and lost Táshkend and Seiram, and finally was put to death, A H 914 Sultan Ahmed Khan, second son of Yúnis, governed the Eastern Moghuls, with Aksu, Terfán, &c. He was generally known as Iláchi Khan, the slaughtering Khan He was bent upon making himself absolute in the desert, and destroyed the chicfs, and lessened the power of many of the tribes Defeated by Sheibáni Khan, A H 908, he died of grief, A H 909

The death of Sultan Ahmed Khan was followed by many civil wars and much anarchy in Moghulistán H18 elder brother, Sultan Mahmúd, invaded his dominions from the west Sultan Ahmed's numerous sons contended with one another Several tribes, and among others the Kirghiz, separated from the great body The anarchy and civil wars lasted some The country was overrun by Ababeker of Káshghar, by vears the Kalımáks and Kara Kaızáks. The whole tribes of Mog=7 hulistán never again united under one head Two Khanships, however, and the confederation of the Kinghiz-Kaizaks, seem to have arisen out of the ruins of the Khanship of the Moghuls Sultan Mansúr, the eldest son of Sultan Ahmed, established himself in Aksú, Terfán, &c, and a new Khanship rose in Káshghar

Mansúr Khan, Iláchi Khan's eldest son, was acknowledged and ruled in Teifán, and the farthest East He died, A H 950, having reigned two years along with his father, and fortyone more by himself, he was succeeded by his son,

Shah Khan

Sultan Said Khan, third son of Iláchi Khan, in Rejeb, A. H 920, eleven years after his father's death, seized Káshghar, and expelled Ababeker Mírza He died, A. H. 939, Zilhajch 19, and was succeeded by his son,

Abdal-Rashid Khan, who died,  $\Lambda$  H 893, and was succeeded by his son,

Abdal Kerím

Meanwhile, in the Desert of Moghulistán, the Kughiz^{*} established themselves under Khans of them own, and in process of time formed a kind of federative junction with the Kuzák-Uzbeks, which has in some degree listed to the present day, and has been called the "Three Hordes of the Kughiz." This innon of the Old Kirgluz, who were Moghuls, with the Urbek-Kinzik who were Turks, accounts for the difference of origin and language in the present Kirghiz, which has puzzled modern inquirers. See Description des Hordes des Kirghiz-Kuzaks par Alexis de Leochine – Paris, 1840, a eurious and viduable work.

AMILS OF K (SHGHAR CONTEMPORALY WITH THE KHANS OF MOCHLEISTAN

- Amr Juluk Ulusbegi of the Moghul Khaus, contemporary with Isan-bugha Khau, succeeded by
- Amir Yulin (sometimes called Bolan) his brother, rused loghlak-fummer to the throne, succeeded by his son
- Amir Khodudul, who reigned about muety years, in Káshgar He succeeded lus fither, probably soon after A II 748

In lns time Annr Kunreldin, his uncle, usurped the Khanship of the Moghuls, and it would seem for a period, the greater part of the Kushghar territory. The chronology of Mir Khod ud id's life is very uncert un. He was succeeded by

- Mir Sved Ah, grund-on of Khod ndad by his son Amír Sved Ahmed Hereigned about twenty-four years, A 11 838-861, and was succeeded by his sons, Simir Mirza, in Yarkeid, who Muhammed Haider Mirza in
- Simiz Mirzi, in Yarkend, who Muhimmed Haider Mirza in expelled his brother from Kishgur, expelled by his Kishghur and reigned seven brother veus, died v H 868
- Multimined Huder Mirza, on his brother's death, sneeeeded lie is and to have reigned six years, with imperfect, and eighteen years with full anthority. In A II 885, he was expelled by his nephew and stepson Ababeker
- Ababeker Marza, son of Samz, reigned in all forty-eight years
- The years of his reign are prohibly reckoned from the date of his taking possession of Yurkend, about A ii 873. He was finally defeated and expelled by Sultan Sud Khan, the third son of Sultan Ahmed Khan (Haehi Khan), who changed the dynasty See Khans of Moghuls Ababeker, one of the most cruel and odious tyrants recorded in history, died A ii 820.

Arrentik B

APPENDIX C (p 67)

KHANS OF THE CHAGHATAI WHO REIGNED IN MÁ-WERANNAHER, FROM THE TIME OF KAZAN KHAN

AFFENDIX Kázán Khan was slain A H 747, in a revolt headed by Mír C Kazaghan

Dánishmend-cheli Khan, who was of the race of Oktái Khan, was raised to the throne, but put to death A H 749

Baián-kuli Khan, of the race of Chaghatái, raised by Kazaghan, muidered by that chieftain's son, Mír Abdalla

- Taimur-shah Khan, a descendant of Chaghatái, raised by Mír Abdalla, slain in battle
- Adel Khan, of the same race, set up in Badakhshán, and afterwards murdered
- Toghlak-Taimur Khan and Elías Khwája Khan Invaded Máwerannaher from Moghulistan, and overran it from A H 761 to 766
- To restore internal order, the Amírs of the country elected as-Grand-Khan,
- Kábul-shah Khan, of the mace of Chaghatán, put to death A 11 771
- Syurghatmish Khan, of the race of Oktán, raised by Mín Taimur, sueeceded by his son,
- Sultan Mahmúd Khan, who took Bajazet.
- Tuman Kutluk Ughlan, probably his son, appears to have succeeded him

APPENDIX D (p 441)

AMOUNT OF BÁBER'S REVENUES

Arpixing Báber, in the account which he gives of Hindustán, after the battle of Panipat, observes "The countries from Bhíra to Behár, which are now under my dominion, yield a revenue of fifty-two krors, as will appear from the particular and detailed statement Of this amount, Perganas to the value of eight of

APPENDIX

D

30 Raia Bikam-eliand

The amount of these sums, some of which are pro- bably erroneous, would give - If the tankas of account are black tankas, add for Turbút	113,793,457] 2,750,000	ر
- Besides 250,000 silver tankas of Tirbut Khulma- tána, and the tribute of the various Rijas left blank	116,533,157}

The revenues of Agra, and perhaps of Khair ibid, seem to be stated low, perhaps by a elerical error The chief revenue of Delhi was perhaps derived from possessions in the Doib J know not if Mián-e-Viláet, is to be understood of any province in the Doib Laknáu and Baksú are elassed together The latter is unknown to me (Buxar') Mewat is sud not to have been included in Iskander (heh der muán e Iskander dákhul nabúdih), by which I understand Sultan Sekander Lodi's revenue-roll

The amount of the revenue given is nearly forty-five krors, the rest, amounting to about seven krors more, was probably made up of tribute

The amount of this revenue, of fifty-two krors, if considered as represented in single dams, according to the mode of computation in Akber's reign, would be 1,300,0001, if in double dams, according to the calculation of Feri-hia, 2,600,0001, if we adopted the mode of reekoning suggested by the facts stated by Mirza Haider, it would be 4,212,0001, while, if we take the tanga at 7kd, which is somewhat below the lowest rate it reached in the reign of Sultan Muhammed Toghlik, the amount would be 16,250,0001, but, if at its full and proper value of a rupee, 52,000,0001 Every thing considered, I should inchine to consider 4,212,0001, as the amount of Biber's nomnal revenue, a very large sum, when the working of the American mines had not yet produced its full effect

It is not easy to find any unobjectionable point of comparison The statements of Akber's revenue given in the translation of the Ayin Akberi, have not been generalised, and are far from being always distinct

In Catron's Histoire de l'Empire du Mogol, Paris, 1715, 4to, vol 1 p 264, a statement of the revenue of Hindustán, & e, in Aurengzeb's time is given, probably from the pipers of Minueei, the Venetian traveller, and said to be drawn from the Archives of the Empire It amounts in all to 38 71 94 000 rs (p 266) But the greater part consists of the provinces of Bengal, Málwa,

Tankas

Guirít, the Deklinn &c., so that the provinces acquired by APPENDIX Biber are but a small part They are stated thus -

				Rupees
Della 8 sirkars,	220 pergunas	-	-	1 25 50 000
Agra 14 ,	275	-	-	2 22 03 550
Libor 5	314	-	-	$2\ 35\ 05\ 000$
Beh ir, S	245 "	-	-	1 21 50 000
Illay is and deper		-	-	77 38 000
•				 ,
				7 81 46 550

The revenue of the Old Provinces is therefore only seven kror- eighty-one like forty-six thousand five hundred and fifty rupees, or 7 814 6551 sterling Catron adds, that the other taxes and duties equal or exceed the land-revenue This does not make the amount of B iber's revenue improbable.

APPENDIX E (p 411)

BABER'S MONEY OF ACCOUNT

It is by no means casy to ascertain the intrinsic value of the coins and momes of account used at different periods of history The usual tendency in all countries, except under very enlightened governments, is for the value of the current coin to become less and less, partly by waste from ordinary tear and wear but chiefly from repeated debasements in the con itself from ill-judged financial operations affecting the mist. and diminishing the intrinsic value, but preserving the denomination of the currency

Mr Elphinstone observes, that the earlier Musalman princes used the din ir and the dirhum like the khall's that these come were succeeded in India by tankas, divided into j als or dams. equal to about the perse, and that Sair Sma changed the name of tinky to that of rupeia, or rupes, which was adopted by Akber in his counge (Hist. of India, The - 7-244)

The state of the circulating medium or the perfoi when Biber entered India is not very distinuty known. Bloer dies not in general mention the depuniter of Colling cole in which he reckons, that being sufficiently fixed and known by APPENDIX universal usc In converting his sums into English money, in the notes to the translation of his Memoirs, I fear that I may have estimated them too low, having assumed that the Treasury Accounts were kept in dams, forty to the iupee The tanka was the current eoin in his time

ATTENT E.

 $\mathbf{D}$

The silver tanka, in the reign of Sultan Alaeddín Khilji, was a tola in weight, and was equal to fifty jitals or peisas (Briggs's Ferishta, vol 1 p 360) It was probably very nearly equal to Akber's rupee, or about two shillings

In the produgal reign of Sultan Muhammed Toghlak Shah, the coin was so much debased that the tanka was exchanged for only sixteen peisas (Ibid p 410), less than a third of the proper standard, or about  $7\frac{3}{4}d$  sterling, if we compute by jitals

Ferishta, in relating the circumstances mentioned in the text, states that Báber gave Humáyun a donation of 350,000 rupees (Ferishta, vol 11 p 48) Now, the sum issued from the Treasury being 70 laks or 7,000,000 of some coin or denomination of money, this would make Babei's money of account equal to 2 dams only, or a double dam, supposing Ferislita to reckon by the Akberi rupee of 40 dams, as seems probable The value of the donation to Humáyun would thus be about 2 35,000l sterling

The Kholáset-ul-Akbár (f 246) makes the same donation seven laks of Sekanderi tankas The value of the Sekanderi rupec I do not know, but if Ferishta's reckoning of 31 laks of rupees be correct, this would make the Sekanderi tanka equal to half a rupee, and to ten pieces of the money used in account, or double dams

Mírza Halder tells us (Tar Reshídi, f 365) that his allowances, in the high situation which he filled at Lahur, were it first 15 laks, but were afterwards mereased to 50 laks, and adds, that one lak of Hindustán is equal to 20,000 shahrukhis This was in Humáyun's reign, when Kámrán retook Kandahár, Now, at this late, each shahlukhi is exactly илн 944 equal to five pieces of the money of account of the time

What was the value of the shahrukhn? It was a coin, the value of which probably remained uniform, as it is not likely that there were new comages of it Abulfazl tells us, that 8 laks of shahrukhis were equivalent to 1 kror, 28 laks of dams, ~ so that 8 shahrukhis represented 128 dams, and 1 shahiukhi 16 dams

Thus we have the shahrukhi represented by Mirza Haider as equal to five pieces of the money of account, and by Abulfazl as equal to sixteen pieces of that money, and the shahrukhi

E.

being the same, the money of account in Báber's time is rather more than three times more valuable than in Akber's

Now, if the rupee of Akber be taken at 2s, and the shahrukhi be considered as equal to 16 dams of Akber, or rather better than  $9\frac{1}{2}d$ , say  $9\frac{3}{4}d$ , the lak of Humáyun (or 20,000 shahrukhis) would be equal to nearly 810l sterling, and Báber's lak was probably the same.

One difficulty occurs, that, in several instances in Báber's Memoirs, payments are expressly stated to be made in tankas, and, in a Persian translation or paraphrase in my possession of a pirt of Báber's Commentaries, by I know not what author, but evidently old, all the large payments, and that now in question among the rest, are expressed as made in tankas, f 67 v*

If we take the value of the tanka, when Báber entered India, at that of the idulterated tanka of Toghlak Shah, or  $7\frac{1}{2}d$ , perhaps the lowest known in India, the lak would be 31251, and the donation to Humáyun of 70 laks would amount to 218,7501 which seems too high

In the statement of the revenue of Hindustán contained in the same translation, and given p 409 in the article of Tirhút, there is stated to be paid of khidmatána (tribute) by the Raja 2 liks and 50,000 tanke nukreh (silver tankas), and 27 laks 50,000 tanke siáh, (black or copper tankas) There would seem, therefore, to have been both silver and copper tankas May not these black tankas have corresponded to the dams in which the trensury accounts were afterwards kept, or, perhaps, with the farther difference of the substitution of 40 dams for 50 jitals?

On the whole, if we suppose that in Báber's time the moncy of account was at 40 dams to the rupee, the lak would be of the value of 2501 sterling, if we take Ferishta's reckoning of double dams, it would be worth 5001, and, if we follow the reckoning of Mírza Haider, is above deduced, something near 8101 We evidently cannot adopt even the most depreciated tanka of Toghlak-shah, which would make it about 31251, and, still less, the lak of rupees which succeeded tankas, and would bring it to 10,0001 sterling I confess, I incline most to the lak of Mírza Haider, as being deduced from data given by a contemporary The question, however, deserves to be decided on surer principles, and may perhaps be settled satisfactorily by an examination of some collection of older Indian coms

* A present of seventy thousand Khan's ambassador Babers Mem tangs or tankas is made to Kuchum p 399

VOL I

It may be added, that the word tanka or tanga is of Chaghatái Túrki origin, being derived from tang, which in that langunge means white, having the same origin as the asper (from aspros, white) of the modern Greeks, the Ak-chia of the Osmunit Turks, the Tátari of the Mingrelians, and many other monies, all originally signifying white (Josafa Barbaro in Rumusio, vol 11 p 96) The Tengi of Khwárazm would appear to have been worth the fourth of a crown (Astley's Voyages, vol 1v p 484) At the present day in Persia, the tanga seems to be worth only 6d (J B. Fraser's Travels in Persia, p 81)

INDEX

тo

THE FIRST VOLUME.

- Ababeker, of Káshghar, 56 His conquest of Káshghar, 57 Defeats Yunis Khan, 57 Invades Ferghána, 90 Concludes a peace and retures, 90 Seizes part of Badaklishan, 287 Besieges Andeján, 317 Defeated by Sultan Saíd, 318 Expelled from Káshghar, 332
- Ab-burden, Báber s description of 164 He cuts verses on the rock at, 164
- Abdal Alı Terkhán (Mír), of Bokhára, protects Sheibáni, 184. His death, 187
- Abdal-azız (Mír) appointed by Báher to Lahur, 420 Defeated by the Rájputs, 465 His part in the battle of Kanwa, 470
- Abdal azız Sultan son of Oheid Khan, left in charge of Asterabád, 489 Defeats the Persians near Bostam, 489
- Abdal Fitah, son of Mir Fázil, his command in Sind, 384 His death, 384
- Abdal-Kadus (Amır), slavs Sheikh Je mál-ed-dín, 55 Releases Yúnis Khan, 55
- Abdal-rızák Mírza, son of Ulugh Beg Mırza, kıng of Kábul, 210 Expelled by Mokım Argbun, 210 216
  Attempts to regain his kıngdom, 216
  Submits to Báber, 223 Joins Báher on his expedition to Kandahár, 277
  Left by Báber in Káhul, 280 Receives Nangenhár, 282 Plan to restore him to the throne of Kábul, 284 Put to death, 286
- Abel Remusat, M, notice of his 'Recherches sur les Langues Tartares," 533
- Abu Ali Hasan ihn Ali ibn Sina, the Avicenna of the West, 85 note.
- Abul Bala (Mír) his remark on Humávuns illness, 515

Abul fazl, his account of the battle at

Kul-málek, 323 His account of the intrigue in favour of Melidi Khwaja, 515

- Abulgházi Behader Khan, prince of Khwárazm his Genealogical History in Turki 81 536
- Abulkhair Khan, Khan of the Uzbeks, 29 His vigorous reign, 29 Places Abusaid Mirza on the throne of Sa markand, 29 Marries a daughter of Ulugh Beg Mírza, 29 Offends his chieftains, 29 Is defeated by the Kalimáks, 30 note Is defeated by the chiefs of Kipchák and slain, 30
- Abul Malaram (Khwája), visits Báber, 114 His confidant, 167 169 Is put to death by Sheibáni, 186
- Abusaíd Mirza, Sultan of Samarkand, 47 Defeats Isanbugha 47 Resides at Herát, 48 Sets up Yunis Khan, 50 Bestows on him the territory of Masikhi 52 His disastrons expedition into Irak, 53 74 His death 53 74 Adinapur (now Jelálábád) Báber ar-
- rives at, 223 Baber halts there, 281
- Afghans (the), their original seat 219 Their predatory habits near Kábul 280 Dispersed by Baber, 281 The Mehmend tribe defeated by Baher The Yusef zais make a conven-284 tion with Baher, 358 Bábers periodical inroads, 338, 339, note Their power at Delbi under the Lodis 406 Their chiefs resolve to divide the empire, 407 Their union in the Pen-Defeated by Chin-Taimur 1áb 424 433 Defeated under Sultan Ibráhím at Panipat, 457 Their apprehensions from Baber s conquest, 443 Driven by Humáyun to Bengal under Nasir Khan, 450 Their confederacy in the West, 451 Their success in the Doah 469 Defeated with the Rájputs at

INDER of LamBurth 239
n the East, r on the tr on the are 487 Ashowledge Báber's nuthority, 239 Acknowledge Báber's nuth n the East, a chowledge Bábers and character, A chowledge Bábers grandmother A chowledge Bábers and character, A chow the East 1 ACKING Reguling and chine and on the Ausdoular Herlineager her spirite
1 A87 Baber, 51 Instance Di marty agamat n the East, er on the trent, 487 hr Chin- br Chin-communication Jukab, S. nrince of Hasan 248 her marriage conduct, 53 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4), 91 (4 b, 304     Ite     daugniters     Begum, no       f, 304     Ite     Ausha Sultan Begum, no       f, 437     Ite     Ausha Sultan Begum, no       51     Báber, 128     526, noif       51     Báber, 128     526, noif       51     Báber, 128     526, noif       52     Norda (the White Horde), 26       53     Al-Sakáts (Greybeards), 11       Al-Sakáts (Greybeards), out and Khan       Al-Sakáts (Greybeards), norda (the second sec
r, 451 Baber, 120 White House
T nut to use I Ake ( a Akits in Alan Manne ande Akhsi (ogred by Suited 90 Den Kha
Ak-Sakhis (Akhsikat), Mahmud Ahmud Is put to death, Is put to death, Ak-sakhis (Akhsikat), Mahmud Ahmud Akhsi (or Akhsikat), Mahmud Ahmud Akhsi (or Akhsikat), Mahmud Ahmud of, besieged by Sultan Mahmud Khai 89 Siege abandoned, 90 Demande of, besieged by Sultan Mahmud Khai 89 Siege abandoned, 90 Demande from Béber by Sultan Mahmud Khai and by Jehéngit, 107 Surrender and by Jehéngit, 107 The eitar and by Jehéngit, 117 S.
ad) ben Kothany brated astrono- brated of Khosrou pew of khosrou bew of lus go- to Ibr/thim Saru, 117 to Ibr/thim Jaun Hassan, 117 State to Ibr/thim Jaun Hassan, 118 State to Ibr/thim Saru, 118 State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State State S herd, 214 Is shain, erd, 214 Is from ins bun 1 is conded by Delhor, 118 en from Is slain, defended by Baber, 110 unger" Lin and by Gard, 214 generation of the second contract of the second con to 10 the dy Uzun 11. 118 Atta defended by Uzun 11. 118 Atta defender to Búber, 118 Atta defender to Búber, 118 Atta rendered to Búber, 118 Atta rendered to Búber, 118 Atta defended by Uzun 11. 118 Atta defender to Búber, 118 Atta rendered to Bú defendent to Buber, younger nur (Mir), confiden- pur (Mir), Defends her, 247 Defends her, 247 to Tash- Appointed to Buber, and "younger trendered to Buber, and "younger by the "elder" and "younger 170 Baber received there, 174 170 Baber received there, 174 170 Baber received there, 174 Aksu, battle of, 52 Aksu, battle of, 52 Aksu, battle of, Sultan Sekand annunted the Uz-   Ale ed din (Sultan Sultan out P1 495 1 + ++011 ++ Tollin 20 - 1. Out Tohl is against ber Loan Loan Sultan Den Ala calor with Sultan), or vention with Sultan), or pls against Baber, 335 (Sultan), joins Baber, (Sultan), joins Baber, (Sultan), or Baber, Ala calor with Sultan), or Dellu, 406 Ala calor with Sultan), or Dellu, 406 Khan, son of Sultan Khan, son of Sultan 23 Khan, son of Sultan 423 Khan, son of Sultan 423 Khan 423
(Sultan), joins Baber, (Sultan), joins Baber,
(Sultan), jours Baber, (Sultan), jours Baber, (Sultan), jours Baber, (Sultan), jours Baber, (Sultan), jours Baber, (Khan, son of Sultan), 423 (Khan, son of Sultan), 423 (Sultan), jours Baber, (Sultan), son of Sultan), 423 (Sultan), 523 (Sultan), 523 (Sul (Sultan), joins Baber, (Sultan), it is younger Sultan), it is younger of 1 tims character, er, 61 Becomes Khan er, 63 Ilis character, tan, 65 Ilis character, belling Loan Loan Sultan Belling Alt ed an Loan Sultan Belling rived of Rabéri, 423 Chura, 423 Aspires to Bé Chura, 423 Aspires to Bé Solicits his aid, 412 Als Solicits his aid, 412 Thes Sultan
Knaw that I challes 1 412 th of I unis Becomes Khan, er, 61 Becomes Khan, er, 63 Ilis character, titan, 63 Ilis character, the khan, 66 His ener- the khan, 66 His ener- His televisite khan, 66 His enerer, 61 Ilis character, tan, 63 Ilis character, biblipur, 420 Detents to Ac Diblipur, 421 Thes to Ac the station of the tolation the tolation the elu Khan, 66 from meet III relation Logues elu Proceeds to meet Logues 66 relation Lodi, 421, note reduce both to reduce 66 Proceedid Knam, Louis andition to there 42
r Sintan with Date, Jaken the brother, 169 Taken his brother, 169 Released, b) Sheibáni, 184 Released, b) Shei meeting milling Jaken Histicut, 124 Is nekno his brother, 184 Released, to Land, 424 Is us so Sheibani, 184 Desert, 190 Khan, 424 Just 50 Sheibani, the Desert, 190 Khan, 424 Just 424 to Labúr, 424 Johnson to Sheibán, 184 Relersed, turns to the Desert, 190 Curns to the bolds Mehroli O a thrift, holds Mehroli cturns to stabroli storelies to thum, 426
O Sultan ID an arreats
O Sultan ID an arreats
O by Sultan 105 Its a revolt of Dobb, 426 Retreats by Sultan 105 Retreats Doub, 426 Retreats Doub, 426 Retreats Doub, 426 Retreats Doub, 426 Retreats
O pan of Vichwát, holos M pan of Vichwát, holos M wat, 105 wat, Lodi, guells a revolt of han Lodi, shifts 411 transferrents han of Vichwát, holos M by Sultan 105 Doáb, 426 427 Takes shelter m 427 Takes shelt
O han of Vichwát, holos k han Lodi, quells a revolt of han bolts, 410 Litrahum s nobles, 411 Litrahum s nobles, 411 Litrahum s nobles, 413 Litrahum s nobles, 414 Litrahum s nobles, O bian of Vielwát, holos it in the state of O ban of Vielwát, holos it mar, 105 Nan Lodi, quells a revolt of Nan Lodi, quells a revolt of Ibrahim s nobles, 411 Nirza (Sultan), son of Abusaíd, Nirza (Sul
O bian of Vielwát, holos in swat, 105 Nan Lodi, quells a revolt of Ibrahim s nobles, 411 Ibrahim s nobles, 411 Mirza (Sultan), son of Abusaíd, Mirza (Sultan), son of Bokhtra, n of Sumarkand and Bokhtra, tits quarris so between them tits quarris or between them
O bian of Vielwát, holos in swat, 105 Nan Lodi, quells a revolt of Ibrahim s nobles, 411 Ibrahim s nobles, 411 Mirza (Sultan), son of Abusaíd, Mirza (Sultan), son of Bokhtra, n of Sumarkand and Bokhtra, tits quarris so between them tits quarris or between them
O bian of Vielwát, holos in swat, 105 Nan Lodi, quells a revolt of Ibrahim s nobles, 411 Ibrahim s nobles, 411 Mirza (Sultan), son of Abusaíd, Mirza (Sultan), son of Bokhtra, n of Sumarkand and Bokhtra, tits quarris so between them tits quarris or between them
O han of Vielwát, holos IX han 105 khan Lodi, quells a revolt of khan Lodi, quells a revolt of han of Sumarkand and Bokhúra, n of Sumarkand and Bokhúra, this quarrels with hus brother 4 fils quarrels with hus brother trishcikh, 58 Percee between them trishcikh, 58 Neureddin Malimfid trishcikh, 58 Neu
O han of Vielwát, holos IX han Lodi, quells a revolt of Nara Lodi, quells a revolt of Nara Lodi, quells a revolt of Ibrahim s nobles, 411 Ibrahim s nobles
O han of Vielwát, holos IX han Lodi, quells a revolt of Nara Lodi, quells a revolt of Nara Lodi, quells a revolt of Ibrahim s nobles, 411 Ibrahim s nobles
O han of Vielwát, holos IX han Lodi, quells a revolt of Nara Lodi, quells a revolt of Nara Lodi, quells a revolt of Ibrahim s nobles, 411 Ibrahim s nobles
O han of Vielwát, holos IX han Lodi, quells a revolt of Marza (Sultan), son of Abusaíd, Ibrahim s nobles, 411 Ibrahim s nobles, 411 Ibrahim s nobles, 411 Ibrahim s nobles, 411 Ibrahim s nobles, 411 Mirza (Sultan), son of Abusaíd, Mirza (Sultan), son of Abusaíd, In of Sumarkand and Bokhúra, an of Sumarking Malimídi Dích steid by Nasireddin Obeidulla, and G3 186 Invades Fierghána, an, 63 186 peace with Báber, 89 Makes peace with Báber, 89 Makes peace with Báber, 89
<ul> <li>O Sultan 105 Mar.</li> <li>Sultan 105</li></ul>
O Juan of Vielwát, holos IX Juan of Vielwát, holos IX Juan of Vielwát, holos IX Juan 105 Sutan Lodi, quells a revolt of Alankins nobles, 411 Juraia (Sultan), son of Abusaíd, In of Sumarkand and Bokhúra, in dis user create between them in distant Bokhúra, in dis user create in distant Báber, so in distant his user create in distant Báber, so in distant his quarta fir in Makes peace with Báber, so in distant his quartanta, Alengiz Núián, his <ul> <li>Norman of Vielwát, holos A</li> <li>Juan John and Bokhára,</li> <li>Mirza (Sultan) son of Bokhára,</li> <li>Mirza (Sultan) Sultan Malumód</li> <li>Defined by Nasireddin Malumód</li> <li>Makes peace with Báber, 89</li> <li>Makes peace with Báber, 89</li> <li>Makes peace vith Báber, 89</li> <li>Makes peace of Chandíri,</li> <li>Makes peace of Chandíri,</li> <li>Makes peace Sinhah, left in charge of Chandíri,</li> <li>Marka S fi commands the Fer-</li> <li>Kan Laga S fi commands the Site</li> <li>Kan Laga S fi commands the Site</li> <li>Kan Laga A</li> <li>Marka S fi commands the Site</li> <li>Kan Liga Parka S fi commands the Site</li> <l< th=""></l<></ul>
<ul> <li>Normed Sultan S fa commands the Performed Sultan S fa command the Performed Sultan S fa commands the Performed S</li></ul>
<ul> <li>O Juan of Vlehwát, holos IX</li> <li>Juan Joshing and Joshidra, and Sunarkand and Bokhára, an of Sumarkand and Bokhára, and of Sumarkand and Malimuda Its quarruls with lus brother and of Sumarkand and Bokhára, and of Jamur, 23</li> <li>Juan Joshi, loft in charge of Chandúri, and Sultan S fi commands the Period Sultan S fi command Sultan S fi com</li></ul>
<ul> <li>O Juan of Vlehwát, holos IX</li> <li>Juan Joshing and Joshidra, and Sunarkand and Bokhára, an of Sumarkand and Bokhára, and of Sumarkand and Malimuda Its quarruls with lus brother and of Sumarkand and Bokhára, and of Jamur, 23</li> <li>Juan Joshi, loft in charge of Chandúri, and Sultan S fi commands the Period Sultan S fi command Sultan S fi com</li></ul>
<ul> <li>Norman of Vielwát, holos Kara, and of Vielwát, holos Kara, lodi, quells a revolt of Abusaíd, librahum s nobles, 411</li> <li>Mirza (Sultan), son of Abusaíd, Mirza (Sultan), Sultan Malimúd, and 63 186 Invades Ferghána, and of Samarkana Malimúd, and of Sumarkana Malimúd, and of Jamur, 20 and and and Jamur, 20 and and and Jamur, 20 and a</li></ul>
<ul> <li>O Juan of Vlehwát, holos IX</li> <li>Juan Joshing and Joshidra, and Sunarkand and Bokhára, an of Sumarkand and Bokhára, and of Sumarkand and Malimuda Its quarruls with lus brother and of Sumarkand and Bokhára, and of Jamur, 23</li> <li>Juan Joshi, loft in charge of Chandúri, and Sultan S fi commands the Period Sultan S fi command Sultan S fi com</li></ul>
<ul> <li>Norman of Vielwát, holos A</li> <li>Juan John and Bokhára,</li> <li>Mirza (Sultan) son of Bokhára,</li> <li>Mirza (Sultan) Sultan Malumód</li> <li>Defined by Nasireddin Malumód</li> <li>Makes peace with Báber, 89</li> <li>Makes peace with Báber, 89</li> <li>Makes peace vith Báber, 89</li> <li>Makes peace of Chandíri,</li> <li>Makes peace of Chandíri,</li> <li>Makes peace Sinhah, left in charge of Chandíri,</li> <li>Marka S fi commands the Fer-</li> <li>Kan Laga S fi commands the Site</li> <li>Kan Laga S fi commands the Site</li> <li>Kan Laga A</li> <li>Marka S fi commands the Site</li> <li>Kan Liga Parka S fi commands the Site</li> <l< th=""></l<></ul>

, 128 526, note a (the White Horde), 26 als (Greybeards), 11 (or Akhsikat), district and fort esteged by Sultan Mahmud Khan, Siege abandoned, 90 Demanded n Baber by Sultan Malimud Khan, Surrendered by Jehhngir, 107 The estadel fended by Uzun Hassan, 117 Sur by the "elder" and "younger" Llians, 70 Baber received there, 174 la ed din (Sultan) of Bengal, his con vention with Sultan Sekander of Alú ed din Lodi (Sultan), or Alim Khan, son of Sultan Behlúl, de-Receives Aspires to the throne prived of Rabéri, 423 of Delhi, 412 Thes to Baber, and solicits his and, 412 418 Receives Dib/lpur, 420 Defeated by Doulat Dibilpur, 420 Defented by 421 Dibilpur, 421 Thes to Kabul, 421 Ilis relationship to Sultan Ibrahim Iodi, 421, note Engages Baber in Khan, 421 an expedition to reduce Dellii, 122 His treaty with Baber, 423 Hastens Joined by Doulat Khan, 424 Is neknowledged by to Labur, 424 Doulat Khan as his sovereign, 424 , by Sultan Ibrahim, 426 Thes to the Marches to Delhi, 425 Doáb, 426 Retreats to the Penjáb, 427 Takes shelter in Kinkúteh, 430 h Escopes, and joins Ghazi Ahan, 430 of Thes to Baber, who receives him with honour, 431 His future his tory, 431 Confined in Kila 7 efer, aíd, hra, Finds refuge at the Court of ther Behåder Shali of Gugrat, 431 them Alankuwa, ancestress of Chengy, Khan, dulla, limlid and of Inimur, 23 69 ghann, Alatágh mountains, separate Fergliána er, 89 from In ligar and Tartary, 79 Alengiz Muián, his compact with Dawa hand(ri, Al Tarábi, a philosopher, 83, note the Perr 315 e Tambol

> Alı (Amir Sultan), brother of /ulnun, made gorernor of Sistan, 273

Defeated

548

- Alı Dost Taghai, governor of Andeján, 109 Surrenders it to Jehangir, 110 Invites Biber to Marghinan, 115 Makes peace between Baber and Jehangir, 125 Becomes Baber s prime minister, 127 His character and conduct, 127 His resignation, 132
- Alı Khalıfa See Nızam-ed-dın.
- Alı Khan Fermulı, joins Baber, 446
- Alı Khon Istylu, a commander of the Persian auxiliaries sent to Baber, S15
- Alı Mırza (Sultan), son of Sultan Mahmud Mirza, retires from Ura-Proclaimed King of tippa, 94 Simarkand, 97 Made captive by Bavesanghar, and ordered to be blinded. 99 Escapes unburt to Bokhara, 99 Defeats his brother Bavesonghar 99 Invades SamarLand, 100 His alliance with Baber, 100 Retains Samarkand, Bolhara, and the neighbouring districts, 105 Kept in restraint by his Terkhan nobles, 128 Calls in Sheibani, 140 Is put to death 141
- Alı Shir Nuwai (Mir or Amir), a distinguished Turki noble and poet, Si Placed in charge of Herat, 270 Makes peace between Sultan Husein and his son, 271 His determined defence of Herat, 272
- Alım Khan. See Ala ed-dın Lodi
- Alım Khon, of Kalpı, joins the confederacy against Baber, 442 Deserts Baber 469
- Alim Khan, of Tehenger offers to procure the surrender of Biana, 452
- Altamgha (the) of Tumana Khan, 70
- Alur or Alwer, capital of Mewat, huilt and fortified by Hasan Khan 475
- Amranı (Amır), brother of the Khankar, slaın 399
- Andejan district and fort of capital of Taken by Isanbugha Ferghana, SO Khan 48 Baher acknowledged there, Besieged hy Jehangir, 109 86 Its Besieged by the surrender, 110 "elder" and "younger" Lhans, 174 Siege abandoned, 175 Invaded hv Sheibani, 187 And taken, 189 Bestowed oo Jani Beg, 189 S09 The Uzbeks driven out, SII Given to Sultan Said Khan, $12. Besieged by AbabeLer, S17 Threatened by the Uzbeks, SSO
- Andekhud, taken hv Sheibánı, 258 Angora, battle of, 68
- Ansaris ( the), o race descended from, govern Sind 358
- Anwar or Alwer, son of Baher, dies, 512 525

- Architecture, Báber s fondness for, 520 His excavotions ot Biserlureh, 520, note
- Arghuns (the) derive descent from o son of Chengis, 262 See Zulnun, Shah Shuján, Muhammed Mokim, Shah Hasan.
- Arghun Khan, 25
- Arkhian, fortress of, Tombol retires to it 125
- Artillery used hy Baber, at Panipat, 436., al Kanwa, 470, at Kanáuj 486
- Asfendek, castle of, Báber s residence there, 146
- Asfera, range of hills separating Ferghann from Karatigin, 79
- Asfera district of Ferghána, 80 Fort of suprised by Ibráhim Saru, and retaken hy Baber, 92
- Askeri Mirzi, son of Báber, 525 His command in the East, 494, 495 Joins Baber in Bengal 508-505
- Asteribád, taken hv the Uzbeks, 459 Abandoned and retaken, 489 Committed to Reoish Behader 489
- Astrakhan, the Khanship of, formed 27
- Astronomical tables of Ulugh Beg Mirza 72 105
- Attol, Boher crosses the Indus obove, 413
- Avicenna of the West, 83, note.
- Avub Begchik (Mir), conspires against Baber, 327
- Azerbáijan cooquered by Shah Ismáel, of Persin, 6
- Azım Hınmáyun Sırwánı hesieges Gwaliar, 409 Joins Jilál Khan, 409 Deserts him, 409 Meaning of his name, 450, no²e.
- Baba Ahmed, son of Mír Fázıl, sent to oppose the Baluches, 3S2 Defeats them, S84 Is slain, SS4
- Bába Bishagheri (Mulla) 247 Defends the fort of Kabul, 250 Joins the rebellion against Baber, 835 Deserts Humayun 458 Invades Babers northern dorainions, 458
- Baba Seirami, his pursuit of Baher, 178
- Baba Sheikh his desertion to the Uzbeks, 45% Invades Baber's northern dominions, 45% Slain by Mir Hameh, 459
- Baha Sultan grandson of the vounger Khan, with Baber at Káhul, 256
- Baban Jilwani (Malek) joins Alim Khan, 425 Seeks shelter in the Doab, 427 Joins Baber, 432 Withdraws from him, 447 Besieges Samhbal, 447 Routed, 448 Occupies

Laknáu, 477 Abandons 11, 477 Is joined by Sheikh Bayezíd, 485 Driven to Bandelkand, 506

Baber, Zehir-ed-din Muhammed, son of Umersheikh Mirza, his birth and parentage, 78 Interpretation of his name, 79, note His father's death, His accession, 86 His territory 85 invaded by his nucle Sultan Ahmed, 87 Andepen threatened, 87 Failuro of the expedition, 68 Pacification, 89 Invasion of Sultan Mahmúd, 89 And of Ababeker, 90 His cnemies expelled, 91 Hasan Yakub, his protector, conspires against him, 91 Baber recovers the fort of Asfern, 92 Visits Sultan And Khojend, 93 Malimud, 93 Plunders the Jagrak tribe, 93 Invades Uratippa, 94 Aceepts the services of the Uzbek and Moghul chiefs, 95 Determines to attack Symarkand, 99 His alliance with Sultan Ali Mirza, 100 Iheir interview in the river Kohik 100 Descried by his Uzbeks, 100 Blockades Samarkand, 101 Operations of the siege, 102 He huts his army, 103 Marches out to face Sheibáni, 103 Occupies Samarkand, 105 Discontent of his troops, 106 Their desertion 107 His bother Juhangir elums from him Andejan and Akhsi, Ilis illness at Samarkand, 110 107 He abundons Samarkand, 110 1hs expedition to Andepin, 110 Jts failure 110 Ilis distress, 111 Ap plies for succour to his uncle Sultan Mahmud 111 Who fails him, 112 Proceeds to Khopend, 112 H19 UR succesful attempt to regain Samarkand, 113 He visits Sultan Mahmud, Captures the fort of Nasukh, 113 and returns to Kho, end, 113 110moves to Bish's, her, 114 Driven out by Sultan Ah 114 Goes to the Itak., 111 This interview with Khwija Abul Makaram, 114 In vited to Marghinan, 115 11is entry into the city 116 Besieged by Je-hangers party 116 Recovers Andepin 119 Takes Akhsi 118 His imprudence 119 Revolt of the Mo_huls 1.0 They defeat his ariny under Kisim Beg 120 His defence of Anderia 121 Marches to Usly, 121 Joined by Sultan Ahmed he r val 122 D feats Fambol at Khuban 1_3 Winter campaign at Suárasi 123 Returns to Andeján, 123 This campaign of Kasan, 124 Ile ninkes peace with Julingir and Tum

bol. 126 Returns to Andeján, 126. Kept in restraint by his minister Alt Dost Taghai, 127 Marries Aisha Sultan Begum, 128 Engages the services of Muhammed Mazid Ter-Lhán, 129 Marches against Samar-Encamps at Yuret khan, kand, 129 Intrigues with Khwaja Yahia, 131 132 Tails in his attempt to seize the eity, 132 Flies towards Kesh on Sheibáni s approach, 141 Crosses the hills with difficulty to Kan, 143 Approaches Samarkand, 144 Fails to surprise Robát Khwája, 144 Joined by Kamber Ah, 144 Fails in his attempt to surprise Samarkand, 145 His state of mind, 146 Succeeds in Receives the a second attempt, 147 submission of the surrounding provinces, 149 His difficulties, 150 Engages Sheibáni on the Koliik, 151 Is defeated, 152 Defends Samarkand, 153 Capitulates, after a siege of five months, 157 His account of his flight from Samarkand, 158 Proeeeds to Uratippa, 159 His residence at Dikhat, 160 Comparison between him and Henri Quatre, 162 Sends presents to Jehángir and Tambol, 162 Sends His grief on the death of Nevian Go-Lultash, 163 His residence at Masikhi, 164 His verses cut on the rock at Ab-burden, 164 Visited by the poet Múlla Hajári, 164 Visits his uncle at Taslikend, 165 Com-poses his first ode, 166 His life at Lushkend, 166 Schemes for the future, 167 Meets his uncle " tho younger Khan," 168 Surprises and takes Ush, 171 Advances to Andejan, 171 Is surprised by Tambol, 172 Ilis wound, and narrow e cape, 172 He joins the Khans, 179 Ĩз received into Akhsi, 174 Driven from Akhsi, 177 His flight, 177 He is overtaken, 179 Escapes, and joins the Khans, 183 His flight on their defeat, 181 Ilo wanders as a fugitive in Audeján, 189 Scis out for Khorasán, 190 Enters the Hissár territory, 194 His motley band of attendants, 195 11e crosses the Amu, 202 Is joined by Báki Cheghániáni, 202 And by many of Khosrou's dependents, 203 907 Receives Khosrou's submission, 208 Sets out for K4bul, 211 First sees the star Soheil (Canopus), 211 Ronts and takes prisoner Shirkch Arghún, 211 1s joined by other tribes, whom he reduces to order, 212 Encamps near

Kabul, 213 Joined by his family, 213 Besieges Kabul 214 Its surrender, 216 IIIs repression of pillage, 217 Becomes King of Kabul and Ghazni 217 His account of Kabul, 217 Rewards his followers, 222 Submission of Abdal Rizak, 223 Babers expedition to the Indus, 223 Arrives at Jelalabad 228 IIIs surprise at the climate and appearance of the country, 223 Takes a plunduring circuit, and returns to Kabul, 224 Bakis plot against him 225 Invades Kandahar 229 Takes Kelat, but abandons it 229 Baki s intrigues and resignation, 250 Peace in Kabul 233 Baber receives Muhammed Husein Doghlat, 237 Invited by Sultan Husein, 288 Sets out from Kabul, 239 Henrs of the death of Sultan Hu.cio. 239 Defiats a body of Uzheks at Sif, 239 Ackoonledged by the Aimáks, 239 Waited on by Jchangir 240 Reaches the Murghab 240 Royally entertained in Khorasan 240 Visits Herat, 242 Returns to Kabul, 248 Reaches the Zirin Pass 244 Danger from the severity of the cold 215 Reaches Like-Auling, 246 Passes Bamiao Pluoders the Turkoman Ha 216 zaras 246 Muhammed Husein Mirza placed in charge of Kabul, during his nbsence 247 Report spread of Baber's imprisooment in Khorasin 248 Rebellioo of Shah Begum and Muhammed Husein _49 Baber hastens towards Kabul, 250 Communicates with the garrisoo 250 Surprises and disperses the rebels, 252 His clemeney 252 His reflections on the conduct of the rebels, 254-257 Tal cs from his chiefs a bond of allegrance and fidelity 258 Invited hy Zulnun s sons 276 Marches to Kandahar. 276 Levies a contribution from an Indian caravan, 277 His aversion to plunder 277 Defeats the Arghuns at the battle of Kandahar, 278 Takes the city 278 Divides the rich spoil among his followers, 278 Bestows Kandahar on Nasir Uirza, Alarmed at the power of Shei-279 bani, 279 Leaves Kábul and marches for India, 280 Proceeds hy Khurd-Kabul and Jagdalik, 280 Defcats the Afghan robbers, 281 Halts before Aduapur (now Jelalábad) 281 Re-Halts before turos to Kabul, 282 Assumes the title of " Padshah 282 Conspiracy of his Moghu's, 283 His valour, 285

אר. אא 4

Quells the revolt, 286 His reception of Hnuler Mirza, 291 His amiable character described by Haider Mirza, nnd by Sultao Said, 294 Receives intelligence of the battle of Merv, 306 Anecdote of his kindness to Haider Mirza, 506, note Marches to Kunduz, 306 Receives an embassy from Shal Ismael, of Persia, 308 Sends an em bassy to the Shah, S09 Treachery of Baber's Moghuls, SII His con vention with Shah Ismael, 312. Invades Hissar, $12 Retreats before Totally defeats the the Lzbeks, $12 Joined by Persian Takes Bokhara and Lzbeks, S14 nuxiliaries, 315 Received trium-Samarkand, 315 phally at Samarkand, 316 Proclaimed Kiog S16 Dismisses hus Persian auxiliaries, 316 Recovers Máwcranoaher, 318 Extent of his dominions, 319 Adopts the Persian dress and cap 319 Offinds the Sunnis of Mawerannaher, S20 Decline of his popularity, 321 Iovaded by the Lzbeks, $22 Defeated by them at Kul malek $22 Abaodons Samar-Defoods H1 sár 32S Land, 3_2 Jonaed by Amir Num Sana mioister of Shah Ismael, S28 Takes Khozar. Sacks Karshi, S24 $24 Totally defeated by the Uzbeks at Ghazhdewan, 325 Flies to Hissar, 325 Attacked by bis rebel Moghuls, S27 Escapes with difficulty into the fort of Hissar 327 Retircs to Kunduz. $25 Returns to Kabul $29 Abaadons all nope of regaining his native country $32 Quells a rebellion of the Moghuls, 335 Subdues the hill tribes, S36 Takes Bajour 337 Puts the male inhabitants to the sword 337 Bestows the government on Khwaja Kilan, 398 Plunders Penjkora, 358 Marries a daughter of Malek «bah Mansúr, 398 His convention with the Yusef-zais, SSS His forays into the country around Kabul 339 note Appoints his son Humayun to Badakhshan S41 His projected invasions of Kandahar and Hindustan 341 Plans the conquest of Kandahar, S52. Attacked with illness on the march 352 Makes peace, 353 Returns to Kahul, S58 Kindly receives Shah Hasao Arghun, 854 Invades the Penjab, 354 Besieges Kandahar, 355 Surrender of the country to him, S55 Occupies Extent of his do-Multao, 398 minions at the period of his iovasion

- Beha-cd-din (Sheikh) of Multán, medintes a treaty with Shah Hasan, 391
- Beliar, under the Ghúri dynasty, 404 Conquered by Sekander Lodi, 406 Revolt against Sultan Ibrahim, 412 Under Sultan Muhammed Sbah, 443 Under the Lohánis, 496 Under Sultan Mahmud Lodi 497 Three competiturs for the throne, 498 Oceupled by Biber, 500 The govern ment bestowed on Muhainmed Zemán Mirzh, 500
- Behar Khan Lodi sent with an army ngunst Doulat Khan, 418 Defeated by Baber, 418
- Beliar Khan Iohani, son of Derm Khan, made king under the style of Sultan Muhammed Shah, 412 443 His death, 496
- Behlul I odi, raised to the throne of Delhi, 405 His possessions and eonquests, 405
- Behlulpur, its commanding situation, 428
- Benares, necupied by Shir Khan, 498 Ahandoned, 199
- Bengal under the Ghuri dynasty, 404 Under Nastet Slinh, 411 History of its affairs 501 Its army defeated by Baber, 505 Prace concluded, 505
- Lerenduk Khan, son of Gerai Khan, Khin of the Kaizik Uzluks, °3 77 Ix-Attacked by Sheihim 296 p lled by Kisim Khan, 331
- Hishkent invided by Sheibini 163
- Bes il har in, fortre s of 125 Pince of, 126
- Idacker I ft 14 elbirge of Soltin Mir hammed Khan Knkiltash 366 Made his expital by Shuh Beg 371 Improved and fortified by Shith Hisan, 181
- Bhirn, n cunied by baber, 111 Faken from him 115
- Bona under the rule of Daud Khan Lodi, 105 Its surrender to Bab r. 152
- Bikermaj ti son nf. Rinn Sángh n pires to his fither's throne 185 Dulivers Pontambor to Baller 488 Sunds to him the erown and girdle of Sultan Mahmud Khilji 189
- Likermájit, rajah nf Gwaliur, slain at Panipat 1 8 His fimily pres nt a mamond of immense value to Hum ivun, 139 Let a Moulann) a poet
- lain nt the 1 k of Kar hi "21
- Liren I han Faramanlu the Persian comman¹ r at Balkli, sends troops to

Defeated at Ghażlı-Baber, S23 dewan, S25

- Bishágher, occupied by Báber, 114
- Bish-bahgh, Congatái's hend-quarters,
- Bist taken by Sultan Husein, 200 270
- Blinding by the fire peneil, 99
- Blood, the Muhammedan law of, 209
- Bloody Tow r (the) of Bheler, so called from the murder of the Dha recha chiefs 375
- Bokhára, taken by Sultan Alı Mírza, 105 Taken by Sheibani, 138 Under Obeidulla Saltan, 309 Taken by Baber, S15
- Bosnin, overrun by the Moghuls, 13 26
- Bostam, battle of, 489
- Brahminical religion, prevalent in India, 402
- Bridge, Biber's, over the Ganges, 486
- Buddbist religion (the), prevalent in India during the Hindu period, 402
- Bulgaria, conquered by the Moghuls, 13
- Burga Sultan, seizes part of the Uzbek dominions on Abulkhairs death, 30 Surprised and slain by Sheibani, 136
- Burhan ed-din Ali (Sheikli), a writer on Muhammedan law, 83 note
- Burhnn ed-din Kihij (Sheikh), a sunt of renown, 86
- the Bloody Tower of burg-Khúm Bhcker 373
- Burnes Sir A, his notice of the Hazaris 221, note IIIs " Frayels, 222, note His description of Babers tomb at Kabul, 517

Carpini, nn the word Tartar, 531

- Chighatai (or Jaghatai), a race of Lurks, founded the Moghul empire 14 I ho principal tribes of Chaghatar Moghuls, 36 Division of the khanship into Moghulistin and Mivrerannaher, 37 66
- Chagbatai Khan (son of Chengiz Khan), lus do nininns, 21-35
- Chanderbhan Chohan (Rai) shan at the battle of Kanwa, 473
- Chunderi, nbtained by Sultan Schander Lodi, 406 Originally under the Sultans of Malwa, 479 falen by Rana Singa, and given to Mediui Starined by Baber, 482 Rao, 160 -Left in charge of Ahmed Shah, 131
- Chandwir, taken by the Afghan, 169 Retal on by Baber, 476
- Churbagh, pilace of, at Agra, Baber dies there, 517

- Cheghán serái, a district of Laghmán, 219
- Chehár-bagh, palace of, at Káhul, 253
- Cheitúr (now Udipur), under Rána Sanga, 460
- Chengiz Khan, chief of the Moghuls, 12 His conquests, 12 Those of his descendants, 13 Dissolution of their empire, 14 Religion of Chengiz, 18 His plan of government, 19 His descent, 23 Divides his empire among his sons, 24 Composition of his army, 584
- Chichektu plundered, 242
- China, conquered by the Manchús, 11 Assigued to Tuli, son of Chengiz, 24
- Chio-Taimur Sultan, son of the 'younger' Khan, with Báher at Kábul, 256 Defeats Daúd Khan, 443 His com mand at the battle of Kanwa, 470 Defeats the confederate Afghans on the Ganges, 487 Sent against the Balúches, 495
- Chiragh kush, seet of, their tenets, 287, note
- Chirr, the battle of the, 68
- Commentaries (the) of Baber, 522
- Contaish, origin of the term, 30, note
- Cornish, eeremony of, 169
- Cossaeks, Don See Kaizáks.
- Customs duties, those in Báber s time, 530
- Dabúsi, fort of, taken by Sheibáni Khan, 150
- Dalmatia, overrun by the Moghuls, 18 26
- Daud Khan Lodi, governs Biána, 405 Defeated by Chín Taimur Sultan, 433
- Dehr, a tribe of Baluches, their contests with Shali Hasan, 382 384
- Dek hat, the district of, assigned to Báber, 160 Described, 160
- Delhi, conquered by Eibák, 403 Under the Khiljis, 404 Under the Togh-Iaks, 404 The Syeds, 404 Under Behlul Lodi, 405 Under Sekander Lodi, 406 Great extent of the cmpire, 406 Under Ibráhím Lodi, 407 Conquered by Báber, 437 State of the kingdom wheo conquered, 441
- Dera Khan (probably Deria Khao), marches against Shah Beg 364 Is defeated and put to death, 365
- Deria Khan, muuster of Sind, his retirement, 360 Joins Jam Firoz, 361 Replaces him on the throne, 362
- Deria Khan Lodi, ruler of Sambhal, 405

- Derio Khan Loháni, governor of Behár, 408 Elected king, 412 His death, 412
- Derwish Muhammed Terkhán, rehels against Bayesanghar, 97 Is put to death, 99
- Desht of Jitteh, 41, note
- Desht Kipchák See Kipchák
- Dharíchas (the), their revolt in Bheker, 871 Their chiefs put to death, 872, 878
- Dhulpur, taken by Báber, 448 455
- Diamond, of immense value, 498
- Dibalpur, under Beblúl Lodi, 405 Stormed by Báher, 418 Given to Alá ed din, 420
- Dıg Gházı, large cannon of Báber's, 486
- Diláwer Khan, son of Doulat Khan, joins Baber, 418 Informs bim of his father's treachery, 419 Appointed to Sultánpur, 420 Honored with the title of "Khao Khánán, Seized and imprisoned by his 420 father, 421 Escapes, and joins the Afghan confederacy against Baher, Marches with them to Delhi, 425 425 Separates from them, and joins Báber, 480
- Dilázáks (the), expelled from Swád by the Yusef-záis, 337 Guide Baber in his expedition to Bajour, 337
- Dildár Agliácha Begum, mother of Hindal Mírza, 526, note
- Diráwel, hesieged and taken hy Shah Hasan, 391, 392
- Diwan, or collection of odes, in Turki, by Báher, 521
- Dizak, massaure of Mogbul chiefs in the castle of, 45
- Donh, under the rule of Sultan Sekander, 406
- Doghlat, a tribe of Chagatai Moghuls, S6
- D Ohsson's "Histoire des Mongols, reference to, 14
- Dost Mubammed Khan, of Moghulistán, succeeds his father Isanbugha, 53 His death, 59
- Doulat Khan governor of Labur, rehels against Sultan Ibráhím, 412. 413 Attacked by Bchar Khan 418 Solicits the aid of Baber, 418 Fhee from Lahur, 418 Joins Baber, 418 Fhes Receives the districts of Jalinder and Sultánpur, 419 Imprisooed by Báber, 419 Has Sultánpur as his jágir, 419 Flies to the hills, 419 Invades the Penjáb, 421 Imprisons his son Diláwer Khao, 421 Seizes Sultanpur, 421 Defeats Alá ed din, 421 Arranges his differences with Ala ed

din, and joins him, 424 Acknowledges hun as his sovereign, 424 Collects an army to recover Labur, 428 Besieged in Milwat, 429 Surrenders to Biber, 429 Dies, 480

- Doulat Kitta, arranges the flight of Mah chuchak, 349
- Dudu mother of Sultan Jılal-ed din of Behár 497
- Durmish Khan Shamlu, besieged by the Uzbeks in Herát, 457 Dies, 457
- Earthquake, violent at Kabul, 229
- Egypt, added to the Ottoman empire, 5
- Libak (Sultan), succeeds Muhammed Ghúri in Hindustán, 403
- Ekhal Khan, deserts to Shah Hasan, 391
- Ekliti ir ed din, eastle of, Muhammed Momin put to death there, 269
- Elias Khan, taken and flayed alive, 474
- Elias Khwaja Khan, son of Toghlak Taimur, established in Mawerannaher, 40 Succeeds as Khan of Moghulistán, 41
- Elphinstone, the Honorable M, re ference to his "History of India," 2 522 To his "Account of Cabul," 222, note
- Etawa, bestowed in jagir on Alim Khan 423 Besieged by Báber, 448 Faken, 477
- Europe, state of, in the 15th and 16th centuries, 2
- I akhr Ah, left in charge of Badakhshan, hy Humayun, 509
- Farrah, government of, conferred on Zulnun 261 Granted to Badi ezzein in, 371
- Tarsing a measure of length, 121, note
- I atch Khan Sirwáni, prime minister of Jilal Khan 407 Deserts his master, 409 Submits to Biber 450 Honoured with the title of Khan Jelun 450 Joins Sultan Malimúd Lodi 499
- I atchpur, taken by Shah Beg, 317
- Fazil Beg Gokuld'sh (Mir), wounds Ibn Husein Mirza 274 Meets Shih Beg at Shál Mustung 343 Proceeds with Shah Beg to Fatta, 361 De feats the confederated Sindians, 367 Murders the Dbartelia and other chiefs, 72 His denth, 375
- Lordnuss Biber 8 quotation from, 468
- crehting (nov Kokán), description of,
   Divided by the Sirr or Seiliun,
   1 amous as the birthplace of baber, 80 Its districts, 80 Productions and elimate, 80 Inhabitants,

- 80 Language, 81 State of society, ( 82 State of learning, 82 Religious families, 83 Knowledge of the art Inof war, 84 Government, 85 vaded by Sultan Ahmed Mirza, 87 Invaded by the Moghuls, 89 Invaded by Ababeker of Kushghar, 90 Recovered by Baber, 118 The Uzbeks expelled by Syed Muhammed They again enter the Mirza, 310 country, 916
- Fire-peneil, used for blinding, 99
- Fir6z (Jám), of Sind, civil wars during his minority, 353 Established on His misgovernthe throne, 360 ment, 360 Flies from Tatta, 361 His Replaced on the throne, 362 continued misrule, 363 Flies from Tatta, 365 Concludes a treaty with Shah Beg, 366 His continued misconduct, 367 Driven from Tatta by Siláh-ed-din, 368 Recovers his His exultation on Shali throne, 369 Beg s death, 378 Sends a deputation to Shah Hasan, 379 Thes to Kach, 380 Re-enters Sind, 380 Defeated and flies to Giurat, 381 Subsequent attempt to recover his throae, 381, note
- Filuz Kban Sarang kháni, sent against Behár Khan, 443 446 Submits to Báber, 446
- Tirúz koh, fort of, taken by Huláku Khan, 221, note
- Gakers (the), position of their territory, 414 Defeated by Baber, 415
- Gardening, Báber's fondness for, 520
- Gubrek, country of, its situation, 222
- Gerái, Khan of the Kaizák Uzbeks, se eedes from Abulkhair, 29 Sueeceded by his son Berenduk, 33
- Germsir, Zúlnúns influence established there, 264
- Ghazels, or odes, composed by Baber, 166
- Ghazhdewán, battle of, 325 Mirza Sekander's account of it, 326, note
- Gházi, title of, assumed by Báber, 474
- Gliázi Khan, son of Doulat Khan, joins Báber, 418 Imprisoned, 419 Li berated, 419 Flies to the hills, 419 Collects a powerful army, 428 Ilis army breaks up, 428 Ile flies to the mountains, 429
- Ghaznevi dynasty (the), in Judia, 403
- Ghazni, kingdom of, taken liy Sebakte gin, 16 Bestowed on Jehángir liy Báber, 222 Bestowed on Nasir Mirza, 258 282, Given to Kliwája Kilaa, 445

- Cluás-ed din (Mir), gives up Kanda hir to Hiber 355
- Chur the Lovernment of, conferred on Julium 263
- Ghuri dvinstv (the), in India 103
- Ghuri its surrender to the Uzbeks, 158
- Gibbon, his opinion on the authenticity of the "Institutes of Tumur, 71, nor
- Gogra river, Baber defeats the army of Bengal on the banks 502.
- Cokaldash (or Kokiltash), meaning of the word 90, note
- Gok Seru (or Green Palnee) at Samarkaud description of 98
- Conds (the) take Islah Khan, and deliver him to his brother, 410
- Guahar under the Ghuri dynasty, 401 Submits to Sultan Schauder Lodi, 107 Held by Fatar Khan Sarangkhan, 453 Surrendered to Baber, 154 Blockaded by the Raputs, 160
- Gujrat under Schander Shih, 111
- Gulbadan Beguin, daughter of Baber, 525
- Gulberg Begum, daughter of Khalifa, 985
- Gulchahrch Begum, daughter of Baber, 526
- Gulitin of Sheikh Sidi, quotation from 210
- Gulring Begum, drughter of Baber, 5-6
- Hubble es-Svar (the) historical work, 531
- Hade (Sved) marries Biber's sister, 208 Slain at the battle of Merv, 308
- II (derwish, wind of 163
- Ilaibat, son of lám Silah-ed din, slain in battle 369
- Ilaider Mirza, author of the Tarikh e Resludi, his account of Sheibhni, Value of his history 192, note 137 His account of his fathers conduct 249 And of Babers elemency, 253 His escape from Sheibani, 257 290 IIIs His visit to Khan Mirza, 289 reception by Biber at Kabul 291 Baber s kindness to him, 292 Assists in expelling the Uzbeks from Samar Land, 314 His account of Babers defeat at Kul malek, 323 note. And at Ghazhdewan 325 Sent by Sultan Said into Badakhshan, 510 Iliseharaeter of Baber, 521
- IInjári (Mulla), the poet, his visit to Baber, 164

- Háji Khan, son of Doulat Khan, joins Ala ed din Lodi, 425 Flies with Alá ed din 430
- Η iji Vazir, defeats Jám Firoz, 362
- Hak Názer Chápi, plunders Chichektu 242
- IIaldi Ghat, bittle of, 505
- Hamad (Sheikh), shrine of, 388
- IInmeh (Mir), surrenders to the Uzbek 4, 458 Recuves Baba Sheikb, 458 Attacks and puts hum to death,
   159 Rewarded by Baber, 459
- Hannid Khan advances to assist Sultan Ibrahim, 432 Defeated by Humayun, 432
- HInsan Arghun (Shah), son of Shah Pug flies from his fathers court to Baber, 354 Returns home, 354 Sent by his father to assist Jam Firoz, 368 Defeats Silah ed din, and places Jam Fir6z on the throne, 369 Returns to his father at Bághban 3"0 Succeeds to the throne of Upper Sind, 379 Has the Khutba read in Báber s name, 379 Receives an embassy from Jam Firoz, 379 Marches for Tattn 379 Typells the Jám, 380 Defcats the Jam, and becomes sole master of Sind, 381 Attempts to settle the country, 381 His views on Multán, 384 Visits Siwi, 385 Plunders the Rind and Makst Baluches 385 Mnrries Mah Chuchak Begum 385 Marries Gulberg Be-Marches from Blicker, gum, 385 Takes Sewrai and Mou 388 388 Advances to Uch 389 Defeats the Langas, 389 Takes and destroys Uch, 390 Coocludes a treaty with Huscin Langa, 391 Rebuilds Uch. Takes Dirawel, 392 391 Returns to Bbeker, 392 Invited to Multán, S93 Besieges Multán, 394 Takes it by storm, 395, 396, note, 456 Returns to Bheker, 397 Leaves Khwája Shems ed din governor of Multán, 397 His governor expelled, 398 He resigns Multán to Báber, 398 Defeats the Khankar, 400 Extent of his dominions, 400
- Hasan Khan Leshker makes peace hetween Báber and Bengal, 505
- Hasan Khan Mewátı (Raja) chief of the Sherki confideracy against Báher, 442 451 Declares for Rána Sanga, 463 His force at Lanwa, 471 Slain in the battle, 473
- Hasan Yakub joins Báber and is made master of the household 86 Appointed Protector, 91 His treason, 91 His death, 92

- Hatı Gaker, defeats and slays bis bro ther Tátár, 415 Defeated by Báber, 415 Submits to him, 415
- Hazáras (the), descendants of a Moghul tribe, 14 212 216 220 Sir A Burnes' notice of them, 221, note Reduced to order by Zúlnún Beg, 264 Sheibánis campaign against them, 297
- Hazret Moulána, informs Moulana Muhammed Kázi of Haider Mirza's danger, 290, note
- Henri Quatre, compared in his boyliood with Báber, 162
- Herát, the capital of Khorásán, its magnificence, 77 Shah Ismael's residence there, 305 310 Besieged by the Uzheks, 457 Again besieged by Obeid Khan, 489 The siege raised, 490
- Hezéber Alla, "the L10n of God," a title conferred on Zulnún, 275
- Hındal Mırza, son of Báber, 525 Sent by Humáyun to Badakhshan, 510 Besieged in Kíla-zefer, 510 Recalled by Báber, 511
- Hindu Beg, sent to relieve Sambhal, 447 Seizes the fort, 448 His part at the battle of Kanwa, 470 Present at Báber's death-hed, 516
- Hindu (the), period of the government of India, 402
- Hindustan, its revolutions previous to Báber's conquest, 402 Its condition at that time, 442 The people hostile to the invaders, 442
- Hindustáni, origin of the language, 22
- Hissár, or Hissár Shádmán, held hy Sultan Masáúd Mirza, 92 Invaded by Sultan Husein Mirza, 94 197 Defended by Bakı Cheghániáni, 95 Bestowed on Bayesanghar by 198 Khosrou Shah, 142 200 Invaded by Sheibáni, 186 Besieged and taken Taken by Baber, by Sbeibáni, 203 Defended by Báber, 323 S15 Abandoned to the rehel Moghuls, Pestilence in the city, 328 328 The Moghuls expelled hy the Uz beks, 329
- Hissár-Firóza, taken by Humáyun, 432 Bestowed on him in jágir, 432
- Huláku Khan, 221, note
- Humáyun Khákáni, title conferred on Badi ez-zemán, 273
- Humáyun Mírza, son of Báber, ap pointed to Badakhshán, 341 Joins Báber, 427 Defeats Hamid Khan, 432 Takes Hissár-Firóza, 432 Re ceives Hissar-Firóza in jágir, 432 Blockades Agta, 438 Receives a diamond of immense value, 438 His share of Báber's Indian spoil, 440 Sent against the Sherki confederacy, Puts their army to flight, 449 449 Is joined by Fateli Khan, 450 Takes Juánpúr and Kalpı, 450 Is reealled, 451 Commands the right wing at the battle of Kanwa, 470 Receives from his father the treasures of Alwar, 476 Seizes some of the emperor's treasure at Dellu, 476 Returns to Kabul, 476 Receives directions to attempt Balkh and Hissár, 492 / Marches for Samarkand, Leaves Badakhshán, 508 493 Reaches Kábul, 510 Sends Hindal Mirza to Badaklishán, 510 Arrives at Agra, 512 Desire to set Sent to Sambal, him aside, 512 513 His dangerous illness, 519 His recovery, 514 Intrigues against his succession, 514 Acknowledged by Baber on his death bed as his sue cessor, 516

- Hungary overrun by the Moghuls, 13 26
- Husein (Shah Mir), left by Humáyiin in Juánpúr, 450
- Husein Khan Loháni, joins the confederacy ngainst Baber, 442
- deracy ngainst Baber, 442 Husein Khan Shamlu, defends Herát against the Afgháns, 489
- Husein Langa, son of Sultan Kuth ed-dín, sueceeds his father at Multán, 387
- Husein Langa (Sultan), son of Sultan Mahunúd, succeeds his fatber at Multán, 391 Anarehy during his minority, 393 His eapital taken by storm, 395 His death, 396
- Husein Mirza Baikera (Sultan), of Khorasán, conquers Khorásán, 74 H1s power, 77 194 Splendour of his capital, Herát, 77 Invades H155ár, 94 197 Hospitably receives Sultan Masúud, 142 Raises the siege of Hissár, 198 Returns to Khorásán, 198 Revolt of his son Badı ez zemán, 199 268 Invasion of Kandahár, 200 269 Takes Bist. 200 270 Retreats, 200 270 Makes peace with Badi-ez-zemán, 271 Proceeds to Asterabád against another son, 271 Again attacked by Badiez-zemán and Zúlnún, 272 Again makes peace, 273 Sends one of his Fons to invade Sistán, 273 Honourably receives Muhammed Husein Doghlat, 236 Calls in Baher against Sheibáni, 238 H1s death, 239 H13 character, 241

- Husein Shah Sherki (Sultan), driven from Juanpur, 406
- Husein Sufi, his gallant definee of Khwarnzm, 237 His death, 238
- Ibn Husein Mirza, a son of Sultan Husein, invades Sistan, 273 His defat and escape, 274
- Ibrahim Chapul, suizes Sheikh Bayezid, 177
- Ibráhim Jamad (Moulana), at Multan, 396. note
- Ibrahim Lodi (Sultan), succeeds to the throne of Dellu, 407 Consents to the division of the empire 407 Marches against his brother Jilal 409 Puts hum to death, 410 Wishes to humble the Afghán nobles, 410 Their revolt, 411 Quelled, 111 Puts to death some of his Amirs, 411 They revolt in Beliar, 411 His troops defated hy Deria Khan Lobáni, 412 Invades the Peniab 421 Dispersion of his army, 421 Advances against Ala ed din 425 Defcats the Afghans, 426 Advances from Dellis against Baber, 432 Defeated and slain at Panipat, 437 His immense irmy, 439
- Ibrálum Saru, surprises the fort of Asfira, 92 Pardoned by Baher, 93 His mission to Aklisi, 116 His Success 117 Imprisoned by Mir Alı Dost, 127 Joins Baber near Samarkand 132 Slain in battle, 152 Ibrahim Terkhan throws lumself into
- Shiráz, 144 Slain in hattle, 152
- Ilachi Khaa "the Slaughtering Khan" name given to Ahmed Khan, 66
- Haks (the), occupied hy Baber, 114
- Imam the Seventh, the descent of Shah Ismael from, 293
- Imám Reza, shriae of, at Meshli d, 300 Visited by Shah Ismael, 301 note
- India, division of its history ioto three Its condition at the time periods, I of Babers 10vasion, 21 Reference to Vasco de Gamas passage to, 113 Báber s first expedition into, 223 Its early history, 402 Hindu period, 402 First Musulman period 402 Dynasty of Ghazni, 403 Of Ghur, The Togh-403 The Khiljis, 404 laks, 404 Invasioo of Taimur, 404 The Lodis, 405 The Syeds, 404 Divided state of India, 405 Conquests of Sultan Behlul Lodi, 405 Sultan Schander Lodi, 406 He extends the limits of the empire, 407 Ihráhím Lodi, 407 Intended di vision of the empire, 407 Báher called in, 412 His first invasion, 413 His second invasion, 416 His third His fourth invasioo, invasion, 416 His fifth invasion, 427 418 Conquered by Baber at Panipat, 437 State of the country at the time, 441

- Institutes of Taimur, question of their nuthenticity, 70, note
- Iral the calamity of, 53 74
- Irazan Beg, of the Khiras Moghuls, leads 30,000 families to Samarkaod, ' The calamity 44 Their fate, 45 of Irazan," 45
- Iron Gate, pass of the, 204 Isa Khan Turk, rules in the Doáh, 405 Isa Terkhán (Mirza), married to Mah-
- chuchal, 352
- Isakhail tribes, plundered by Baber. 339
- Isanbugha Khan, called from Máweran nalier to be Grand Khan of the Moghuls 37, 38 His wife Sátelmish
- Khắtún, 39 Isonbugha Khan son of Weis Khin, Khan of the Moghuls, succeeds his father as Khan of Moghulistan, 44 Expels his elder brother, Yúnis Khan, Assassinates Taimur Oighur, 46 44 Abandoned by his tribes 46 Received by Mir Syed Ali of Káshghar, 46 His contrition, 46 Re-establishes himself in Moghuli tan 47 Invades Táshkend, 47 Is defcated by Abusaid, 47 Besieges and takes Reheves Káshghar Andeján, 48 and defeats Yúnis Khan, 51 Hie death. 52
- Isan-Taimur Sultan, son of the younger Khan, with Báber at Kábul. 256
- Ismael Koreishi (Sheikh) of Multan, sent to conciliate Shah Hasan, 393 Retires to Tatta, 393
- Ismael Jilwani, collects troops to oppose Joins the army of the Báber, 419 Afgháns against Delhi, 425 Seeks shelter in the Doab, 427
- Ismáel Sefvi (Shah), King of Persia, founder of the Sefvi dynasty, 6 Sketch of his ancestry, 297 His embassy to Sheihani, 298 Sheibanis answer 299 His reply, 299 Marches to Meshhid and Merv, 301 Defeats Sheibánı at the battle of Merv, 303 Massacres the garrisoo and inhabitants of Merv 305 Winters at Herat, 305 Sends an embassy to Báber, 308 Invades Máwerannaher, 309 Males peace with the Uzheks, and returns to Herát, 310 His conventioo with Báber, 312 Assists Báber against the Uzheks, 315 His higotry as a

Shia, 320 His cruel persecution of the Sunnis in Khnrásán 305 321 327 Sends Amir Nijin Sini with anariny to assist lláber, 329 Returns to Khorasán, 326 Recuves thu rub mission of Shah Ileg, 311 Imprisons him in the fort of Zefer, 315 Ilis war with the Ottom in Sultan, Selim, 352 Ilis death, 457

- Jadeh, a Maelu, lus proceeduige in Multán, 395
- Jagdálik, hill pass of, 281
- Jagirdár, application of the term, 529
- Jagraks (the), plundered by Biber, 93
- Jalinder, assigned to Doulat Khan, 119 Jám, hattle of, 491
- Jan Muliammed Atkeli, assists in the bittle against the Uzbeks, 311
- Jan Vafa Mirza, left by Sheibani at Herát, 300 Abandons Herat, 301 Defeated by the Persians, 301
- Jani Beg Klian, of the Kaizák Uzhcks, seceiles from Abulkliair, 29 Ilis son Kásim Beg Klian, 53
- Jam Beg Sultan, his birth, 136 Appointed by Sheibani to the government of Andejin, 189 Shaighters the Moghuls, 311 Invades I erghana 317 His part in the battle of Jum, 492
- Januka (Mir), Sheibaais conversation with, 235
- Jats (the), a question as to their origin, 42, note Their predatory incursions, 383
- Jaxartes (thc), its course, 79
- Jehan (Shah), his mosque at Kabul, 518
- Jehangir Mirza, a younger brother of Claims Andejan and Baber, 89 Akhsi, 107 Besieges Andejan, 109 Takes the city, 110 Invests Baber in Marghinán, 116 Joins Tambol, 117 Retires with him to Urkend, 118 Defeated by Baber, 123 Escapes to Urkend, 123 Makes peace with Baber, 126 Escapes from Jam bol and joins Báber, 175 Present at Akhsi, 176 Appointed to the government of Ghuzni, 222 Reveals the plot of Baki, 225 Thes from Thes on the Kábul to Bamián 251 approach of Baber, 239 Waits on Baber at Pai, 240 His excessive indulgence in wine, and consequent illness, 251 His death, 258 Hıs family, 258, note
- Jelálabád See Adınapur
- Jemál ed din Khan (Sheikli), governor of lushkend, 51 Takes Yunis Khan prisoner, 54 Slainby Abdal kadus, 55

- Tenjúlich (the), induce Iláber to attack Hati Gaker, 41"
- Jezia, nr poll tax, 5"0
- Jilil Klinn son of Alim Flinn steks shelter in the Doub after his fathers defeat, 427
- Julai Khan Lodi, made governor of Juanpur, 407 Makes Latch Khan Sirwani his prime ininister, 107 De clines to return to his brother Sultan Ibrahim, 109 Proclaims hims If king of Juanpur, by the style of Sultan Julai ed an, 409 Attacked by his brathler, 409 Driven from his kingdom, 110 Put to death, 410
- Jilal ed din Lodi (Sultan) See Jilal Khan
- Jili cil-din Loháni (Sultan) succeeds to the throne of Behar 197 Rival empetiturs, 197 Takes refuge in Beugal, 197 Submits to Baker 509 I scapes from the Bengal camp, 500 Joins Baker 505
- Jilal ed din Sherki (Sultan) a claumant of the throne of lichur, 49% Nagnificently entertains Biber, 499
- Juánpur, ennquered by Sultan I chlul, 105 Under Sultan Sekander, 505 Given to Jilal Klian 107 Its coudition at Bibers conquest of India, 441 Rebellion in, 148 Iaku by Humávun, 150
- Juli Khan son of Chengiz has the Desht-Kupehik allotted to hum, 24 Dies before his fither, 21
- Juncid Birlas (Sultan) invites Sultan Mahmud to attack Samarkanil 96 Left by Humiyun in Juanpur, 150 Has the chief direction in the east, 491 Advances towards Kherid, 495 Joins Baber on the Gogra, 503
- Kabadian, occupied by Humayun, 193
- Kabul, state of the Lingdom of at Sultan Abusaid's death, 214 Inctions at court 215 Taken by Muhammed Mokim, 216 271 Surrendered to Baber, 216 274 Fxtent of the kingdom at this period 217 Adjacent tribes, 220 Diversity of inhabitants and languages, 220 222 Clunate and productions, 222 Violent earthquake, 229 Given by Baber in charge of Muhammed Husem Dogh lat, 247 Gallant defence of the fortress against Khan Mirza's party, 250 Baber s return to 251 Famine, 258 276 The government left with Abdal Rizak, 280 Given to Nuzir Mirza, 319 The government reassigned by him to Báber, 334 Báber's account of its delightful elimate, 518 Baber is interred there 517

- Kabul, an ancestor of Chengiz Khan, 70 Kach, pillaged by the Arghuns, 400
- Kaferistan, its position, 221

Kahan, plundered by the Arghuns, 353

- Kaizak-Uzbeks, not identical with the Don or other Russian Cossaels, 29, note Their origin, 30 S31 They become formidable, 31 Become the ruling power in the Eastern Kipehák, Their quarrel with the Moghuls, 33 64 They defeat the ' elder Khan, Sheibani s unsuccessful 64 C31Dpaign against them, 296 The ravages in the Desht Kipchak, 331 Their Kajuli, an ancestor of Taimur, 70
- Kalendar, name given to Baber from his liberality to holy men, 440
- Kahmáks, or Kalmuks (the), their invasion of the country of the Uzbeks, Their position to the south-90 note east of the Moghuls, 36 They defeat Yunis Khan, SI 54 Return to their Defeated by the own country 55 " vounger " Aban 66 Kaliun, fort of Sce Ni
- Sce Nirelitu
- Kalmuks. See Kalimáks
- Kalpi plundered, 410 Taken by Hu m iyun, 451
- Komher Mi, leaves Bibers camp at Suárasi, 129 Makes peace between Baber and Jehángir 125 Proceeds to defend Iar Ailak, 144 Thes from the battle on the Kohik, 153 ۱c companies Baber from Samarkand, 158 Conspires against Tiunbol, 165 Proposes terms of place un the part of lumbal 176 Sent away from Baber's camp 210
- Kamber Ah Kochin (Amir), son of Kasım Beg, quells a rebellion against Baber, 335 Attends Báber s deathbed, 516
- Kamber-Bi, of Merv, appointed by Sheibani, gavernar of Kunduz. 226 Attacks Badakhshán, 226 Is beaten back, 226 Besieged in Kunduz by Khosrou Shah, 227 Whom he de feats and puts to death, 228 Advises Sheibáni to delay the battle at Merv, 304

Kampila, under Raja Pertab Sing, 405

- Kámran Mirza, san of Baber, 525 Left in charge of Kábul and Kandahár, 427
- Kamreddin brother of Yúlaji, claims the office of Ulús begi 40 Assassinates Elías Khwaja Khan 41 Usurps the throne of the Moghuls, 41 Defeated and expelled by Mir Taimur, 42 His death, 42

- Kámrud, Báber passes through the valley of the. 145
- Kanáuj abandoned by Báber's troops to the Afghans, 469 477 The government given to Muhammed Sultan Mirza, 477 Evacuated by Bábers troops, 485
- Kánbái, battle of, 96
- Kandahár, under the government of Zulnún Beg 215 220 266 Invaded by Báber, 229 Its affairs on Zúlnuns death, 261 Its unhealthy ehmate, 266 Nature of the country, Invaded by Sultan Husein, 268 Taken by Báber, 278 269 Bestowed on Masir Mirza, 279 Be sieged and taken by Sheibáni, 279 281 Restored to the Arghúns, 282 Invaded by Baber, 352 He accepts terms of peace with Shah Beg and retires.353 Again invaded by Báber, He besieges the town, 355 354 The tower and Lingdom surrendered to Báber, °55
- Kandar, fort of, taken by Rana Sanga, 448
- Kanwa battle of, 470-473
- Kar Kitin besieges Balkh, 458
- Karaeliar-Nevian, or Nujan minister of Chengiz, S7 And of Chøgatái Khan, 71
- Karakorum the residence of the Grand Khan, 25
- Karakul district of seized by a furce from Merr, 149 Taken by Sheibani, 1.50
- Karshi district of taken possession of by Bakı lerkhán 149 Sacked by Amír Nijm Sám 324
- Kasan, the khanship of, formed, 27
- Kásan district and town of Ferghans, 80 Delivered up to Sultan Mahmúd Khan, 89 Recovered by Baber 118 Besieged by the Khans son, who retreats, 124 Taken by the Uzbeks, 317
- Káshghar, description of, 35 Its in-Overrun hy Taimur, babitants SG Taken by Mir Sycd Ab, 46 41 Besieged by Yunis Khan, 51 Who 15 defeated, 52 Governed by Muhammed Haider Mirza Doghlat, 56 Seized by his nephew Ababeker, 57 58 77 Ababeler expelled 932 The prosperous rule of Said Khan, 332 List of the Amirs of 539
- Kásım (Mır) sent with the expedition against the Baluches, 384

Kásım Beg Khan, Khan of the Kaizáls, son of Jam Beg, extends his power over the Desht, 33 His immense army, 33 Defeats Sheiban 296 Called in hy Kitteh Beg, 931 His great power, 331 Plumlers the country, and withdraws, 331 Visited by Sultan Safil, 332

- Kasun Beg Koelun, Bibers prime His mission to Jush minister, 112 kend, 112 Sent to ruse Lorghann 116 Defeated by the Moghuls, 120 Dismissed by Mir Ah Dost 127 Detached to surprise Robat-Khwaja, Tails 111 His successful sally 111 from Samarkand, 156 Accompanies Baber in his flight, 158 Proceeds to H155år, 165 Accompanies Balier from Khorasan to Kabul, 213 Ibs sagacity, 279-311
- Kásim Gokultásli, niarricil to Mahchuchak, 318 Manner of his deith, 351
- Kásun Husem Sultan, lus position at the battle of Kanwa, 170
- Kásım Sambhalı, lışsıcgul by Balun Jılwánı, 447 Relieved lış Hindu Beg, 447 Deprived of the fort of Sambhal, 448
- Kattór, county of, its situation, 222
- Kaurchik, Grand Khan of Kipchak, 27
- Kázán Khan, of Persia, 25
- Kázán Sultan Ahan, Ahan of Muwerannaher, hus energetic reigh, 67 Is slain in battle, 67 540
- Kázi (Khwája) See Khwája Moulána Kázi
- Kázi Káz, intercedes with Shah Beg to stop the pillage of Fatta, 365 Sent by Shah Beg as an envoy to the con federated Sindis, 367 Becomes an councellor of Shah Beg 369 Advises the slaughter of the Dharicha and other chiefs, 379 Betrys Jam Firóz, 379
- Kepck Sultan Ughlan, son of Dost Muhammed Khan, 53 His murder, 53
- Kesel bash, the Persians so named, origin of the name, 320
- Keshtud, destroyed and depopulated by the Uzbeks, 144
- Khadija Begum 251
- Khaiber-pass, Báber's passage through, 224
- Khákán, title of the Grand Khans, 25
- Khakán (the) See Husem Mirza Bukera
- Khákán e Mansur, title of, 283, note
- Khalifa Sec Nizam cd-din
- Khalifs of Bagdad, their Turki mercenarics, 15

- Klinlil brother of Tambol, taken prisoner, 192 Scizes Ush, 130 Slain in battle 152
- Klishl Khim son of the "younger Klish, his war again t his uncle Mahmful 191
- Khamsch Sultan, Icares Babers ervice for Shedom's 145 Defeats Khoston Shah at Kumluz 2.7 Marcher again t Paber 107 (109 Occupies Phil Smain (12) Def ated by Laber, 914 His death (15)
- Khans Graml, of Mogliuliston, their fill 25
- klian Julian title of 150 rete. Conferred upon Latch Klian 150
- Islian Islian Pandeli attempts to drive the Musulmans from Guahar 157
- Khan Johan Lodi, his advice to Sultan Ibrahim 107
- Khan Khiman title of (120-15) unter Conferral upon Dilawer Khim (120-
- Khan Mirza. See Weis Mirza.
- Klaund (Mir), author of the Rozet es-Sefa, 531
- Khunkar (the), defeated by Shah Hasan, 399
- Khanzadeh Begum Baher syster, marries Sheiban 157 Disorceil and married to Sycil Hade, 305 Sent to Ilaber by Shah Ismael 305 Resules at Kabul, 305
- Kherid, the army of, that of Bengal so called 502
- Kiniji dynasta (the) an India 404
- Klinras, n tribe of Chaghatin Moghuls, 36
- Khirihi Afgháns (the), plundered by Baber 339, note
- Kluzer Kliwaja, Klian of Moghulistan, 12–13 notes
- Khizer khail Afghans (the) plundered by Biber, 359 note
- Khodaidud (Amir), son of Yulaji, nomi natid Ulus begi 40 Raises Khizer Khwâja to the Khanslup 12 Retains the government as Ulus-begi 43 Calls iu Ulugh Beg Mirza against Weis Khan, 41
- Khojend district of Ferghana, 80 Inken by Sultan Ahmed, 87 Recovereil by Baber, 98
- Kholaset al-Akhbar (the), 531
- Khornsan, conquered by Shah Ismael of Persia, 6 Ravnged by Chengiz Khun, 12 Conquered by Jamur, 17 Conquered by Sultan Husen Murr 71 77 Its affurs on his death, 210 Iwo joint lings appointed 210 Splendour of its expital Herat, 211 Sheibani 5 invasion and conquest, 258 – 260 Invaded by Badi-ez-zemán, 271 Overrun by Shah Ismael, S01 Ravaged by the Uzbeks, S26 Invaded by the Uzbeks under Obeid Khan, 456 489 Relieved by the Persians, 490

Khosrou Gokuldash, appointed by Báber to Sialkot, 420 His part at the battle of Kanwa, 470.

Khosrou Shah, minister of Samarkand

- 92 196 Sent to Sultan Masaud at Hissar, 92 Defends Kunduz against Badı-ez-zemán 96 198 Makes himself independent at Kunduz, 104–197 Receives Bavesanghar, 104 His carly life, 196 Hospitably receives Badiez zemán, 199 Seizes Hissar, 142 290 Blinds Sultan Masaúd, 142 201 Makes Bavesangbar king of Hissar, 142 201 Causes him to be strangled. 142 202. His power and character 202 He quits Kunduz on the ap proach of Mahmúd Sultan, 204 Submits to Baber, 208 Is deserted Sets out for by his followers, 203 Khorásán, 208 Returns to hahmerd. 214 226 Proceeds to Herat, 226 Attempts to regain Kuoduz, 226 Attaches himself to Nasir Mirza, who shakes lum off 227 Besieges Lunduz, 227 Is taken prisooer and beheaded, 22S
- Khozar district of, taken by Báki Terkhan 149 Faken by Baber and the Persians, S24
- Khozars (the), plains of added to the dominions of Chengiz Khao, 1S
- Khuban, battle of 123
- Khurram, son of Sheibáni Khan, 158, note
- Khutba (the) uncertainty in whose name it was read in Mawerannaher, 321, note
- Khutlán, government of bestowed on Walı 200
- Khwajika Khwaja, protects Bavesanghar, 95 His rivalry with his brother Khwája Yahía, 131
- Kliwararm, ravaged by Chengiz Klian 12 Conquered by Faimur 17 Beneged by Sheibáni, 257 Gallauliv defended by Husein Sufi 257 Faken hy Sheibani, 235 Ceded by the Lzbeks to Shah Ismael, 510

Kıla Bakı plundered by Jehangır, 282

- Kila-nur assigned by Baber to Muhammed Ali Tajik, 400
- Kila zefer castle of, origin of its nume, 280 note Made the capital of Badakhshan, 289 The environs laid waste by Sultan Said, 510.

- Kilan (Amír Lhwája) made governor of Bajour, SSS Joins Baber, 427 Sketch of bis life and character, 444 Made governor of Ghazni, 445 Bábers letter to him, 493
- Kilat, fort of, taken and abaodoned by Báber, 229
- Kipchák (Deslit), assigned to Júji Ishan, 24, 25 Its extent, 24 The Musulman faith introduced there 26 Civil wars and anarchy, 27 Tamurs mvasion 27 The Grand Khanship of. clauned by three Khans, 27 Rıse of separate Khanships 27 Destrue tion of their power by the Russians, 23 Political state of the, about the time of Babers birth, SS The language, S4 Overruo by the Isaizáks, ŠS1
- Kitin Kara Sultan 493
- Kitteli Beg, appointed to Sciram, S19 Beneged by the Uzbeks, S30 Calls in the Kaizáks, S30 Rebels against Báber, 395 Defeated, S35
- Kochin, or Konchi, a tribe of Chagliatai Moghuls, S6
- Koel taken by the Afghaos, 469 Retaken by Baber, 474
- Kohistán, or highlands of Kábul, described 218
- Kokiltásh See Gokaldásh
- Korkan a title, its meiniog 90 note.
- Krim, formation of the Khanship of, 28
- Kuch Beg his valour at the siege of Simarkand 155
- Kuchum Khan, voo of Abulkhur, elected supreme Khan of the Uzbeks S09 Invades Ferghana, S17 Dfeated by the Persians at the battle of Jám 492
- Kúl malek battle of, 322
- Kúl Nazer rebels against Báber, SS4
- Kuli Gokaltash (Mirza) accompanies Baber in his flight from Akhsi, 178
- Kumans (the) plains of the, added to the Moghul dominions, 13
- Kunduz, defended against Badi ez zeman by Khorrou, 96 105 Held independently by Khorrou 104 Taken by Mahmud Sultan 204 Given by Sheibani to Kamber-Bi, 226 Besieged by Khorrou 227
- Kuren (Sheikh) joins Baber, 446 Sent against Gualiar 453
- Kuth Khan of Etawa, joins the confederacy against Baller, 442
- Kutb Khan cotrusted with the fort of Mongeir, 502.
- Kuth Khan Afghán, in posse sion of 002

S66 His government, 371 Presented to Shah Beg 372

- Mahmud Khan Loháni, submits to Baher, 500
- Mahmád Khilji (Sultan) of Malwa, receives Jilal Khan, 410 Defeated by Rana Sanga, 461 451 Re stored to the throne of Malwa 480 His crown and girdle given to Baber, 485
- Mahmud Langa (Sultan) grandson of Sultan Kuth-ed-din his accession to the throne of Multan 387 Defeated hv his ministers, SS7 Division of his kingdom, 387 Raises an army to oppose Shah Hasan, 390 His death 390
- Mahmud Lodi (Sultan) Design to raise lim to the throne of Delhi 442 Aeknowledged hy Rana Singa, 451 462 His force against Baber at Kanwa, 471 Thes to Guyrat, 474 Crowned in Behar, 496, 497 kapid increase of his power, 498 His competitors for the throne, 499 Retreats on Babers approach 499 Takes refuge with the army of Bengal 500
- Mahmúd Matin Klinn hrings an army of Sammas against Shali Beg 364
- Mahmud Mirza (Sultan) son of Abusaid sovereign of Hissár His dominions, 74. Succeeds his brother in Suoarkand and Bokhara, 89 Intrigues to depose Baber 91 His death and character 92
- Mahmud Sultan brother of Sheihani Khan sent against Seiram, ISS Defeated and pardoned 139 Sent against Kunduz, 204 Occupies Kuoduz, 204 His death 204
- Mahter Sambal. See Sambal
- Malahida, a sect of hereucs. 287, note.
- Malek-shah Mansur Yusefzai marriage of his drughter with Baber 335
- Malık Bahan Jilwaoı. See Baban Jilwánı,
- Maluke Tewaif, or government of tribes, 405
- Malwa, under the Ghúri dvnastv, 404 Under Sultio Mahmud, 441 Power of Rana Sínga, 441
- Mamelukes, their origin 17 Usurp the governmeot of Egypt 17 Crrcassian Mamelukes, 18 Subdued by the Ottoman Turks, 18 Revival of the Mamelukes 18 Their fioal destruction by Muhammed Ali Pasha, 18
- Mán (Raja), of Guáliar, receives Jilal Khan, 410

- Manchus (the), a race of Tartars, 9 Their conquest of China, 11
- Mandraur, a division of Lamghan, 219 Mangu-Taimnr Khan, bestows the AL Ordo on Behader 26
- Manik Vazir, opposes Shah Hasan in crossing the Indus, 579 Slato SSO
- Manikchand Chohan, slain at the battle of Kanwa, 474
- Manjanils, used in sieges, $17
- Mankat Rai (Raja), attempts to expel the Musulmaus froio Gualiár 458
- Manselik, mother of loghlak Taimur, 39
- Mansur Khan, son of Sultan Ahmed Khan, Khao of the Moghuls, 191
- Mnrghinan (or Marghilan), district of Ferghana, 80 Town taken by Sultan Ahmed 87 Delivered to Baber, 116 Invested hy Uzun Hassan 116 Siege raised, 117 Declares for Baher, 171
- Marze-Viba (the), discase in Kandahár, 266 note
- Masud Mirza (Sultan), son of Sultan Mahmud Mirza, placed in Hissár, 92 Flies to his brother at Samarkand, 95 Returns to Hissár, 100 Invades Samarkand 100 Driven from Hissár by Khosrou, 142 200 Escapes to Herát, 142 200 Varries daughter of Sultan Husein, 200 Returns to Khosrou, 142 200 Blinded, 143 201
- Masikha territory of, 52 Conferred on Yunis Khan, 52 Bábers sojourn there, 164
- Masson's Travels," notice of, 222 note.
- Matchlocks, used hy Báber at Bajour, SS7
- Mátila (now Mir-pur), ravaged by the Baluches, S82
- Máwerannaher, or Transoxiana, overrun by Chengiz Khan, 12 Conquered by Taimur, 17 67 The Khaushp of 98 Separated from Moghulistáo 66 Its extent, 66 Extinction of the Titulnr Khans, 67 Becomes the portion Khanship 6S of Shihrulh Mirza 72 Overrun by Sheibáoi 189 The Uzbeks expelled from $16 $18 State of the countrv, 319 Religious zeal of the inhahitants, 320 Recovered hv the Uzheks, S26 List of the Chaghatai Khans of 540
- Mazıd Wajkeh (Mır) rebels against Baber, SS4
- Medioa Rao, chief of Chánderi, joins Rana Sáoga, 471 His power, 480 His history, 480 Besieged hy Báber

481 Slain at the capture of Chandéri, 483, note

- Mehdi Khwája (Syed), defeats Dáud Khan.493 His part at the battle of Sent with Humáyun Panipat, 436 against the Sherki confederates, 449 Threatened by Rána Sángo, 463 Joins Baber, 464 His part in the battle of Kanwa, 470 Married to a daughter of Babers, 514 526 Intrigue for placing him on the throne of Hindustán, 514 His arrogance, His fall. 516 515
- Mehdi Sultan, leaves Láber's service for Sliebáni s 145 Attacked by Báber, 307 Holds Cheghánian, 309 De feated and taken prisoner, 315 Put to death, 315
- Mehr, ravaged by the Balúches, 382
- Mehr nigár Khanum, daughter of Yúnis Khan, married to Sultan Ahmed Mirza, 248 Married to Sheibani Khan, 157 248 Divoreed, 158 248 Accompanies Shah Begum to H(rat, 297 Her residence at Kábul, 248 Báber's reception of her, 253 Accompanies Shah Begum to Badakhshán, 287 Her death, 288
- Mehroli, under the rule of Alimed Khan Mewáti, 405
- Merv, taken by Shali Beg 273 Battle of, 803 Laken by Obeid Khan, 457
- Meshhid, taken by Obeid Khan, 457 489
- Mewát, under Ahmed Khan, 405 Ravaged by Báber, 466 Reduced by Báber, 475
- Miánkál, submits to Báber, 149
- Milwát, besieged and taken by Báber, 429
- Mingelik Gokultásh, her escape from Samarkand, 157
- Mir, application of the title, 87 note
- Mirán Shah (Mírza), son of Taimur, hus share of Taimur s dominions, 72 Falls in battle, 72
- Miran Shali Mirza, son of Ulugh Beg, flies to Khosrou Shah, 201 Receives assistance from him, 201 His end incertain, 215
- Mirpúr See Mátila
- Mirza, application of the title, 87, note
- Mírza Khan, son of Sultan Mahmúd Mirza, accompanies Báber in his expedition to Kábul, 195 Demands the death of khosrou, 309
- Miskin Terkhán, leads an army into Multán 393 Marries a sister of Sultan Husein, 396
- Mobárck Shah, acknowledges Násir

Mirza, King of Badakhsháu, 228 Expels him, 229 Defeats the Arghuns, 342

- Moghul, or Mongol, grand race of Their conquests Tartars, 9 11 under Chengiz Khan, 12 Their excessive eruclty, 13 Their dissolutinn as one grand empire, 14 Ther religion, 18 61 Their principal tribes in the Chaghatái desert, 36 Division of the tribes on the death of Elias Separation of the tribes Khwaja, 41 on the murder of Faimur Oighur, 46 Reunited under Isan-bugha, 47 Resolt of those in the service of Baber, They join Támbol, 120 Un-120der the elder and younger Khans, defeated by Sheiháni Khan, 184 Discontent of the chiefs in the service Their conspiracy, of Báber, 283 Heir defeat, 286 Those in 284 Sheibáni's service desert the Uzbeks, 305 Their slaughter in Ferghána, Their treachers to Báher, 311 311 Their' conspiracy against him, 327 Obtain possession of Hissár, 328 Defeated by the Uzbeks, and expelled from Hissar, 329 Their Quelled. rebellion in Ghazni, 334 Their part in the battle of 935 Kanwa, 470 They form the Tulúglima, 470
  - Moglulustin, definition of, 36 Khanship of, 38 Invaded by Ulugli Beg, 44 Abandoned by the tribes, 46 Its conquest by Taimur, 72 List of the Khans of 537
  - Molub Alı Khan Khalifa, son of Kluwája Klialifa, married to Nahid Begum, 385 Sent to support Mír Abdal-nziz, 465
  - Mohib Ali Korchi, assists in the defince of Kabul, 250
  - Mohib Terkhán, his cruelty at Multán, 395
  - Mokim Argliún See Muliammed Mokim
  - Moncy of account, Baber's, 543-545
  - Mongeir, taken by Nasrat Shah, 502
  - Mongols See Moghuls
  - Moravia, overrun by the Moghuls, 13
- Moscow, taken by the Tartars, under Bátu Khan, 26
- Mou, taken by Shah Hasan, 388
- Moulána Kázi (Khwája), called also Moulána Muhammed Sadr, Sheikhul Islam, nvites Baber into Andeján, 86, and note Attempts inefficitually to make peace between Báber and Sultan Ahmed, 88 Intercedes for the life of Ibráhim Sáru,

93 Sent to Uzim Khan at Andejan, 107 Assists in defence of Andeján, 109 Is put to denth, 111 Bábers character of him, 111

- Mozeffer Hussein Mirza, appointed joint king of Khorásan, 210 Conquered by Sheibani, 259 His death, 260.
- Moreffer Shah of Gujrat, receives Jam Silah ed dan 360 Assists hum to gain the throne of Sind, 361 Assists hum against Shah Beg 368 Re exives Ahni Khan 423 Restores Sultan Mahmud to the throne of Malwa 450
- Nuliammed (Mir) conspires against Baber 3-7
- Multiannucl Ali Tengjeng supports Mir Abdal 2212 465 Ilis part in the battle of Kanon 470 Scot against the Sherki Afglians 479
- Muliamined Mi Pasha his destruction of the Mamelukes in Lgypt, 18
- Multimmed Mi Tijik, appointed by Bilker to Kila nur 4.0
- Muliammed Ikg on of Zulnun, defetted by the Sindians and slain, 312,
- Muhammed Berenduk Birlas, minister of Klinrisin 259
- Multunnicd Duldai (Sultan) aliandons Ivanauj 477
- Muhammed Ghus (Shcikh) a derwish, effects the surrender of Guilair, 454 Induces Rabindad to restore that fortress to Baber, 50"
- Muliamined Hailer Mirza Doglilat Amir of Kalighar 50 Driven out by Ababeker 57 Presented with the government of U h 58 Expelled 58
- Muhammed Hissari his conspiracy against Tambol 165
- Mulinmmed Humayun Mirza, See Humayun
- Muhanimed Husein Mirza Doghlat, son of Muhammed Huder Mirza re ceives the government of Uratippa Receives the title of " Korkan," 00 Lends Baber the village of Bi-90 Prepares to defend shager, 114 Uratippa against Sheibani Khan, 189 Abandons Uratippa 185 Joins Shei-His influence with báni Khan 188 the Moghuls at Samarkand, 281 His marriages, 234 Thes from Samar kand to Herat 286 Goes to Kabul, Is placed in charge of Kabul 237 by Baber 247 Joins in the rebellion of Shah Begum, 249 Secretes himself, 252 Is discovered and pardoned, 254 Allowed to go to Khorásán, 257

Received by Sheibani, 257 Put to death 257

- Muhammed Kazi (Moulana), his pre servation of Haider Mirza, 290 His interview with Baher, 292
- Muliamined Khan, son of Khizer Kliwája Khan, succeeds as Grand Khan, 49
- Muhammed Korehi, of Badaklishan, 228
- Muhammed Kuli Koeliin, his gallantry, 155
- Muhammed Maaruf (Shah), his defiction to Baber, 504
- Muhammed Mazid Terkhán, of Turkistan taken prisoner by Sultan Mahmúd, 63 Is muister of Sultan Ali Mírza, 128 Withdriws from Simarkrad, 140 Joins Weis Mirza, 129 Flies from him and offers his services to Baber, 129 Joins Baber at Yuratkhan 131 Accompanies him to Hissar, 141
- Muhammed Mírza (Sved), expels the Uzbeks from Ferghána, 310. His previous adventures, 310 311 Receives Sultan Saíd khan at Andejan, 316 Succeeds in saving the lives of 3 000 prisoners, 318
- Muhammed Mokim son of Zulnún Arghun seizes kabul, 210 216 274 Surrenders it to Baber 216 Retires to Germsir, 217 His invitation to Baber, 274 Submits to Sheibán, 277 Defeated by Baber at Kandahar, 278 Illes to Zemín-Dawer, 278 Calls in Sheibini, 279 Restored to his government, 282
- Muliammed Monim Mirza, son of Badiez zeman Mirza, his unsuccessful rebellion in Asterabád, 269 Put to dentil, 269
- Muliammed Shah (Sultan). See Behar Khan Loháni.
- Muliammed Sherif, the astrologer, arrives in Babers camp, 466 Dismissed by Baber, 473
- Muhammed Sultan (Khwaja), uncle of Sheibáni Khan, marries the widow of Burga, 136
- Muhammed Sultan (Sultan) son of Sultan Mahmud, left to defend Ferghúna, 183 Flies to Moghulistan after the disaster of Tashkend, 185 Flies on his father s death to the Kaizáks, 192
- Muhammed Sultan Mirza, sent with Humávun against the Sherki confederates, 449 Sent against Rána Sanga, 463 His part at the battle of Kanwa 470 Appointed to Laknau and Kanáuj, 477

004

- Muhammed Turkistáni (Mulla), delivers Kunduz to Sheibini Khan, 204
- Muhammed Zeitun joins the confideracy against Baber, 442 Surrenders Dhúl pur 453
- Milliammed Zemán Mirza, invested with the government of Behar 500 His part in the defeat of the Bengal army, 501 Marries a daughter of Baber, 525
- Muhammed zais, plundered by Baber, 339, note
- Multan views of Shah Hasan on, 984 State of the country, 386 First Muhimmedan conquest of, 3°6 Under the Hindus and under Dellu, 386 Sheikh Lu ef chosen ruler of, 386 Its extent, Minority of 357 Inctions, 387 the Sultan, 393 Anarchy, 393 Besteged by Shah Hasan, 394 Distress of the besuged 394 The city taken by storm 195 Pillaged, 395 Tvranny of the Arghun governor, 398 The country His expulsion 398 occupied hy Baber, 398 456 Its future revolutions 398, 399
- Munga Oighur, his generosity, 135
- Muri Saturgu, name of a truct of country 221
- Mur hid (Mulla) sent by Båher as nubassador to Sultan Ihrahim, 415 Detained hy Doulat Khan at Lahur, 410
- Mu tafs Ab a commander of the Persinn auxiliaries 315
- Mustify Lermuly sent against Behar Khan 112 113 Ilis death 113
- Mustafa Rumi at the battle of Kanwa, 172 At the battle on the Gogra 501
- Mustung conquered by 7 Ann 268
- More linan religion approduced into the De hit Kifichak, 26 – 1 irst dynasty in India, 402
- Nuler Shuh, notice of his conquests 6
- Naher Klinn son of Husan Klian Mewati, taken prisoner at Panipat, 162 Released by Laber, 162 Succeeds his futher in Mewat 475 Surreaders to Biber 176 Fiscapes 476
- Nahid Begum, drughter of Máh-chuchuk, 348 Marries Mahib Ah, 352 355
- Nanda (Jam) of Sind, his war with the Ar_ahuns 212 His death, 353 His extensive territory 359
- Nati'a Delir, submits to Shah Hasan,
- Nan, mhur a division of Lamglian, 219
- Naub Shah Sec Nasret Shah
- Nasir Khan Lohani, of Ghazipur, 409

Revolts ngunst Sultan Ibráhím, 412 443 Leads the Sherki confederates, 449 Put to flight by Humáyun, 450

- Násir Mirza, third brother of Báber, Committed to his incle Sultan 89 Ahmed, 89 Meets Baber at Aklisi, Appointed to the government 174 of Lamghan and Nijrow, 222 Invited to Badakhshan, 226 Joined by Khosron Shah, whom he shakes Becomes King of Badakhoff, 227 slián, 228 Driven from Badakhslián, and rejoins Baber at Kubul, 229 Appointed to Ghazni, 258 Appointed to Kandahar, 279 Besieged by Sheibani, 282 Capitulates, 282 Retires to Glinzni, 282 Appointed by Báber to Káhul and Ghazm, 319 Besieges Kubul, 334 His death from intemperance, 334
- Nusir-ed din Obeidulla (Khwája), lus account of Yúnis Khan, 60 Dictates a peace between Umersheikh, Ahmed Mirza, and Yunis Khinn, 62
- Nusret Shah, or Nusib Shuh, King of Bengal, 441 Loses several provinces to Schunder Lodi, 501 Retakes them, 501 Takes Mongeir, 502 Receives Sultan Mahmud, 502 Is defiated by Buber, 505 Makes peace 505
- Nusukh fort of, surprised and captured by Bálier, 113
- Nazer Mirza, his part in the Moghul conspiracy against Baber 327
- Nevian Gokultash Bábers foster-brother, 140 II is death, 163
- Nym Sini (Amir), minister of Shah Ismá I, joins Báber with the Persian troops, J23 Massaeres the garrison and inhabitants of Karshi, 324 Defated at Ghazhdewán, made prisoner and put to death, 325
- Nirchtu, or Kaliun, fort of, its strong position, 282, note
- Nizám Khan, of Biuna, joins the con federacy against Báher, 442 Besicged in Biána, 452 Defeats his brother Ahm Khan, 452 Surrenders to Báber, 453
- Nizám-ed-din Alimed Bakhshi, notice of 515 note
- Nizim-ed din Mír (or Khwaja) Ali Khalifi, Bahar's favourite officer, his escape at Uratippi, 94 Discharged by Mir Ali Dost, 127 Laft at Kabul with Muhammed Husein, 217 Defenus Kubul 250 His connection with Shahi Ha an, 385 Is Bibers in prime minister 385 His firmnes in B uber s difficulties, 467 Bring's Biber

news of reverses, 481 Declines to proceed to Badakbshán, 511 Wishes to set aside Humavun, 512 Intrigues in favour of Michdi kliwaja, 514 Returns to his alle_ctance, 516 Attends Baber s death-bed, 516

- Noukend, easth of, taken by Baber, 174
- Nukderis (the) join Baber near Kábul, 212 220 Their country, 220 263 Reduced hy Zulnun, 264 Plundered by Biber 354
- Nurgil, district of, included in Lamghan, 219
- Obeid Khan, of Bokhara. See Obeidulla Sultan
- Obeidulla Sultan, or Obeid Khan, of Eokhara nephew of Sheibani, carries off Sheibani's harem after the battle of Merv, 805 Holds Bokhura 309 Fortifies himself in Karshi, 315 Abundons the city, S15 Invades Bokharn S22 Defeats Baber at Kul-malek, 822 Totally defeats Báber and his allies at Ghazhdewán. S25 Invades Hussar, 328 Invades Khorasan, 457 489 Takes Merv, Sirikhs and Tus, 457 489 Seizes Takes Asterá-Mesbhid, 457 489 Besieges Herat, 489 bad 489 Dufented by the Persinns at Jam 491 Escapes from the field wounded, 492
- Observatory, Ulugh Beg , at Samarkand, 83 103
- Odes composed by Báber, 166
- Ogre, of fuble origin of the 13, note
- Orghurs (the) a tribe of Turks, acknowledge the sway of Chengiz, 12 Their reckless erucity gives rise to the name of " Ogre, 13 note.
- Oktái, or Ogatai, Khan, son of Chengiz, Ius dominious, 24 Acknowledged as Grand Khuu, 25
- Orda-Itzen, son of Juji Khan, presents 15 000 Tartar families to his brother Sheibani, 26
- Osmanlis, empire of the, foundation, 16 Its wide extent, 17 Shah Ismuels wars with them, 346 352
- Othman founder of the Ottoman empire 16
- Oud, under Sekander Lodi 406 Rehellion in, against Biber, 443 Under Sheikh Bayezid, 450
- Oxus, the river, the ancient boundary between Iran and Turán, S1, note
- Padmáwati widow of Rana Sanga, intingues to place his son on the throne, 498

- Padshah, Emperor, title assumed by Raber, 282
- Panipat, battle of, 485
- Pap fort of taken by Baber, 174
- Patiali, under Raja Pertab Sing, 405
- Pekin conquest of, by Chengiz Khan, 12
- Penjab, invaded by Baber, 354 Under the Ghaznevi dynasty, 408 Under the Ghurn, 403 Under Sultan Sekander, 406 Held by Doulat Khan, 419 Invaded by Baber 413 Parcelled out by Baber, 420 Entered by Doulat Khan, 421 Invaded by Sultan Ibruhim Lodi, 421 Union of the Afghans of the Penjab, 424.
- Penykorn, plundered by Baber, 388
- Perhaleh, taken by Baber, 415
- Perowlı Bırlás (Šultan), attacks Shah Beg at Futchpur, 347 ¿Defeated, 347
- Persua, government of the Turks es tablished in, 16 Anecdote illustrative of the barburous manners of the Persians in the time of Sbah Ismael, 304
- Pertab Sing (Raja), governs Kampila and Patiáli, 405
- Pesheng fortress of, its strength, 269 Zulnun retires to it, 269
- Peshkesh (the), sent by Báber to Shah Ismael 322 note
- Pigeon-training in the East, 75
- Pishin, conquered by Zulnun, 268
- Poetry, a fivourite pursuit in the East, S3 Specimen of Bábers, 164 Notice of his compositions 521
- Poles (the) conquered by the Mogbuls, 13 And by Batu, 26
- Poll tax (the), 580
- Post houses, established by Baber, 530
- Pul Málán, the river of Herát, 272, note.
- Pustal, the Imarat of, 520, note
- Ráberi, under Kuth Khan Afghán, 405 Taken by Báber, 448 Taken by the Afgháns, 469 Retaken by Báber, 476
- Radhan (Jam) his reign in Sind, 359, note

Rafin ed din (Sved), 459, note.

- Rahímdad captures the fort of Guáliar, 454 Restores it to Báber 507
- Rahmu dehris (the), a tribe, pardoned by Shah Hasan, 389
- Raika Begum wife of Baber, 526, note
- Raputs, their desperate warfare, 350 Their defeat in Sind SSI Their prowess under Rana Sanga, 464. Defeat Mir Ahdal aziz, 465 Their swarms of cavalry 466 Prepare for battle with Baber, 469 Their forces, 471 Completely defeated at Kanwa 473 Liver self sperifice at Chandler, 483

- Rnn mal Sodha, lus command in Sinil, 569
- Rantambór, surrendered in II der, 188
- Rázi ed din (Shah), the Chiragh Lush, his pos essinas near Khuthn 247 Ilcheaded, 291
- Renish Behader, entri ted with the government of Asterabid 189 De ferts the Persians, 190 Is defeated by Shah Lahmasp, and clain, 490
- Resalch & Walidich (the) versited by Baher, 521
- Revenue of Iluber (the) 530 511
- Robat Khwaja surprised by Habar 144
- R6hilkand, Bibers operations in 447
- Rubriquis, on the word Lartar 511
- Ruh alla (Sheikh) of Mon 389
- Rupec (the) name of coin, 511
- Russia, entificred by the Moghuls 13 26 Held by them for 150 years 14 Destroya the nover of the Lutture 28
- Ruttonsi (Ilinia) succeeds his fither Iliana Sanga, 485
- Saad ulla I aliúti (Mouluan) lux account of the sack of Multan, 306 uote
- Sadi (Sheikh), reference to 210
- Said Khan, or Sultan Suid, son of the Islian, lus war against # younger his uncle Mahmud, 191 His account of the conduct of Sheibaut on the death of his brother Mahnud Sultan. 204 His residence at Sumarkand Thes from Sunarkand, 236 231 Bábers kindness to hun 256 Visits Ikhan Murza at Kula zefer, 289 Proceeds to Kaluil, 289 Visited by Haider Mirza 292 Ilis character of Baher, 291 Declines the offer of the Moghuls to place hun on the throne, Appointed to Andejan, 912 311 Received there hy Syed Muhammed, Defents Absolver, 318 316 Invades Fashkend, 330 Is defe ited and wounded, 330 Defends Lergham, Calls in Kusim Islian, the chief 930 of the Kaizaks, 331 Visits Kásun Khan, 332 Abandons Fergham, 332 Expels Ababeker from Kashgur, 332 Ilis long and prosperous rule, 332 His quarrel with Khan Mirza 339 Invades Badakhshan, but retires, 311 Called in to Badakhshan, 509 Besteges Kila zefer, but retires, 510
- Said Khan, governor of Oud, driven out of Oud, 409
- Samarkand, invaded by Sultan Malimud, 96 Attacked at once hy three dif-firent princes 99 Who withdraw, 10) Again blockaded by Bub r 101 Abandoned by Bayesinghar 101 Ocenpied by Hiber, 105 Biber 4 ac-enant of 107 Its fertility 105 Manufictures 106 Learning and skill, 107 Aliandored by False, Attempt to remain it. 113 110 Occupied by Sultan Ali 114 1 11success fully invaded by Wess Mirza 129 Ibler matches a uns it 127 Sheilonis invation 1.1.110 In florner of its tell to is them. 1°1 Taken by Socilian LIL Suppose 1 and taken by Baber 137 Beaund by Shullani 17 Surrend rs to him, 157 Held by Tarour Silan ູດາ Taken by Habe 11 Joy of the population all laber proelumed King the slo Min fored by Haber ---

- Sanbal (Mahi ) his play to deliver his matter Shah Lep from proto 315 Succeeds 115 Throws provisions into Kandahar 155 Asia Jura Liror of Sind 374 Proceeds to betugs Dirarel 12
- Sambhal under Dieta Klain Loch 155 Beite, ed by Balina Jilwani 317 Joken by Hindo B.s. 449
- Samuas (the) explishe Sumras from Sind 358 Lemmation of their rule in Sind 370
- Suga (Itana) his power in Malwa 441 Takes the fort of Kandar, 415 11:1 progress of conquest 4"1 Acknowledges Sultan Mahimud 451 152 His dominions, IGL - His jurson and character, 161 His allead descert from Nushirwan the Just 461 note His transactions with Baber 172 Ilis transaction. Mutual recrimination, 162 Lies 162 II. advances to Biann 162. Joined by Ha an Khun Meliwati 163 Promiss of hus Reputs 164 His army 171 Completely defeated at Kuuwa 473 I scopes from the battle 174 Invited in Malwa, 180 His cluvalrous con-His romantic death 494 duct 181
- Sanjer (Jaui), his reign in Sind, 250, note
- Surang Khun a communder of Silah eddin in Siad 569
- Satelnush Khatun, chuf wife of I anhugh ( 39
- Schaktegin a Furki shive, sovereign of Ghizni 16
- Seliwan reduced by Shah Log 366 The fort strengthened by Shah Beg, 370

- Seirám, invaded by the Moghuls, 47 Bestowed on Kitteh Beg, 319
- Schander (Mirza), his account of Báber s defeat at Kul-malel, 322, note His necount of the battle of Ghazhdewán, S26
- Sekander Lodi (Sultan) his long reign at Delhi, 406 Suhdues Behár 406 Threatens Bengal, 406 Extends his empire, 406 His death, 407, ncte

Selander Shah, King of Gujrat, 441

- Sehm (Sultan), his war with Shah Is mael, 352
- Selima Sultan Begum, daughter of Baber, 526
- Seljukis, a tribe of Turks, their conquests, 16 Their government over turned by Chengiz, 16
- Senjer Birlas (Sultan), engaged in the conspiracy against Baber, 249 Seized, and pardoned, 252
- Seratehnk, Toktamish placed on the throne of, 27
- Sewrai, fort of taken by Shah Hasan, nnd razed to the ground, 388
- Shali, a title bestowed on holv men, 87, note
- Shah Beg See Shah Shujáa Beg
- Shah Begum wife of Junis Khan, repairs to Samarkand, 234 Her relationship to Sheibáni, 234 character, 235 Sent to Kl Her Sent to Khorásán, 236 Arrives at Herat, 237 Resides nt Kabul, 248 Intrigues in favour of her grandson, Sultan Weis, 249 Gaios the Moghuls, 249 I oduces Muhummed Husein Mirza to join the rebels, 249 Forgiven by Baber, 253 His kindness to her, 256 Accom-panies her grandson, Khan Mirza, to Badakhshan, 282 Her boasted descent from Alexander the Great 286 Her imprisonment and death, 288

Shah Sufi, his vilour at Samarkand, 155 Shahi Beg See Sheibani.

- Shahnama, the poem, the universal taste for, 53
- Shahrokhia, district north of the Sirr, 93 Invaded and ravaged hy Sheibam 163
- Shahrukh Khan Afshar a commander of the Kezelbashes with Baber, S15
- Shahrukh Uirza, son of Taimur Ling of Khorisin 45 Brings up Lunis Khan, 45 Civil wars at his death, 47
- Shahrukh Sultan Moherdar commander of the troops sent by Shah Ismael to Baber, 515

Shahrukhi coin, the value of 414,  $\pi o'e$ Shiyra ul Atrak, secount given in, of the origin of the Aimáks, 221, note. Notice of, 535

- Shál, conquered hy Zulnun, 268 342.
- Shamu-Lhail (the), plundered by Báher, 339
- Sheliáh ed din Mubammed Ghúri, founder of the Ghuri dynasty in India, 403 His conquest of India, 439
- Sheher-banu Begum, daughter of Báber, 526
- Sheibal. Khan, reference to his death in Merv, 256
- Sheibani, son of Júji Khan, his dominions, 26
- Sheibani Khan, or Sháhi Beg son of Shah Bidagh and grandson of Abulkhaır, S2 Notice of his early life, Leaves his father-land, 133 133 Received at Bokhára by Abdal Alı Terkhan, 194 Growth of his power, 134 Surprises and slays Burga Sultan, 135 Betravs Sultan Obtains Turkistán, Ahmed, 186 His faithlessness, 137 63 137 Τe supported by Sultan Mahmúd, 139 Overruns Transoviana, 139 Joined hy Báhers Uzbeks, 100 Assists Bayesanghar, 103 Returns to Turkistán 104 Defeats the Terkháns, 191 Takes Bokhara, 133 140, and SamarLand 141 Loses Samarkand, Retires to Bokhára, 149 147 Advances towards Samarkand, 150 Takes the fort of Dabusi, 150 Defeats Báber on the Kohik, 151 Blockades Samarkand, 153 Whieh capitulates, 157 Marries Khanzadeh Begum, 157 Ravages ShahroLhia nnd Beshkent 163 Advances towards Defeats the Moghuls, Fergháos, 183 184 Takes the two Khans prisoners, 184 Conquers TashLend. 184 Marries 10to the family of the Khans, 185 Releases the Khans, Puts Kwaja Abul Makáram 185 to death 186 Invades Hissar 186 And Andejan, 187 Takes it, and puts Tambol and his brother to death, 188 Takes Hissar, 203 Sends his brother Mahmud against Kunduz, 204 Kunduz taken, 204 His ternness and composure on hearing the death of his brother, 205 Returns to Samarkand, 206 Prepares to ottick Khwarazm 206 His troops defiated in Badaklishan by Nasir Mirza, 22° His future projects, 233 Sots out for Khwarazm 235 Destrovs or disperses the Moghul chief« 236 Besieges and takes Kliwarazm 237 Besieges and takes Balkh, 238

- Receives Muhammed Husein 241Mirza, 257 Puts him to death, 257 Invades and conquers Khorasán, 258 Extent of his dominion«, 261 260 Receives the submission of Zúlnún's Besieges Kandahar, 279 sons, 277 Takes the city, 281 Completes the conquest of Khorásán, 295 Unsuccessful campaign against the Kaizáks, Campugn against the Hazáras, 296 His reception of an envoy from 297 Shah Ismael of Persia, 298 The He retires to Sliah's reply, 299 Mcrv. 301 Defeated and slain at tho battle of Merv, 303 His body dis-membered and his skull formed into a drinking cup, 304
- Slicikhem Mirza, governor of Karshi, put to death 324
- Sheikh-ul-Islám, office of, 86 Of Ilerat, murdered by Slinh Ismáel, 321
- Sheikh zada, of Oud and Laknau, 408
- Shemsubád, taken by the confiderate Af_háns, 485 Given by Baber to Rána Bikermajit, 488
- Shems-ed din (Khwája), appointed governor of Multán 397 His erueltics, 397 His expulsion, 398
- Shemshir Khan, expels the Arghúns from Multan 398
- Sherfeddin Ali Shirazi (Moulana), lustorian of Taimur, Yúnis Khan placed under his care, 45
- Shins, their a cendancy in Persia, 299 Budge of the sect 320
- Shir Khan, son of Ala-ed din, sent by his father to confer with Doulat and Ghazi Khan 425
- Shir Khan Sur, has the chief management of Behar 497 Occupies Benáres, 498 Tenders his submission to Biber, 500
- Shir Muhammed Khan, Grand Khan of Moghnlistan 43
- Shir Shah See Shir Khan Sur
- Shirim Chehren his defence of Hissár, 203 His capitulation, 203
- Shiram Taghin kent to conduct Khosrou Shah towards Khora an 214 Plans his cizure 214 Brings Babers family to Kabul, 214 Rebels against Baber 334 Is pardoned, 335 His death, 335
- Shirim Ziker, minister of Ahdal rizak of Kabul, 215 Is murdered, 215
- Shirkch Arghún routed and taken prisoner by Biber, 211
- Shujin Beg (Sinh) or Shah Beg, son of Julnun Peg his valour when a boy, 269 Appointed to defend Kan

dahár, 269 His unsuccessful attempt to surprise Sultan Husein, 270 Takes Succeeds his father at Merv, 279 Kandahár, 261 Invites Báber, 275 Submits to Sheibáni, 277 Defcated by Báber at the battle of Kandahár, Thes to Shal and Mustung, 278 278 Recovers Kandaliár, 282 His Takes talents and character, 341 Siwi, 342 Loscs it, 342 Submits to Shali Ismáel, 344 Sends a mission to conciliate Baber, 344 Repairs to Herát, 344 Is unprisoned, 344 His escape, 346 Turns his views Takes Sini, 347 towards Sind, 346 Defcats Sultan Perowh, 347 Returns to Kandahár, 348 Receives his brother's daughter, Máh chuchak, 351 Attacked by Báber, who retires, 352 Plunders part of Sind, 359 Quarrels with his son, Shah Hasan, who flies to Báber, 354 Takes possession of Sind, 355 Cedes Kandahár to Báber, 355 Departs for Shal and Siwi, Is invited to Sind, 363 355 Advances to Tatta, 364 Defcats the Sindis, and takes Tatta, 365 His treaty with Jám Tiroz, 366 Reduces Schwan 366 Defeats the Sindis. 367 Sends his son Shah Hasan, to assist Jam Tiróz, 368 Strengthens his forts, 370 Orders the murder of the Dharicha elucis at Bhcker 373 Makes Blicker his capital 374 Settles the country, 375 Massacres the Balúches, 375 Deeply affected by the death of Mir Fazil, 375 His death, 376 His character, 376

- Shujaa, or Shujaa ul-moolk, Bokhári (Sheikh), minister of Sultan Mahmud Langa, 390 Governs Multán during the minority of his son, 393 Put to death by the Arghúns, 398
- Stálkot tal en by Baber, 416 Given to Khosrou Gokuldásli, 420 Unsuccessfully attacked by Doulat Khan, 421
- Sidim Ali Derbán, a Hazára chief, his retainer, beaten to death for plundering, 213
- Silah ed din, chief of Blulsa, at the battle of Kanwa, 471
- Silah ed-din (Jam), aspires to the throne of Sind, 360 Thes to Gujrát, 360 Invited to the government, 361 Ascends the throne 361 Abandons his enpit h, and retires to Gujrát, 362 Suzes the capital, 368 Is defeated and shain, 369

Silesia overrin by the Moghuls, 13 26 Sind, civil wars in, 353 Shah Beg

- projects the invasion of 35% Sub jugated by Shah Beg 355 Its extent under Jám Nanda, 358 Confederacy of the tribes against Shah Beg 366 Seized by Silah ed-din, 368 Com mencement of the Arghun rule in, 370 S81 Sind extended to the Ghara, 391 Extent of the kingdom under Shah Hasan 400
- Sipehra Rai. Sie Kuth-eil din
- Sirakhs, taken by the Uzbuks, 457
- Sir e-tak, pass of, Baber s passage of the, 145
- Sirhind, under Behlul Lodi, 405 Under Tatar Khan, 418
- Sur (the), or Seihun (Jazartes), its course, 79
- Sistan, bestowed on Badi ez zeman 271 Bestowed on Amir Suitan Mi, 273 Invaded by a son of Sultan Huscin 278
- Siúnjek Khan, son of Kuchum Khan, gorerns Tashlend, 309 Invades I er ghána, 317 Takes Tashkend 330 Defeats Sultan Said, 330 Obtains possession of Andejan, 352
- Siw, or Siwistan, the fort taken by Shah Beg S42 Retaken by the Jam of Sud, S42. Position of the country, S47 The town taken by Shah Beg, S47 Visited by Shah Hasan, S53
- Sogdiana, probably the modern Soghd, 106
- Soghd, river and district of SamarLand, 105 Taimur's garden at, 106 Submils to Baber, 149
- Sohell (Canopus), the star, first seen by Báber, 211
- Suleimán Mirza, son of Weis Sultan, or Kban Mirza, 341 Appoioted King of Badakhshán 511 His ancestre, 511 Assumes the government, 512
- Sultan mgár Khanum, wife of Sultan Mahmud 248 Afterwards married to two Uzbek Khans in succession, 249
- Sultanpúr assigned to Doulat Khan, 419 Given to his soo Dilawer Khan, 420. Seized by Doulat Khan, 421
- Sumras (the), a native tribe governing Sind, 358
- Sunnis, persecuted by Shah Ismael of Persia, in Khorasan, 305 320 Their detestation of the Shias, 320
- Sarkhab, the river, 207
- Swad, the Dilazaks expelled from, 337
- Sred Alı (Amír) grandson of Kbodaidád, becomes master of Káshghar, 46 Receives Lan-bugha Khan, 46
   Is attacked by Yúois Khan, 51

- Whom he defeats 52 His gener us conduct, 52 His death 52
- Sted dynasty (the) in India 'of
- Stedpur, taken, and the part tan just to the sword by Palart 117
- Syeds (the) of Bheker their 10, 10 cr 371 I orce I to qui' the t who at
- Syria re-establishing tofit Turkie minion in, 17
- Syurghatmich titul r Grand 1 3 m ef the Moghada 64
- Taher Duldas povemor of Dirac La reception of Lab - 1 S
- Tahimasp (Stah) success to the theory of Persia, 17° Atta Liff for the Unlock, 160° Define Rer (51° Life, 16° Atta hider, 460° Advances to Minial 400° Definits the Unlock in Jami
- Taimur (Mir), or famirful h enquests 1" His into d in 5 Ir ¹/s 21 Table of his high (-1) His interference in Kipchel, -" Hear) vasions into the Dicht Jertch, 11 His hirthplace 65. His dec rt, -2 His claim to the office of Le clita e prime minister, "O Que tran of the authenticity of his His inter 77 neer His creat talents 71. His y c empire at his death "22.
  - Taimur Beg son of Shithau matricea princess of the family of the Khar, 185
  - Taimur Kutluk, Grand Khan of Kipchik 27
  - Taimur Oighur, assi sinated by Lun _bugha, 46
  - Taimur Sultan, son of Sheibani marries a daughter of Shah Bigum, 17 Flies after the hattle of Merr 30 Holds Samarkand 300 D feated by Baber in Hissar 314 Present at the battle of Ghyddew in, 325
  - Taishi title of the Chief of the Kalimaks 30, note
  - Tajura, the old capital of Memat, 175
  - Taj ed din Muhammed (Klim ija) his interview with the dving Sultan Ahmed, 190
  - Tajik, a townsmin or peasint, as distinguished from a tribe man, 20 Sl, note Those of Kabul, 220
  - Takerabád, hattle of, between the Persians and Uzbeks, 301
  - Tambol (Sultan Ahmed) u Moghul nobleman, 107 Descrits from Baber, 107 Heads a party in fivour of Jehangir, 107 109 Besieges Blaber in Marghinán, 116 Rutreats to Ush 117 Driven from Ush by

Retires to Urthe inhabitants, 118 Joins Hähers revolted kend, 118 Moghuls, 120 Defaats Kasim Beg, Fureatens Audeján, 121, 122 120 Defeated by Illiber, 123 Aided by Sultan Mahmúd, 121 Marches to Kásán, 125 Retreats to Arkhum, Proceeds to Heshkaran, 125 125 Makes peace with Baber, 126 His connection with Mir Ali Dost, 129 Leads his army against the "clder ' Khan, 165 Retires, 165 Attacked by both Khans at Akhsi, 170 Surprises and wounds Haber, 172 Attempts to gain Haber, 174 Asks aid of Sheibáni, 175 Ocenpies Akhsi, 176 Drives out Baber, 177 Besieged in Andejan by Sheibáni, 187 Surrenders and is put to death, 189

- Tamerlane See Taunur (Mir)
- Fanka (the), coin, its value, 511
- Turaz, Isan bugha's defeat at, 47
- Tarikhi Reshidi, of Haider Mirza, no tice of, 192, note
- Tartars, their conquest of India under Buher G Position of their country, Origin of the name Tartar, or 8 Tátár, 9 533 Their manners and Their government, 11 customs, 10 Their settlement in tribes, or as adventurers, 19 Empire of Chengiz, Its division on his death, 24 The Grand Khans, 25 24 Order of succession to the Khanship, 25 Their ravages in Europe under Bátu Their adoption of the Khan, 26 Musulman faith in Kipehák, 26 Their races and origin 533, et seq
- Táshkend, invaded by Isan-bugha, 47 Conquered by Sheibáni, 185 Under Siúnjek, 309 Bestowed by Baber on Mir Ahmed Kasım Kohbur, 319 Attacked by the Urbeks 322 Be steged and taken by Stúnjek, 330 Invaded by Sultan Said, 390 Laid waste by Kásım Khan, 331
- Tátár See Tartar
- Tutár Gaker, defeated and slain by his brother, Hatı Galer, 415
- Tatár-Hazára, the tribe of, 221, note
- Tátár Khan, holds Sirhind, 419
- Tátár Khan, son of Alá ed din, joins his father at the court of Gujrat, 431
- Tatár Khan Sarang khám, joins the eonfederacy against Báber, 442 Holds Guáliar, 453 Invites Báber, 459 Loses Guáhár, 454
- Latta, capital of Sind, taken by Shah Beg 355 Sacked by Shah Beg, 365 Seized by Siláli ed-dín, 368 Taken by Shah Hasan, 380

- Taxes, increased by Baber, 488 538
- Tekril, a tribe of Chaghatái Moghuls, 36
- Templin, or 'stamp tax, given up by Báber to the Musulmans, 167
- Terdi Hig, attends at Baber's denth bed, 516
- Lerklinn chiefs, their power 97 Proelaim Sultan Ali Mirza king of Samarkand, and dethrone Il iyesanghar, 97 Those of Bokhára defeated by Sheihani, 131
- Lika sakaratha, battle of 59
- Toylilak dynasty (the), in India, 401 Toglilak-Taimur Khan, his history, 39 Becomes Khan of Moghulistan and Kashghar, 40 Is converted to Mulham-Conquers Maweranmedanism, 10 nalter, 40
- Tokhteh hugha, Sultan, son of the vounger Khan, with Baber at Kábul, 256
- Toktamish, Grand Khan of Kipchak, 27
- Transoxiana See Máwerannaher
- Tugh, or horsetail standard, conferred on Zulnún 265
- Tuli, son of Chengiz, China allotted to lum, 24
- Tuhighmeh, the charge of the, 495
- Tulun Beg, a partisan of Baber s, taken and put to death 109
- Tumán Kutluk Uglan, Grand Khan, 68
- Tumana Khan, the Altamgha of, covenaut, 70
- Tumluq, or Tutluq, the battle of, 318 Tungus, n race of Tartars, 9
- Turk, n race of Tartars, 9 Their range, 15 Their influence, 15 Found Nast exthe Ottoman empire, 16 tent of country subject to their In Egypt as Mamedominion, 17 Their religion, 18 lukes, 18 Their language, 20 Distinguished from the Fájiks, 20 Origin of the name, 535
- Turki, langunge in use in Persia, &c., 20 Spoken in purity in Fergliana, 81
- Turkistán, seized by Sultan Mahmud, and conferred on Sheibani, 63 Under Kuehum Khan, 309
- Turlomán Hazúras, plundered by Baber, 246
- Tus taken by the Uzbeks, 457 499
- Tuzák, "Institutes" of Taimur, their claim to authenticity, 71, note
- Ueh taken and pullaged by Shah Hasan, 390 The fort rebuilt 391

- Udi Sing (Rául), of Dongerpoor, his force at Kanwa, 471 Slain in the battle, 473
- Ulugh Beg Mirza, son of Shabrukh Mirza, Sultan of Samarkand, invades Moghulistán, 44 Murders the Moghul chiefs at Dizak, 45 His wars with his sons, 47 Protects Abusaid 73 His Astronomical Tables, 72 ES note 105 and note.
- Llugh Beg Mirza (Sultan) son of Abusaid, sovereign of Kabul and Gharm 74 77 His death, 215
- Ulus or tribe 19 24
- Llús begi, ' Director of the tribe, an hereditary office, 49
- Umersheikli Mirza (Sultan) father of Baber, succeeds to Indeján and Ferghann 54 "4 Marries a daughter of Yunis Khan, 54 74 His am button and restlessness, 59-74 Definted by Yunis Khan, 59 The Khan's generosity to him, 59 Gains possession of Lratippa, 64-75 His dominions invaded by Sultans Mahmud and Ahmed 75 Ilis singular death 75 His children, 76
- Uratippa, or Ushrushna, given up to Umersheikh 64 75 Taken by Umersheikh 64 75 Sultan Ahmed, 67 T Taken by Sultan Mahmud, 90 94 Destowed upon Muhammed Husein Mirza Doghlat 90 Unsuccessfully invaded by Baber 94 Bestowed on Baber by Sultan Mahmud, but not given up by Muhammed Husein 160 Ra valed by Sheibani, 165 ToLen by Shuibani 185
- Urkend or Uzkend, submits to Baber, 171
- Urus Khan, Grand Khan of Kipchak,
- I h adstrict of Fergham, 58 80 1 gred to Uncerthickly 54 Under the government of Tambol 117 De clares for Baber, 114 Threatened Ly the Meghals 121 The fortress scribs khalil 130 Surprised and thinks Labor, 170
- Usher fort of taken by Sultan Mah nud e
- Lal Mi Kuli compands Babirs ertificity it the bat he of Kanwa, 470 S int Kuram aso Ind on the
- the first first and the of the of the of the first first and the first and the of the t we chathel at they. to the same of the
- A C C F F cat intasion of Our nef thur

name, 26 28 Introduced by Tain ur into Kipchák, 28 Their union with the Turki tribes, 28 Governed by Abulkhair, 29 Secession of the Kaizaks, 29 Governed by Baruj Ughlan Dispersed by the Kaizaks, 92 30 Reunite under Sheibam Khan, 64 Occupy Samarkand, 140 Destroy Keshtud 144 Driven out by Baber, Defeat Baber on the Koluk 147 Blockadı of Samarkand, 153-152 1.57 Their various successes under Sheibani 163-503 Their conster nation at his death, "05 Great numbers put to death at Merr 305 Retire from Khorasan, 305 Their state at that time, 309 Raise Kuchum to the dignity of Lhnn 309 Make peace with Shah Ismacl, 309 Expelled from Ferghann 310 attack Baber 315 Their defeat, 314 Expelled from Transoxinna, S16 Besiege and take Kusan, 317 Expelled from Mawerrannaher, 318 Driven back to Turkistin and the Desert, 519 Invade Iransoxiana $22 Defeat Baber at Kulmalck, 322 Attack Hissar, 323 Their massacre at Karshi 924 DLfeat Baber and the Persians at Ghazlidewan 325 Recover frameoxiana, 326 Ravage Khorasan, 326 Recover Hissar and Tashkend, 530 Put Kasim Gokultash to death 351 Besuge Balkh, 423 450 Invade Khorasan, 457 Besiege Herut, 457 Take Mery Shirakhs Meshhud and Tus, 457 Their transactions in Khorasan 489 Defeated with great slaughter by the Persians at Jam, 491 They recover their losses, 493

- Lz Toimur Taishi of the Kalimaks his invasion of the Uzbek country, 30, note
- Lzun Hassan governor of Akhsi sets up Jehangir 10" Besieges Andejan 109 Inkes the city 110 In vests Marghinan 116 Retreats 117 Surrenders Allisi to Biber 119 Retires to Hissar, 119 Joins Baber at Samarkand, 157
- Va co de Gama, his arrival in Irdia. 113 rce
- Velice rispufacture of in Simurkard, 10,

Vienna threatered by the Moghul 13 Vi its in the 1 ast, ceremonials ob eried

17 129 + 1

------

Zulnun Beg Arghun (Mir), his descent, 262, note His early life, 262 Repurs to Herat, 262 Appointed by Sultan Husein Mirza, governor of Ghur, 263 Reduces the Hazaras and Nukderis, 264 Made governor of Zemin Duwer and Farrah, 264 Honoured with the Tugh, 265 Recalled to court, 265 Attaches lumsulf to Badi ez zeman 265 Appointed to kandahír 215 220, 266 Leaves Herát privately, 267 Arrives at Kandahár, 267 Receives Badi ezremán, 199 268 Attacked by Sultan Husein, 269 Invades Khorasán, 271 Besieges Herát, 272 Peace concluded, 273 Defeats Ibn Husein Mirza, 273 His high reputation, 274 His advice to his son Mokím, 216 Becomes prime minister of Herat, 275 Entitled "Hezcher Alla," or "I ion of God," 275 Defeated, made prisoner, and slain by Sheibani, 259 275 His charaeter, as given by Baber, 275

END OF THE FIRST VOLUME